INTRO — Archive Before Oblivion

This book is not meant to be a clean textbook, a skeptical takedown, or a neatly domesticated encyclopedia of “weird stuff” that only becomes acceptable once it has been sterilized by academic approval. This book is a preservation chamber, a psychic storage vault, a working pile of fragments gathered before they vanish again into dead links, collapsed websites, forgotten PDFs, deleted boards, corrupted archives, and the endless digital rot that eats the strange edges of the internet first. What is collected here is intentionally uneven because the hidden record is uneven: folklore, screenshots, dark-web image dumps, occult files, folk creature lore, conspiracy memes, Book of Shadows material, witchcraft fragments, internet-era spellcraft, monster traditions, and strange cultural residue all placed together because the deeper work is not always about separating everything into safe little categories, but about noticing what keeps repeating across time. Fairies, vampires, werewolves, and zombies are not merely Halloween decorations; they are ancient human attempts to describe contact with the nonhuman, the infected, the liminal, the shapeshifting, the dead-who-will-not-stay-dead, the beautiful trap, the night predator, the forest intelligence, the cursed bloodline, the stolen child, the hungry corpse, the animal self, the body under spiritual pressure. The Internet Book of Shadows is not just “old Wiccan files”; it is a record of early digital magick communities trying to preserve ritual knowledge before modern platforms swallowed the web. The Hack Library material is not just a pile of conspiracy pictures; it is a fossil layer of underground internet consciousness, part warning system, part meme-grimoire, part paranoia engine, part forbidden scrapbook, full of signals that may be false, true, distorted, symbolic, weaponized, or accidentally profound. This book exists because information disappears, and when dealing with occult history, folklore, dark-web archives, fringe research, and suppressed traditions, disappearance is not neutral. Sometimes things vanish because they are garbage. Sometimes they vanish because nobody cared. Sometimes they vanish because the people who understood their value were too scattered to save them. And sometimes they vanish because the world has always had mechanisms for burying knowledge that makes reality feel too alive, too haunted, too enchanted, too dangerous, or too hard to control. The goal here is not to believe everything blindly, but it is also not to kneel before the modern reflex that says nothing exists unless a white man in a lab coat measured it, peer-reviewed it, and gave everyone permission to think about it. That attitude has its uses when building bridges, medicine, and machines, but it is not the only way humans have ever known things. Folk memory, ritual testimony, oral tradition, dream encounter, repeated symbol, ancestral warning, body sensation, trance experience, and cross-cultural pattern recognition are also forms of data, especially in the territories where the subject is not a chemical reaction but an encounter. So this book begins from a different posture: open-eyed, not gullible; skeptical, not dead inside; curious, not flattened; willing to ask whether the monster is literal, spiritual, psychological, biological, interdimensional, memetic, ancestral, or all of these at once. This is a lumped-together book because the archive itself demanded survival before polish. It is a bundle made while going deeper, a capture-net thrown over endangered materials before they slip out of reach, a rough grimoire of saved signals that can later be decoded, cross-referenced, purified, expanded, challenged, and integrated. It is not the final temple; it is the recovered stone pile. It is not the finished map; it is the box of forbidden compass parts. It is not here to make the strange smaller. It is here to keep the strange alive long enough for the real investigation to begin.

FAIRIES, VAMPIRES, WEREWOLVES, ZOMBIES — The Old Bloodlines of the Unexplained

Before these beings were flattened into movie monsters, costumes, and easy metaphors, they existed as living categories within human reality—feared, respected, negotiated with, and recorded across cultures that had no contact with each other, yet described eerily similar phenomena. The fairy was never originally the tiny winged cartoon figure; in older European traditions, especially within the Celtic Sidhe, these were powerful, territorial intelligences tied to land, mounds, forests, and thresholds—neither fully benevolent nor evil, but operating on a different moral architecture entirely. They were known for abducting humans, replacing children with changelings, distorting time (a night in their realm becoming years outside), and punishing disrespect toward sacred places. These accounts weren't told as entertainment—they were warnings embedded into cultural behavior: don't step into the wrong hill, don't eat their food, don't accept gifts lightly, don't mock what you don't understand. Move eastward and the archetype mutates but persists: the Djinn, beings of smokeless fire described in pre-Islamic and Islamic texts, capable of invisibility, possession, shapeshifting, and influence over human thought and environment; again, not purely evil, but deeply unpredictable and bound to laws unfamiliar to human systems. Across continents, indigenous traditions speak of forest spirits, trickster entities, and hidden races coexisting just outside ordinary perception, suggesting that the "fairy" category may be less about wings and more about a long-standing human interface with nonhuman intelligences that occupy overlapping space.

The vampire, often dismissed today as gothic fantasy, emerges historically from deep anxieties surrounding death, disease, and the boundary between life and decay, but the consistency of the accounts goes beyond simple metaphor. In Eastern European folklore, especially within Slavic regions, the dead were sometimes believed to rise not as ghosts but as physical entities that fed on the living, spreading illness and draining vitality. The term Strigoi referred to restless spirits or reanimated corpses, often blamed for unexplained deaths within communities. These beliefs became so widespread that they triggered actual investigations in the 17th and 18th centuries, including documented exhumations where bodies were found in states people interpreted as "undead" (in reality, natural decomposition can produce bloating, blood seepage, and movement of fluids that look disturbingly lifelike). But what's more interesting is not just the misunderstanding of decay—it's the repeated pattern of describing beings that feed on life-force, whether physical blood or something more subtle. Even outside Europe, similar archetypes appear: energy-draining entities, night visitors, seducers, parasitic spirits. Over time, the vampire evolved into a symbol of forbidden desire, immortality, and predation, but its roots remain tied to the fear—and possible experience—of something that does not die cleanly and does not leave the living alone.

Werewolves represent another layer of this ancient pattern: the merging of human and animal, the loss (or transformation) of identity, and the idea that something within the human being can cross into a more primal, violent form. In medieval Europe, accusations of lycanthropy were not just stories but legal cases; individuals were tried for allegedly transforming into wolves and committing acts of violence. One of the most famous examples is Peter Stumpp, a 16th-century man executed after confessing (under torture) to being a werewolf who killed and consumed victims. While modern interpretation points to hysteria, mental illness, or forced confession, the persistence of shapeshifting myths across cultures suggests something deeper: the human awareness of dual nature, or possibly altered states where identity fractures into something else. In other traditions, shapeshifting is not a curse but a skill—seen in shamanic practices where practitioners “become” animals in trance states. The werewolf, then, sits at the intersection of fear and power: the uncontrollable beast within versus the deliberate transformation of consciousness.

Zombies, often reduced to modern apocalypse fiction, trace back most clearly to Haitian Vodou traditions, where the zombie was not a flesh-eating monster but a person stripped of will, controlled through spiritual or chemical means. The concept of Vodou zombies involves the idea that a bokor (sorcerer) could induce a death-like state and then revive the individual into a state of submission, effectively turning them into a living shell. Ethnobotanical research has suggested that certain toxins (like tetrodotoxin) could produce paralysis and mimic death, fueling these legends. But again, the symbolic layer is just as important: the zombie represents the loss of agency, the body continuing without the self. When translated into modern culture, especially through films, this evolved into the viral undead—humans reduced to instinct, spreading contagion, devouring without thought. Whether spiritual, chemical, or metaphorical, the zombie archetype captures a deep human fear: not death, but being alive without control, without identity, without soul.

When these four archetypes—fairy, vampire, werewolf, zombie—are viewed together instead of separately, a pattern begins to emerge. Each represents a boundary violation: fairies blur the line between worlds, vampires blur the line between life and death, werewolves blur the line between human and animal, and zombies blur the line between self and shell. Across cultures and centuries, humans have repeatedly described encounters that sit exactly at these thresholds. Whether interpreted as literal beings, psychological projections, cultural metaphors, or some combination of all three, the consistency of these stories suggests that they are not random inventions but responses to recurring experiences—experiences that may not fit neatly into modern frameworks, but refuse to disappear entirely. This book does not force a conclusion on what these things “are.” Instead, it holds them in their full weight: as warnings, as possibilities, as echoes of something that has been seen before, again and again, by people who did not have the luxury of dismissing it.

Joseph Campbell said:

"What is a myth? The dictionary definition of a myth would be stories about gods. So then you have to ask the next question. What is a god? A god is a personification of a motivating power or a value system that functions in human life and in the universe--the powers of your own body and of nature. The myths are metaphorical of spiritual potentiality in the human beings, and the same powers that animate our life animate the life of the world. But also there are myths and gods that have to do with specific societies or the patron deities of the society. In other words, there are two totally different orders of mythology. There is the mythology that relates you to your nature and to the natural world, of which you're a part. And there is the mythology that is strictly sociological, linking you to a particular society. You are not simply a natural man, you are a member of a particular group. In the history of European mythology, you can see the interaction of these two systems…. In the nineteenth century, scholars thought of mythology and ritual as an attempt to control nature. But that is magic, not mythology or religion. Nature religions are not attempts to control nature but to help you put yourself in accord with it."

Where dips the rocky highland

Of Sleuth Wood in the lake,

There lies a leafy island

Where flapping herons wake

The Drowsy water-rats;

There we've hid our faery vats,

Full of berries

And of reddest stolen cherries.

Come away, O human child!

To the waters and the wild

With a faery, hand in hand,

For the world's more full of weeping than you can understand.

~ 'Stolen Child', Yeats

Cast out all hope, cast out all fear,

And taste with me the faeries' meat,

For while I blamed them I could hear

Dark Joan call the berries sweet,

Where NIamh heads the revelry.

(Ah, mournful Danaan quicken tree!)

~'The Danaan Quicken Tree', Yeats

I went out to the hazel wood,

Because a fire was in my head,

And cut and peeled a hazel wand,

And hooked a berry to a thread;

And when white moths were on the wing,

And moth-like stars were flickering out,

I dropped the berry in a stream

And caught a little silver trout.

When I had laid it on the floor

I went to blow the fire aflame,

But something rustled on the floor,

And some one called me by my name:

It had become a glimmering girl

With apple blossom in her hair

Who called me by my name and ran

And faded through the britening air.

Though I am old with wandering

Through hollow lands and hilly lands,

I will find out where she has gone,

And kiss her lips and take her hands;

And walk among long dappled grass,

And pluck till time and times are done

The silver apples of the moon,

The golden apples of the sun.

The Truth About Faeries!

No matter what I might write about the faery/fairies/fairy/fays/feys/faeries, little attention will, in reality, be given to my attempted delineation of what is and what is not belonging to this class of Beings. This awareness became a common reality for me after the publication of my first book, dealing with this subject matter, in 1994, in which I attempted to examine a very outlined "Faery Lineage." Needless to say, there are many individuals who have never seen my books, who hold a gross misunderstanding in their consciousness regarding this class of beings, or, who are still yet, being spoon-fed such misunderstanding by modern fairy gurus. These modern fairy gurus have simply bought into the current trend in all things Faery and embrace the more fantasy portrayal of fairies, i.e. cute, harmless, albeit a bit on the mischievous side, diminutive, gossamer winged baby-dolls that live in our gardens.

To begin by stating that the fairy are not what you think they are (or perhaps you are a person educated in the Faery Way) has almost universally prompted quite a rebuttal from the receiving end of such a statement. And why shouldn't such a statement provoke a negative response? To come to believe in fairies as an adult takes nerve, wouldn't you say? Considering that usually fairies are the fantasy world of childhood, one grows out of that kind of belief, when Santa Claus is no longer real or the Easter Bunny or the Tooth Fairy.

You have found your way to our website www.FaeryFaith.org, as well as to this page, which leads me to believe that you still believe in the fairies… just as I do, my kindred spirit… On the other pages of this website, you have read that there is a Faery-Faith Tradition, Faery practices and beliefs and theology. Why, we even have a Faery Cosmology! The Faery-Faith Tradition has been around for a long time, long before you or I were born. It is safe to say that this tradition is thousands upon thousands of years old. I certainly didn't found this belief and tradition, although I did found the Faery-Faith Network in 1994 after the publication of one of my books.

I was not born into this tradition, although I am of Irish descent. However, it is safe to say I was born into the belief of Faery as real. But coming to Faery as a spiritual path and life commitment was a gradual awakening that began as a child and matured with me. After scouring through many religions and cults, I found my way to what today, I consider to be a pure tradition of ancient days, of ancient ways, of Ireland.

Don't get me wrong… I'm not saying that we hold a complete tradition handed down from ancient times. No, we only have fragments of it, but what we do still have is pretty concrete and the only pieces of our tradition we have to create are the modern ways in which we choose to celebrate our spirituality, i.e. our celebrative rituals. Otherwise, everything else is pretty much there in the old manuscripts and mythology -- the literature of the spirit.

Our mythology, Irish mythology that is, just like any mythology teaches us what's behind literature and the arts, it teaches us about our own life. Joseph Campbell said that mythology deals with life, the stages of life, "the initiation ceremonies as you move from childhood to adult responsibilities, from the unmarried state into the married state. All of those rituals are mythological rites."

Within the text of our myths we have found the deeper symbols, the deeper pathways that our ancestors knew and used and taught, those wisdom that were considered so important that they were placed into story-form and handed down mouth to ear for thousands of years. We certainly don't look to the modern (meaning after the Jacobian era) fairy tales, as those are something entirely different.

We have come to understand that we search mythology to find an aspect of myth that relates to our own life. Myth provides four functions:

Mystical Function -- realizing what a wonder the universe is, and what a wonder you are, and experiencing awe before this mystery. Myth opens the world to the dimension of mystery, to the realization of the mystery that underlies all forms. If mystery is manifest through all things, the universe becomes a holy picture.
Cosmological Dimension -- the dimension with which science is concerned -- showing you what the shape of the universe is, but showing it in such a way that the mystery again comes through. The greatest scientists will tell you they don't have all the answers, they're just telling you how it works.
Sociological Function -- supporting and validating a certain social order and the dictates of Ethical laws.
Pedagogical Function -- how to live a human lifetime under any circumstances.
You may be asking what does all this have to do with giving a delineation of the faery/fairies/fairy/fays/feys/faeries? And I must respond by saying, "everything." Here is where you and I might differ in our belief of these Beings: this is my religion, the Faery-Faith, earth-based and more pagan in nature, but one embracing early Christian esotericism and Judaic flavorings… to a certain degree that is. The "Faery" we know and are referring to when using that word differs grossly, perhaps not, than what you might know and refer to when using that word… if that is even how you spell it.

Likewise, we will hold many similar beliefs about Otherworld Beings, but simply call them differently or place them in a different hierarchy (if that is the correct word, which I use for easy clarification more than anything) and light. That is what this introduction is all about… to begin to highlight the divergence of our pathways, while spotting where they may converge.

Our "Faery" is found in ancient mythology, while yours may be found in modern fairy tales.

From the Heavenly Realm, from the Stars above, the Sidhe ~ the Shining Ones ~ descended to earth. The Sidhe walked upon the land with the sons and daughters of earth, with whom they held intercourse and thus began a new mutation of evolution, i.e. spirits of nature. The Sidhe continued to descend, moving into and through our world and beyond into Faery, the next wheel of existence, leaving behind a clear pathway on which to follow. These Ancient Ones lead us into Eternity, Immortal Awakening.

Heaven is of "un-ending time." It is not eternal. Eternal is beyond time. The concept of time shuts out eternity. It is over the ground of that deep experience of eternity that all of our temporal pains and troubles come and go. Wherever there is time, there is sorrow. But our experience of sorrow moves over a sense of enduring being, which is our own true life. We do not look to return to the Heavenly Realm, but seek to deepen into Eternity by following in the footsteps of the Sidhe. This is the core belief of our religion, which flavors our cosmology, theology and mythology. All of our spiritual practices focus on attuning us to the essence of the Sidhe that has been encoded in the whispering stones, the sacred waters, the holy trees, so that we may continue to see their pathway and thus follow.

PART TWO

"If you believe in fairies, clap your hands?"

Children and adults all over England, in the early 20th-century, performed this simple gesture in the act of saving Peter Pan's Tinkerbell from fading into the mists. For almost a century, children and adults have read the story, again and again. Today, in the late 20th-century, we still strive to keep the fairies alive through such movies as ÔFerngullyÕ and ÔThe Fairy TaleÕ, which is based on the Cottingley photographs made public in 1917, at a time when Sir J.M. BarrieÕs play ÔPeter PanÕ was the rage of London.

Coincidence, or Otherworld manipulation? Perhaps a wee bit of both.

Who or what are the fairy?
Where did They come from?
Where are They now?
Are the questions to which I shall attempt to provide answers. What is needed in order to find the most truthful answer, is the setting aside of any skepticism, and the opening of the mind of the child or innocence; for that is the mind to which these Beings resonate. We are about to touch upon the Mystic as well as the scholarly mind-set brought forward in the 1800Õs, in an attempt to dissect these Beings, categorizing them with explanations as to what They may or may not be.

Faery Theories

The most famous scholastic study brought forth on the subject was that of Walter Yeeling Evans-Wentz, in his book entitled: The Fairy-Faith in Celtic Countries, Oxford University Press, 1911. Dr. Evan-Wentz was born in Trenton, New Jersey, 2 February 1878. As a child, he and his family moved to La Mesa, California where he lived until he left to pursue his education at Stanford University, where he received his M.A. in English, May 1907.

After this, he traveled to Britain, where he studied Social Anthropology at Oxford University under Sir John Rhys, Professor of Celtic. Dr. Evan-WentzÕs interest in fairies is believed to have been excited by two famous Irish Celts, the poet and mystic George W. Russell who wrote The Candle of Vision under the name "A.E." and the poet William Butler (W.B.) Yeats, who edited the anthology Fairy and Folk Tales of the Irish Peasantry (1889), the latter being, perhaps, the catalyst.

Dr. Evan-Wentz was also known to visit Aberfoyle, Scotland, where, over two centuries earlier, a local minister the Rev. Robert Kirk had investigated the local fairies, resulting in a little book entitled: The Secret Commonwealth of Elves, Fauns and Fairies (1691).

Robert Kirk was most notably the author of the fullest and most authoritative treatise on the fairy-lore of his period; in fact, to many scholars, his book is considered one of the most important works ever written on the subject. He was not only a folklorist, but also became the subject of a fairy-tale.

As a Gaelic scholar he published the first metrical translation of the Psalms into the Gaelic tongue in 1682. This was well received, making his reputation in his time. When he produced The Secret Commonwealth of Elves, Fauns and Fairies, in 1691, this gave his name much wider, and longer, currency. The book was not printed till 1815, reprinted in 1893, edited, with an introduction, by Andrew Lang. By this time the manuscript, which had been lodged in the AdvocatesÕ Library, had disappeared. The book was published again in 1933 with a further introduction by Cunninghame Graham and a reproduction of D.Y. CameronÕs painting of ÔThe Fairy Knowe at AberfoyleÕ.

Robert Kirk had been born at Aberfoyle, where his father was minister. Kirk followed in his fatherÕs footsteps and served as minister at Balquidder for twenty-one years, after such time he was called back to Aberfoyle on his fatherÕs death.

In both places he studied the fairy beliefs of the Highlanders, of which all aspects of the Highland fairy-lore are presented in his short treatise. When KirkÕs body was found beside the Fairy Knowe at Aberfoyle, it was soon whispered around by his parishioners, who evidently felt that he had infringed the taboo against spying upon the fairies, that what was buried was only a stock and that the minister himself was with the "subterraneans" under the Fairy Knowe.

time and told him to go to Grahame of Duchray with a message from him. He was a prisoner in Fairyland, but he had one chance of escape. His posthumous child had just been born, and would be christened at the Manse.

At the christening feast Kirk would appear, and if Duchray kept his dirk in his hand and threw it over KirkÕs spectral form, he would be disenchanted and free to enter the mortal world again. Kirk duly appeared, but Cuchray was too startled to fling the dirk and the chance was lost. Never again could Kirk be father to a "chrisom" child. However, a tradition still lingered which gave him a second chance.

In the second World War an officerÕs young wife was a tenant of Aberfoyle Manse and was expecting a child. She had been told that if a christening was held at the Manse, Kirk could still be disenchanted. The chair that was traditionally his still stood in the dining-room, and if anyone stuck a dirk into the seat of it, Kirk would be freed. The young wife hoped that they would not be posted before her baby was born. Presumably Kirk would appear only to crumble to dust, but his soul would have been saved and freed from the sad merriment of Fairyland. Kirk, is today, still an unrescued captive in Fairyland.

In The Fairy-Faith in Celtic Countries various theories are given to discount, or "explain away the fairy-faith -- that fairies are a folk recollection of an ancient pygmy race, that they are mythological personifications of natural phenomena, or remnants of ancient religious beliefs." In the latter part of his book, Dr. Evan-Wentz even presents the fairy life as a correlation with that of ghosts and spirits of psychical phenomena, quoting the French researcher M. Camille Flammarion, who presents this theory in his own book, Mysterious Psychic Forces (1907):

"Either it is we who produce these phenomena, or it is spirits. But mark this well: these spirits are not necessarily the souls of the dead; for other kinds of spiritual beings may exist, and space may be full of them without our ever knowing anything about it, except under unusual circumstances. Do we not find in the different ancient literatureÕs, demons, angels, gnomes, goblins, sprites, specters, elementals, etc.? Perhaps these legends are not without some foundation in fact."
Dr. Evan-WentzÕs conclusion was "we can postulate scientifically, on the showing of the data of psychical research, the existence of such invisible intelligenceÕs as gods, genii, daemons, all kinds of true fairies, and disembodied men."

He published his belief and met with ridicule, yet, his work has steadily remained the most comprehensive and important study of the fairy to this day. It was his courage that prompted such men as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, to pursue and publish, with full claim of authenticity, the fairie photographs taken by two little girls in Yorkshire, England, as well as his own full-length book: The Coming of the Fairies (1922).

Following in these footsteps, Geoffrey Hodson published his work: Fairies at Work and at Play in 1925, and E.L. Gardner followed suit with his book: Fairies; the Cottingley Photographs and Their Sequel (1945). Next came the Fairy Investigation Society in Britain, which produced a Newsletter, reporting some fascinating fairy viewings, these as late as the 1960s.

The individuals who believed in the existence of fairies had differing notions about their origin, and what needs to be noted is that folklorists of yesterday, and today, were more concerned in the origin of fairy beliefs; what was important to them was not so much whether the fairies really existed as to whether Their existence was actually believed in by the people who told about Them. When that was or is discovered, the folkloristÕs next object is to find out the grounds on which the belief was founded, and as shall be noted below, various suggestions have been put forward, either as full or partial solutions of the problem.

In the last ten years, the publishing industry has again experienced a Faerie Revival. There is a plethora of books currently available on faerie practices. We have authors writing books that focus primarily on the Welsh and Scottish faerie, tying-in the Mabinogion, King Arthur, Morgan le Fey, and Merlin most of all (the Matter of Britain tales), as well as KirkÕs treaties.

The Mabinogion (mabinogeeon), was originally a selection of eleven stories from the two most famous ancient books of Wales, the White Book of Rhydderch, written down about 1300-25 and the Red Book of Hergest (1375-1425), and from the 16th-century manuscript, the Hanes Taliesin. They were chosen and translated by Lady Charlotte Guest in 1840, and it was she who first named the book. These manuscripts appear to rent the material used by the Welsh bards or cyfarwydds. These Celtic folk-tales contain an atmosphere that is very much like that found in the earlier Irish folk-tales.

The Arthurian legends were first called ÔThe Matter of BritainÕ by a 12th-century French poet, Jean Bodel, who treated them as legendary although they had been thought of as genuine history as early as the year 679 by Nennius of South Wales in his Historia Britonum.

Later in 1135 Geoffrey of Monmouth launched the Arthurian legends once again as serious history in Libellus Merlinie (more commonly known as Vita Merlini) afterwards incorporated into his Historia Regum Britanniae. He became known as the first inspiration of the Arthurian Romances. Although 12th-century scholars denounced his work as a lie, it had considerable influence in playing a valuable part in welding the Saxons, Britons and Normans together into a nationality, as well as providing the ÔMatter of BritainÕ with a source upon which poets and romancers could draw from that time till present day.

Authors such as Hugh Mynne, Steve Blamires, and this author are writing books on the Irish faery, tying-in the Lebor Gabala Erenn, tales of the Tuatha De Danann and Sons of Mil, as well as Dr. Evan-WentzÕs studies.

The Lebor Gabala Erenn, or the ÔBook of the Taking of IrelandÕ, is a five-volume set, defined by scholars as a compilation which professes to narrate the history of the successive colonists of Ireland. The tales found in its pages are from the Bardic oral tradition and were not scribed until the late 10th and 11th-centuries.

Dr. R.A.S. Macalister edited and translated the ancient manuscripts; publication began in 1938, with the last volume being printed in 1956, eight years after it was presented to the printerÕs in 1948 and six years after Dr. MacalisterÕs death in 1950. He never got to see the final volume of his careerÕs life-long work.

From the Druidic perspective come such notable authors as Nora Chadwick, Myles Dillon, R. Nicholas, Stuart Piggott, and Peter Berresford Ellis, not to mention a host of writers who write books on Celtic society and antiquity in general, such as Jean Markle. And what each of us have tried to do is shed some light on these creatures and make some sense on what is quite possibly an impossibility.

In fact, to begin with, there are so many variations on the spelling of the word "fairy" -- faerie, faery, fairie, fey, fay -- that for there to be only one definition of what They are proves this point.

What Are They?

And it should be noted straight-off, that this explanation will not only meet with ridicule by some, it will be totally acceptable to others, and so, it is important to clearly state that the following is simply this author's current understanding of what They are, based on, not only literary research, but most importantly, personal first-hand experience; for in the end that is all that matters and where the truth lies.

If one were to close their eyes and allow the very first image they can remember having of a fairy to enter their mind, that image would be acknowledged as that personÕs child image, and thus, a very important image of the faery for that person to use, as an adult, in attempting their first conscious contact with the fairie.

Child images, usually equated to fantasy images, are those used by the fey when first making contact with human-beings. The innocence and openness of children, usually before the age of 8, truly resonate with the elemental or base vibration of Them.

Rarely will the faery make contact with an adult who was not visited by Them as a child, but there is always an exception to every rule. Usually, the child image or diminutive image of the fay haunts the subconscious mind, leaving a lingering impression on the psyche, luring the mind, at some point in adulthood, to link back-up with Their kingdom, or dismiss Them as childish foolishness. Should the latter occur, the adult enters the dull-drums of the adult world, meaning the death of total innocence and, most times, openness.

But this does not explain what They are.

Based on literary research, one will find a host of explanations, mainly, the faery are: Nature spirits Ghosts Ancient gods and goddesses Elementals Daemons Universal archetypes In other words, these Beings are not of this world. They are invisible and yet can become visible to those They deem worthy or who sneak up on Them. They may take many shapes, and because of this are considered to have chameleon-like natures, changing shape and size, becoming brilliant light and insubstantial, made of cloud and vital substance, appearing gross and dense, and sometimes human-like. They appear as small as a thimble and as big as ten-feet tall, with a variance of sizes in between.

Accounts have been given of Their appearance as dancing balls of light, as nymphs with long-flowing, red hair such as the women depicted in John Waterhouse paintings.

They have been known to take the shape of an animal: swans, boars, birds, wolves, crows, salmon and horses among the leading shapes.

Inanimate objects have been proclaimed as a fay: cauldrons, spears, boats, and swords, among the more popular shapes.

Trees were known to have sacred association from the earliest times, some being more sacred than others. In the fairy tradition there is the magical trilogy of oak, ash and thorn, each having a very peculiar association with the faery, usually that of being described in myth as fairy haunts, as this couplet states: "Fairy folks Are in old oaks...." There are obscure fairies known to take the shape of a tree. However, the rowan tree is most notably the faery tree for it contains the entrance to the faery world.

The faerie are also known to be the harsh blasting winds, coming from the east, or the warmth of the summer sun. They can shapechange into the elements, the weather, nature and back again.

There is no one set appearance for the faerie! In this vast array of shape, how can one ever know what a fairy is, or whether or not a faery has come calling? Which brings us to the question who are They, or where did They come from? For the answers to these questions will shed light on knowing when one is truly being contacted by the faerie.

Faery Origin

As we are gleaming, there are many ideas about the faery, and within Their kingdom we find remnants of a magickal race of beings not of this world, as well as diminutive fairies, flower fairies with tiny wings, garden fairies and elemental fairies, to mention only a few, each with Their own virtues and traditions.

Much of the lore surrounding the Faery creates a fantasy image. As noted above, scholarly research brought forth many theories in regards to what They are, i.e. the Naturalistic, Pygmy, Druid, Mythological, and Psychological theories, indicating that almost all the essential elements upon which the advocates of these theories brought forth was adequate evidence that the Faery-Faith was a living tradition, and that itÕs chief characters, the faery, were, on some level, in existence.

The study of human nature itself proved that "all the world over, men interpret visions pragmatically and sociologically, or hold beliefs in accord with their own personal experiences; and are forever unconsciously immersed in a sea of psychological influences which sometimes may be explainable through the methods of sociological inquiry, sometimes may be supernormal in origin and nature, and hence to be explained most adequately, if at all, through psychical research."

Therefore, the most difficult problem of all deemed by the scholar was for human nature to interpret and understand its own ultimate essence and psychological instincts regarding the fairy. Thus the most common theory accepted became the Psychological Theory, which was that the Faery were inherent, either as passively or actively, within the psyche, that they had no independent entity as actual living beings other than in human consciousness.

In this school of thought, there were many psychological themes: the Faery were sexual images, they were archetypes, such as those of the classical gods and goddesses; they were embodiments and projected images of our fear of the unknown; they were the remnants of an old nature religion; the usage of archetypes being the leading avenue of practice in the Psychological Theory.

The fact that consciousness consists of many images endlessly relating to one another around a central core is by no means a modern discovery; it has long been taught in esoteric traditions, and is a theme that many of the current writers on this subject study and present in their writings.

Not surprisingly in orthodox religion, past and present, the fairy have been regarded as evil, the host of the Devil, fallen angels, or, at best, frivolous and distracting influences. However, the mystical understanding is that They are independent beings, of both a non-organic, immaterial state, which is close to humanity, as well as a mirror to humanity. They are a kingdom that will adapt Themselves to whatever They find in our imaginations, be it positive mental images or negative ones, as W.B. Yeats educated us in his book The Celtic Twilight (1893), when he wrote:

"It was dark, and our imaginations were excited by his stories of apparitions, and this may have brought us, unknown to us, to the threshold, between sleeping and waking, ... where there are always murmuring and whisperings. I cannot think that what we saw was an imagination of the waking mind... We saw it all in such a dream ... That sense of unreality was all the more wonderful because the next day I heard sounds as unaccountable as were those lights, and without any emotion of unreality, and I remember them with perfect distinctness and confidence."
Let us now examine Their lineage, as we know it today, which sheds light on the changes the fairy have undergone over many centuries.

From ancient Irish tales we are given the origin of the faery. Their lineage begins with an ancient race in Ireland, called the Tuatha De Danann, or the Tribe of Dana. This tribe or people of the god whose mother was Dana is a pre-Celtic, pre-Christian, race known to magically come to Ireland, on the first day of May.

They have been described as coming from the sky and covering the earth with black clouds for a period of three days and three nights.

Of course, there has been much interpretation as to how they actually arrived, i.e. in ships, the burning of which caused the black clouds, and from the stars; extra-terrestrials descending to earth, the cause of the brilliant or shining lights of which they are often attributed to being.

They have been described as gods, druids, migrating Celts prior to the classical Celtic invasion, Greeks; the descendants of Nemed, or Phoenician sailors.

The truth is, no body really knows where They came from, or for that matter who They really were. Mythologically and historically, They are supposed to be the race who inhabited Ireland after conquering the Firbolgs, and were in full possession of the land when the Sons of Mil, or the Celtic invasion swept into Ireland.

The plethora of tales associated with the De Dananns explains that They choose to become invisible and retreat into the hollow hills, the crystal castles under the sea, with the full power to reappear at any time, in human-like form, before the Celtic people. Thus, "the people of the Goddess Dana became and are the Fairy-Folk, the Sidhe of Irish mythology and romance."

In the 1st-century BCE, the faerie are seen to live as the noble warriors of the Ulster Cycle, and in the early common-era They have become woven with the prominent heroes of the fianna in the tales of the Fenian or Ossian Cycle.

Of the Fianna tales, the mortal men had much intercourse with the Tuatha De Danann; many of them had fairy mistresses and fairy brides. Throughout the tales of these two former cycles the De Dananns move in and out of Faeryland, some of Them reincarnating to live as noble warriors and prominent heroes, both male and female, with others simply making Themselves visible in human-like form.

As time moves forward and Christianity moves fully-in, during the time-period known as the Historical Cycle or Cycle of the Kings, the faerie folk, become known in myth as the Daoine Sidhe.

This class of Faery are likened to Fallen Angels, too good for hell. They were usually seen as human size, with occasional sitings of Them to be more than human stature and at times smaller in size (about two feet tall); thus, we begin to see Their demotion from god-head.

Their inhabitationÕs were generally underground or underwater, in the green raths or under the loughs or in the sea. It is during this leg of the faery evolution that the use of euphemistic names come strongly into play for safetyÕs sake. The more popular names were Ôthe GentryÕ, the ÔGood PeopleÕ, the ÔPeople of That TownÕ, etc. Of the Daoine Sidhe, two distinct classifications were extensively noted: the Heroic Faery and the Medieval Fairy; both greatly intercoursed with humans.

The Heroic Faery is a class of faery that appeared as the knights and ladies of the medieval romances, and those that occur in the Celtic legends were of human or more than human size and of "shining beauty."

They spent Their time in aristocratic pursuits of hunting, fighting, riding in procession, as well as dancing and music, which were beloved by all the Sidhe. A glimpse of the Fenian Hero is seen in the Heroic Faery, although of a more relaxed and gluttonous stance than of battle-worn.

The Tuatha De Danann were now dwindled gods, disappearing from memory. Most importantly, it is with this faery that They become no longer solely connected to Ireland.

Now the fairy move across the channel and become linked to the man or Celtic god, Arthur of Camelot. By the year 1113 C.E., this 6th-century warrior and king becomes known as a Heroic Faery; a king of fairy, one of the sleeping warriors whose return was confidently expected.

The theme of a sleeping champion in a cave under a hill is common through out Europe. In Britain it was most commonly King Arthur in the Matter of Britain legends, while in Ireland it was Finn Mac Cumhal, the leader of the Fianna. The tradition was that the warriors would be aroused if a champion could find his way into the vault where they lay, blow a horn that was lying near the king, and cut a garter lying beside him with a stone sword, but no one knew where among heaps of briar-covered rubble the entrance could be found. Other sleeping champions are Merlin, the Earl of Desmond (Gearoidh Iarla), and Thomas of Ercildoune or Thomas the Rhymer or True Thomas.

The Medieval Fairy is the new wave of fairy that leaps prominently into myth comes out of ÔMatter of BritainÕ and the Arthurian legends.

Now the fairy tales of England weave magick and sorcery, wizards and witches, Merlin, Morgan le Fay, Avalon and Camelot into the Land of Faery.

The size of the fairy become variable; there are both tiny and rustic fairy as well as hideous and monstrous ones. Often they are depicted as beautiful fair maidens, with long, flowing red hair and white skin, who lure the noble knight into madness, or worse, his death. However, if the fairy is male, he is likened to the Heroic Faery in type, of human size and often amorous of mortals. All of Them are expert in enchantment and glamour, generally beautiful, but occasionally hideous.

As with the Tuatha De Danann, many of the Britonic fairy are half-forgotten gods and goddesses, euphemerized into the Good People.

Medieval romances become scattered with references to different types of fairy, and thus, the literary world of fairies are born. In the Literary Faery classification we find several types, diminutive, Elizabethan, and Jacobean.

From the variety of faerie birthed from the medieval romances, the poets of the time have many types to choose from. The literary fairy was first introduced into drama by John Lyly in his play Endimion. In this play, the diminutive fairy are brought in for a short time to do justice on the villain by pinching him, an act that now becomes traditional to the fairy. They punish not only the wrong done to Endimion, but the infringement of fairy privacy. In the tale, Corsites has been trying to move the sleeping Endimion when the fairies enter, and pinch him, as they dance and sing and kiss him as well, so that he falls asleep.

The new Diminutive Fairy are invisible and alert little things always spoken of by using a euphemistic name. Now the fairy become connected with the dead. However, it is the small, bothersome and mischievous fairy that becomes the new fairy fashion of the Elizabethan Age. The romance and fierce warrior attitude of the faery is gone with the Elizabethan Fairy, only Edmund Spenser in his The Faerie Queene hangs on to the hold image, though such an image became slightly out of date.

The dramatists of the Elizabethan age bring into vogue two main types of fairies, the hobgoblins, with which can be compared to the Brownie and the Puck, and the small flower-loving fairies such as Shakespeare introduces in his A Midsummer NightÕs Dream and which became all the fashion for the Jacobean Fairy. These fairy writings came in towards the end of the century, in what might be considered the "hey-day of the drama," and among the prose writers, Nashe in his Terrors of the Night, gives us a characteristic picture of the hobgoblin type:

"The Robbin-good-fellows, Elfes, Fairies, Hobgoblins of our latter age, which idolatrous former daies and the fantasticall world of Greece ycleaped Fawnes, Satyres, Dryades, & Hamadryades, did most of their merry prankes in the Night. Then ground they malt, and had hempen shirts for their labours, daunst in rounds in greene meadowes, pincht maids in their sleep that swept not their houses cleane, and led poore Travellers out of their way notoriously."

Shakespeare puts in all of these, except the pinching, which is being forever mentioned in the masques and poems, but he adds the fairy smallness and their love of flowers.

The small flower-loving fairies gain the addition of gossamer wings, a standard symbol of the modern fairy. The yeoman class of the 16th-century also bring in the first sense of social fairy life, although the most interesting piece of fairy-lore, containing perhaps our earliest account of the social life of the fairies, is to be found in the Itinerary through Wales, the story of Elidor and the Golden Ball, written by Giraldus Cambrensis in the 12th-century.

The Jacobean fairy continued to extend the fashions in fairy lore set in Elizabethan literature, with an added emphasis on the minuteness of the small flower fairies, so that at one time people found it difficult to think of fairies at all without thinking of smallness.

However, the hobgoblin type was exactly the same in both periods, except now the extreme Puritans regarded all fairies as devils.

Towards the end of the 17th-century the fairies are no bigger than microbes, and the nadir of the fairiesÕ powers are reached.

The Flower fairy are gentle spirits of nature. Earth, lake and hill are peopled with these fantastic, beautiful, willful, capricious child-spirits. We see a good example of this type of fairy as the little ladies of MabÕs court, bustling about tearing their tiny ruffs and dropping their little gloves. They pass out of vogue and do not re-enter until the Romantic revival comes, and with it the rebirth of folklore.

Sir Walter Scott (1771-1832) is the author who was the great originator of the Romantic Revival in the 19th-century English literature. As a boy he received the impulse from PercyÕs Reliques and was ever after entranced by myths and legends and historical traditions, more particularly in his own native Border Country. The first book he published, The Minstresly of the Scottish Border, contained traditional ballads that he collected and in some cases refurbished, as well as some literary poems on traditional subjects. The published poem of 1805 entitled "The Lay of the Last Minstrel," is what gave Scott his fame; a poem founded on the tricks played by Gilpin Horner, a boggart-like hobgoblin who haunted one of the Border farms.

Throughout Sir Walter ScottÕs poems and novels can be found snatches of folk-belief and tradition, and the interest he took in fellow authors, James Hogg, Chambers, Crofton Croker, the Grimm brothers and others, gave prestige to folklore stories everywhere.

The authors of the 18th-century, who wrote books expressly for the edification of children, brought in a new class of fairy: the fairy-godmothers play a strong role.

The Fairy godmothers that came from the tales of Charles Perrault (1628-1703), which contains ÔCinderellaÕ, the worldÕs most popular fairy tale, are already at one remove from the folk-tale fairy, and become relentless moralists, driving their protŽgŽs along the path to virtue.

The Perrault fairy-stories were retold folktales, which presupposed, however, a courtly audience who knew the custom of courts and the emphasis placed on courtly sponsors for royal and noble children.

This trend of fairies persists into the 19th-century, and it was not until a quarter of it had passed that the research of the folklorist, as initiated by Sir Walter Scott, began to have some effect on childrenÕs literature. James Hogg, called Ôthe Ettrick ShepherdÕ began to make verses and trained himself to write them. He submitted some poems to Sir Walter Scott, who became his steady friend and employed him to collect oral material. He wrote several prose collections of stories and among his best-known works is The Brownie of Bodsheck; his greatest poem, ÔKilmenyÕ, which is a well-known theme of a visit to faeryland and the return after a supernatural passage of time, seven years in this tale; and his most touching poem, ÔThe MermaidÕ, which turns on the difference between human time and fairy time, the long-lived, soulless mermaid and the short-lived mortal with an immortal soul.

Thomas Crofton Croker (1798-1854) was the first field-collector of folk-tales in Ireland. The first volume of Fairy Legends and Traditions of the South of Ireland appeared in 1823 when Croker was working in London, and it was an immediate and immense success; Jacob Grimm translated it into German and Scott wrote a lengthy and eulogistic letter which Croker printed in the second volume in 1828. Before Croker completed the three volumes of The Fairy Legends, he brought out a kind of guide book of his travels in Cork, Waterford and Limerick, Researches in the South of Ireland, providing additional comment on the fairy-lore which he gathered on his travels.

The folk-tale fairy trend persisted, and as the century went on writers of childrenÕs stories followed the writings of the folklorists; Jean Ingelow and J.H. Ewing are among the best.

And as the 20th century dawned, the Golden Age of Faery had truly seen itÕs death; the folk fairies are turned into airy, tenuous, pretty creatures without meat or muscles, made up of froth and whimsy, thus becoming nothing more than fantasy.

However, a new breed of fairies was conjured up by the late 19th-century metaphysicians. In the positive doctrines of mediaeval alchemists and mystics (e.g. Paracelsus and the Rosicrucians, as well as their modern followers) the ancient metaphysical ideas of Europe, Egypt, Greece, and Rome found a new expression; the folklore of the peasantry and the subject of fairies is turned into a study of the beings of nature: the Elementals.

The elemental "fairies" have four classifications, earth, air, water, fire, as each group inhabits one of the four chief elements of nature. They procreate after the manner of humankind, have bodies of an elastic half-material essence, which is sufficiently ethereal not to be visible to the physical sight, and probably comparable to matter in the form of invisible gases.

The visible world is merely thought of as Their skin. In dreams, it is believed humans went amongst Them and played with Them, and held combat with Them. They were explained to be, perhaps, human souls in the crucible.

The realm in which the Elemental Fairies exist is no longer referred to as Faeryland but rather the Middle Kingdom. However, among Them all is one type which most completely characterizes the new term of fairy, and this is the common woods or garden fairy who figures frequently in the minds of modern people.

The garden fairy is found everywhere, and varies as much from continent to continent as nationalities vary among humankind. Perhaps, it is in this form that the Tuatha De Danann have chosen to now communicate with us, mirroring back our need to reconnect with our environment, our earth.

Now we arrive at our current time period to find that the Faery, as we have seen through Their lineage, have survived, and while They have not nor can be captured, stuffed, or put on display in museums like rare animals and birds of whose existence we have no doubt even if we have not seen them before viewing their carcasses, the Faery, these Beings of the OtherWorld, the invisible world, do exist. I believe we all know that there is with us always an overshadowing consciousness of an invisible world, not in some distant realm of space, but here and now, blending itself with this world. This belief is what we call mysticism.

And what does the noun mysticism really mean? It is a noun that has been applied to anything which may seem reasonable yet wholly untranslatable in terms of individual experience -- a word used to express a knowing or a knowledge of everything which exists.

The Science of Vampirism
Vampiric Virology
By Hugo Pecos & Robert Lomax
Note from Dr. Pecos: Here is my original page on the vampirism virus, with text and format edits by Robert Lomax. To view his extended pages, click here.

Vampires are former humans who have been infected with a viral agent that rewrites the genome of every tissue, resulting in a horrific metamorphosis that defiles both mind and body. Changes to the brain and digestive tract cause them to hunger for the blood of uninfected humans, and they will commit monstrous acts to get it. They are also known for their enhanced physical capabilities, longevity and averse reaction to bright light and UV rays.
In 1616, Italian scientist Ludovico Fatinelli published his Treatise on Vampires, in which he speculated that vampirism was caused by a microscopic pathogen. Tragically, he was burned at the stake for heresy, but his research lived on to inspire countless dedicated men and women to bring you the information included on this page.

The Virus

HVV carrier: vampire bat

HVV source:
the bat flea Ischnopsyllus
elongatus
The source for this disease is the human vampirism virus (HVV). Like rabies, HVV has a distinct bullet shape and belongs to the order Mononegavirales—viruses with a nonsegmented, negative-stranded RNA genome. The virus' natural host is a flea commonly found on cave-dwelling bats, including the vampire bat. In the most common scenario, the flea bites a bat, which in-turn passes the virus on to humans and other mammals.

While most viruses are highly specific in what tissues they target, HVV is able to infect every living cell in the body, with the exception of red blood cells (which are replaced over time by the infected bone marrow). It's also much less destructive, as it can effectively transform tissues without causing cancer or necrosis.

While in theory HVV infection is possible through any exchange of bodily fluids, transmission occurs through the bite of an infected person or animal in virtually every case. Thankfully, the virus isn't airborne, and waterborne transmission is highly improbable.

Stages of the Disease

Electron micrograph of HVV (L).
The virus budding off an infected cell (R).

Stage One: Infection

Within six to twelve hours of exposure, the victim develops a headache, fever, chills and other flu-like symptoms—as well as a drastic increase in metabolism and cardiac output as the virus spreads throughout the body. These symptoms can be easily confused with more common infections, although the presence of bite wounds is usually enough to confirm the diagnosis. This stage generally lasts another six to twelve hours, during which the vaccine is over 98 percent effective. The victim should also be treated with fluids and antibiotics to prevent dehydration and secondary infections.

In 1800s France, an infected woman is given a transfusion of goat's blood—a desperate, futile measure to ward off the disease.

Stage Two: Coma

Within 24 hours of exposure, the victim will slip into a vampiric coma. About 10 hours into this phase, the pulse slows, breathing is shallow and the pupils are dilated. Thousands have been buried alive because of this. While it is commonly believed that anyone infected with HVV turns into a vampire, in fact only a small percentage of people survive vampiric comas. Generally, the young, old and feeble never come out of their comas and eventually die, while the vast majority of survivors are males between the ages of 18 to 35. For the latter group, vampiric comas last about a day and typically end at night, but the former demographic may linger for an additional day or so before death. The vaccine is roughly 50 percent effective when administered during the first half of this stage: the longer the coma has passed, the less effective the vaccine.

During vampirism epidemics,

many victims were buried while still in a vampiric coma.

Stage Three: Transformation
An HVV victim who survives the coma will awaken fully transformed into a vampire. An acclimation period follows—characterized by confusion, despondency and paranoia, along with the agony of dehydration and malnutrition. Soon, an overwhelming hunger for blood will take over and drown out all other needs and concerns. Within 24 hours of transformation, the vampire will abandon its former life and begin hunting—starting with pets, and even friends and family, if need be. The vaccine is of no use at this point, as all major viral activity has gone dormant.

The Science of Vampirism
Extended Edition: Part III
By Robert Lomax
Return to Part II

Natural Immunity

Baron Kitasato Shibasaburō
As with some diseases, a very small portion of the population will display natural immunity to HVV. An estimated one in every 150 victims will only show symptoms for about a week before the disease disappears completely, with no coma whatsoever. The study of antibodies first began in 1890 when Japanese physician Kitasato Shibasaburō described antibody activity against the virus while looking at immune blood samples, but the finer mechanics weren't understood until the early 1900s. Unlike most victims, immune hosts will produce antibodies as soon as they start showing symptoms. As explained before, it can take days or weeks for the body to produce antibodies for a new infection. The one exception to this rule is "natural antibodies," which are believed to be the result of microbes native to the body since birth.

Because HVV has such a wide variety of glycoproteins on its surface, it also means more antigen types, which makes the virus much more vulnerable if it happens to have just one antigen that an existing antibody can lock into. The most logical explanation for immunity is that the virus will sometimes share a similar antigen with a microbe the host already developed antibodies for. Whether it's the result of natural antibodies is unknown.

It's quite possible that if it wasn't for this phenomenon, early humans would have been completely wiped out by vampirism.

Past Treatments

Even before 1890, attempts were made to utilize immune blood as a cure—through the use of transfusions.

Since the 1830s, hundreds were institutionalized so they could be used as human blood farms, which was excused as a necessary evil at the time. Even worse, before the discovery of the ABO blood group system in 1900, this ended up killing thousands of recipients due to mismatched donors. This too was brushed off as being a better alternative to vampirism. In addition, the antibodies in each transfusion would only last about three months before a new one was required—otherwise the infection would relapse from an apparent dormancy, since a recipient won't produce their own antibodies as long as they have someone else's. Because of the sheer rarity of compatible blood, this form of treatment was far from reliable, and ended up being a luxury only the very rich could afford. It was a sad irony, humans depending on blood to avoid vampirism.

Many vampires were studied behind the walls of this facility in the Dry Tortugas.

A more radical treatment involved removal of the thyroid gland, the organ responsible for the virus' rapid replication. Unfortunately, it also slowed the body's ability to make antibodies. In the end, it only prolonged the inevitable by about a week, and all cases resulted in death during the coma stage.

Without a long-term vaccine, infection was basically a death sentence for civilians and agents alike. In the early days of the Agency, these unfortunate individuals would be imprisoned and kept alive for study after they turned. There was, according to historical accounts, a rather hellish facility in the Dry Tortugas for this very purpose, until it was leveled in 1915. In later years, victims were at least given the option of being euthanized, as opposed to facing outright vivisection. It was a difficult scenario for everyone involved, and it certainly didn't help recruitment numbers. Worse, many infected agents would flee and become the organization's most dangerous adversaries:

vampires with all the knowledge and training of an FVZA agent.

The 1943 plan that sought to put an end to all this was dubbed the Zozobra Project, after the giant marionette that's built and burned every autumn in Santa Fe, New Mexico. Although this detail has been long forgotten by most, the marionette is actually an effigy of a vampire, as evidenced by its pale face and black eyes. By burning him, people would destroy their worries and troubles in the flames. It was an effective form of catharsis for many who lost loved ones to vampire attacks.

Zozobra (2007)

The Zozobra Project
Note from Mr. Lomax: The following is a personal testimony of Dr. Hugo Pecos, based mostly on his site biography and fleshed out by a few private interviews. As such, it will be told from his perspective.

During the War, I gained valuable experience fighting vampires and treating those wounded by them. And so, after I returned to the States, I was summoned to Washington, D.C., where I first heard the words "Zozobra Project."
The Zozobra Project was an attempt to bring an end to many millennia of vampiric activity by developing a vaccine for the virus. Mindful of what happened to my brother, I signed on.

Zozobra Project housing was rustic at best.

A day later, in an atmosphere of stone-faced secrecy, I was flown to the Air Force base in Albuquerque and then escorted into the back of a van with no windows. About an hour or so later, I arrived at what could have passed for a summer camp, except for all the scientists milling about.

The scientists of the Project were a true "dream team." Men I had read about in books were now sitting across from me in the lunchroom. As one of the younger scientists, I felt like I was in over my head. But there was no time for anxiety, as reports of vampirism outbreaks were reaching us almost every day.

The early years of the Project were a string of failures. In vaccine work, the objective is to expose the patient to enough of the virus to develop immunity, but not enough to make him sick. With the human vampirism vaccine, it was always the same problem: injections of "killed" virus failed to stimulate antibody production, and injections of the treated live virus caused vampirism. We knew that the secret lay in finding the right way of manipulating the virus before injecting it into the patient.

We did, however, find success in another branch of research: harvesting antibodies from immune blood by separating and purifying the plasma to make it safe for any blood type. This byproduct is known as immune globulin. Once injected into an infected host, these donor antibodies would immediately mark the viral antigens as targets for the immune cells to neutralize. Unfortunately, as with regular transfusions, immunity only lasted about three months before the infection came back. We needed a vaccine for long-term protection, as well as to produce more globulin.

Fortunately, the War ended without the threatened onslaught of vampiric armies; but most of us stayed on with the Project, plugging away. Weeks turned to months, turned to years. To alleviate the stress and isolation, we played chess, watched movies, listened to music, formed a softball team and enjoyed frequent barbecues.

Harvesting the vaccine

Five years after the Project had begun, we finally had a breakthrough. Simply put, we injected the virus into a fertilized chicken egg, where it would then multiply in the cells of the growing embryo. After 24 hours, we took fluid from that egg and injected it into another egg, and repeated the process about a dozen times. In doing this, we were able to weaken the virus, but not so much that it failed to stimulate antibody production.

One would think this would obviate the need for globulin, but vaccine on its own has a major disadvantage: once inoculated, it takes at least a few days for the plasma cells to start producing antibodies. While this is great news for those who can get vaccinated before being bitten, it's completely useless otherwise. The two go hand-in-hand: the vaccine confers years of immunity and produces useful antibodies, while the globulin provides immediate protection until the vaccine can take effect.

Now that we had perfected this duality, we required just one more thing: a human test subject.

The First Recipient

On a sunny October morning (Friday the 13th, believe it or not), a 35-year-old Santa Fe auto mechanic named Joseph Valdez was taken to a facility in the small town of Santa Rosa showing early signs of vampirism. Leaving our compound for the first time in five years, it was a tense and bumpy ride for my four colleagues and me. No windows, as usual.

By the time we arrived, Valdez had already been cleaned up, treated with antibiotics, and given a blood transfusion to replace the pints he lost to his attacker. After some greetings and introductions, we prepared a small, plastic cooler full of single-dose vials. Using a 50cc syringe, I then administered the globulin: one 10cc shot of viscous, molasses-like serum into the muscle of his left lower neck, right at the bite wound. Opening a cooler of larger vials, we used a 30cc syringe to give him the vaccine: 20 CCs of a more aqueous solution, divided evenly into six patches of abdominal muscle.

Despite his bite-induced drowsiness, the whole regimen was far from pleasant for him.

It was a long day and night as Mr. Valdez tossed and turned with fever, before slipping into a vampiric coma. We saw this coming thanks to our animal testing, but it barely put a dent in our anxiety. Following cautionary procedures, we restrained the unconscious man and made preparations to euthanize him if he started to show definite signs of transformation—with his signed permission, of course.

When morning finally came, we checked on Mr. Valdez in his room. Much to our amazement, we found him awake with no further symptoms!

A certain doctor examines Joe Valdez six weeks after he received the vampirism vaccine.

As the remnants of his disease faded, Valdez remained at the facility for his follow-up vaccinations: three on the second day, three on the third, two on the fifth, and two on the seventh. He became completely healthy by the second week. However, he had to stay for six more months to make sure he didn't relapse, and his blood was needed as well. We made sure to keep him comfortable, of course, and allowed frequent visits from his family.

During this time, we got back to work harvesting more vaccine from our chicken eggs, while hundreds more patients arrived for treatment. We could only accommodate five more people for follow-up shots, observation and blood donation, but we sent the others to local and state hospitals for that purpose. Many gallons of inoculated blood was harvested, which we were able to synthesize into more globulin. Soon, entire stockpiles were shipped out all over the country and the rest of the world, forever stunting the spread of this terrible affliction. Even better, none of our patients showed any signs of relapse!

Working at the
Santa Rosa Institute; 1955

After we wished him and his fellow patients a heartfelt goodbye, Joe Valdez returned to his home in Santa Fe, where few would know of his historic contribution to society. He lived a long, quiet life with his family, and died of natural causes in 1994.

To this day, no viral relapse has ever been reported to occur in recipients of the HVV vaccine.

Vaccine and globulin production peaked in the late 1950s and tapered off after that. No new batches were produced after 1965. The CDC estimates it has a combined total of 250,000 doses on hand—far too little to treat a full-scale outbreak. They claim that existing vials can be diluted to stretch out the supply, but there are no studies to support this. Not to sound too alarmist, but if an outbreak occurred today, it would take several months to ramp up vaccine production, during which time the outbreak could have claimed millions.

The Science of Vampirism
Vampiric Biology
By Hugo Pecos & Robert Lomax
Return to Vampiric Virology

Untreated, a person who comes out of a vampiric coma will have undergone a number of major physiological changes affecting the various systems of the body. The information included below is only a short overview; for a more detailed account, read Robert Lomax's extended pages here.

Brain & Nervous System
A vampire's nervous system is similar to humans and has proven to be their Achilles' heel, as injuries to the spinal cord and brain can be devastating for them. While a vampire's spinal cord and nerves work as before transformation, a number of changes take place in the brain, and that altered brain chemistry goes a long way toward understanding vampiric behavior.

The normal brain (L) shows much more serotonin activity than the vampiric brain (R).
Serotonin:
Vampires have much lower levels of this neurotransmitter. Serotonin acts as an inhibitor against violent, aggressive and impulsive behavior, which also explains why criminals such as murderers and rapists have so little of it in their brains.

Dopamine/Endorphins:
These neurotransmitters induce feelings of euphoria, and are released in a vampire's brain when it feeds. Neural pathways activated in feeding vampires are much like those found in drug users.

Circadian Rhythms:
Chemical changes in the brain that help us "rise and shine" with the morning light are reversed in vampires.

Sense Organs
Powerful sense organs give vampires an advantage in both hunting and eluding capture. Sneaking up on them is virtually impossible, as they are aware of your presence long before you are aware of theirs.

A normal eye compared with a vampire's
Sight: In vampires, the iris in each eye becomes hyperdilated, giving them what appear to be black eyes. In addition, the retina now reflects more light into the rod cells, causing the eyes to shimmer in the dark. While all this gives vampires excellent night vision, it renders them effectively blind in daylight. They also experience extreme vasodilation of the sclera, making the whites of their eyes appear red.

Smell/Hearing:
Both senses are extremely acute: thanks to a combination of hypertrophic cerebral neurons and additional receptor cells, hearing range is tripled while smell is tenfold.

Hair, Skin, Teeth & Nails
Part of the terror of encountering a vampire stems from dramatic changes to their outer appearance. Some of these changes are functional, while others are simply the result of various chemical imbalances.

As you can see, the upper fangs are more straight compared to the curved lower fangs.
Teeth:
During the latter half of the vampiric coma, the upper and lower eyeteeth experience rapid growth as additional enamel is deposited on the crown of each tooth, creating sharp fangs. Many vampires will file these fangs to make them sharper for easier feeding—though they'll have to do this about once a week as vampire fangs are capable of regeneration, even when pulled out.

Skin:
A newly-transformed vampire has a sickly, pale-yellow skin tone that fades to a ghastly bluish color over the next few days as its circulation slows. Over a matter of years, the skin becomes more and more translucent as its fat and water stores shrink away, revealing a fine network of veins underneath.

Nails: Both fingernails and toenails thicken and grow at a more than doubled rate. To prevent tension on their nail beds, vampires will generally keep their nails within a centimeter in length, and also quite jagged or pointed to help them grab victims and injure opponents.

Hair: Hair growth slows down substantially in order to feed the accelerated nails. Not only that, once a follicle reaches its terminal length and falls out, each regrowth will become smaller and lighter until it's gone for good. Within ten years of transformation, a vampire's entire epidermis will be completely bald, with not even a hint of peach fuzz.

X-ray of a vampire's
curved spine

Muscular & Skeletal System
Adaptations in their skeletal and muscular systems give vampires significant advantages over humans.
Muscles/Connective Tissue:
About 90 percent of vampiric muscles are of the fast-twitch variety (compared to 50 percent for the average human). This brand of musculature enables short bursts of maximal force, ideal when hunting prey. However, unlike typical fast-twitch muscles, vampiric muscles are highly resistant to fatigue, thanks to a drastic increase in myoglobin and mitochondria. Ligaments and tendons thicken in response to the workload imposed upon them by the muscles.

Skeletal System:
Osteoblast production causes a vampire's entire skeleton to harden and thicken, both during the coma and after each feeding. As a vampire loses its fat and water stores, its spine will curve into a hunchback—a condition known as kyphosis.

Cardiovascular System
The most profound differences between our species are found in the circulatory system, as they enable vampires to survive injuries that would kill a human being.

Human arterial blood (top) compared with that of a vampire
Blood:
Vampire blood is called ichor (pr. ik-er), and appears more brown or black due to an increase in iron and bile levels, allowing it to carry more oxygen and clot faster while slowing the growth of harmful microbes.

Heart:
Vampire blood is pumped via the contraction of skeletal muscle rather than the heart, which eventually atrophies from disuse. At rest, these contractions are mostly involuntary and take place in the limbs, emanating from the furthest extremities inward, like a wave. BPM for each contraction tends to be much lower than the average human heartbeat.

Adrenaline:
This "emergency hormone," produced by the adrenal glands, is released in consistently large amounts in vampire blood during "fight-or-flight" situations. This quickly raises a vampire's sluggish metabolism by increasing blood flow, dilating air passages and accelerating the production of clotting factors. Along with changes in muscle, bone and connective tissue, this ability to release adrenaline only adds to a vampire's extraordinary power.

Body Temperature

Seen through thermal vision,
a vampire attacks its prey.
Like the naked mole-rat and two-toed sloth, vampires do not regulate their body temperature in typical mammalian fashion: being thermoconformers rather than thermoregulators, their core temperature depends largely on the surrounding environment. Unlike typical ectotherms, however, vampires can still shiver and produce enough heat to keep their temperature at a bare minimum of 60 degrees Fahrenheit during rest, and up to 74 when fully active—compared to 96.8 and 100 degrees for normal humans—provided the ambient temperature isn't much colder than 32 Fahrenheit (0 Celsius).
This temperature anomaly proved to be a great help for modern vampire hunters, as it made vampires easily distinguishable from humans when viewed through infrared imagery.

Aging & Life Expectancy

While no vampire on record has ever died of natural causes, vampires do undergo an aging process—just not in the same way as humans. Vampires do not age on a molecular/genetic level, but their life of hunting and eluding capture creates tremendous wear and tear in the form of injuries to bones and tissue.

A 125-year-old vampire photographed in Spain; 1901.
Note the curved spine, lack of hair
and emaciated frame.

Because they presented such a danger to society, most vampires were destroyed long before the outer limits of their lifespan were determined. Ancient history offers some clues, however. In ancient China, there was said to be one vampire in the Emperor's court through the entire Eastern Zhou Dynasty, which would put his age at 550. More accurate modern records have certified vampires of over 300 years old.

Contrary to the opinions of many theologians, vampiric longevity is not the result of some pact with the Devil, but rather an ability to ward off the DNA damage that occurs during cell division in normal humans. Specifically, the protective caps on the ends of chromosomes (known as telomeres) become chewed up over time in humans, but not vampires.

Although their DNA has the ability to resist aging (as well as cancer), mutations that take place during the initial coma cause a vampire's appearance to change dramatically within the span of a decade. It will lose all of its hair as its fat and water stores shrink away, causing its skin to become thinner and more transparent. This gives it a distinctly withered and dried appearance, with smaller muscles and a vulture-like curvature of the spine.

Despite their rather feeble appearance, older vampires are still extremely powerful and agile. Many a vampire hunter has made the mistake of underestimating them.

The Science of Vampirism
Vampiric Sociology
By Hugo Pecos & Robert Lomax
Return to Vampiric Biology

Vampiric behavior resembles our own in more ways than we might imagine. By conducting extensive interviews with vampires, along with observing their behavior in the wild, scientists have been able to arrive at a reasonable understanding of their world.

The Recently Turned

FVZA researchers restrain a vampire being kept under observation in 1932.
The first few days after coming out of a vampiric coma are especially difficult for the vampire: it awakens starved, dehydrated and disoriented, its judgement clouded by competing impulses and memories of its previous life. This period of confusion and discomfort is temporary, however, as it is soon drowned out by a fierce, intense craving for human blood. This growing hunger eventually snaps the vampire into focus, and it sets about finding a way to sate that hunger.

The Hunting Pack

Although lone vampires are not uncommon, most find it advantageous to either join a hunting pack or create one of their own. Each path has its advantages. For one, joining an existing pack offers security, access to blood and protection from other packs. However, new members are low in the pecking order and are often forced to put themselves in dangerous positions, such as scouting missions. They're also the last to feed, if they get to feed at all. Vampires possessing natural leadership skills may find it better to hunt on their own and eventually bring some of their victims into the fold. Since vampires are unable to bear children or have sex, the hunting pack is the only family unit of their life. In a successful pack, each member has its role, and there is little dissension. A typical grouping is made up of four vampires, with one Alpha and three subordinates. This tends to be the most ideal number: any more than that, not everyone always gets a chance to feed; any less and hunting becomes appreciably riskier. Of course, back in the distant past when vampire control was in a more primitive state, large vampire armies often rose up and spread by overwhelming entire towns like locusts.

Are vampires sentimental? Do they love? In a limited sense, yes. They are capable of developing loyalties and behaving selflessly to protect and serve their pack. That said, this is the only area of their lives in which they are not mercenary.

The Alpha: Vampire packs are meritocracies, not democracies; there are no elections, no "show of hands." The most capable hunter and leader runs the show, and the others follow. The Alpha vampire—also known as the Patriarch—coordinates hunting strategy, gives assignments and makes all final decisions. During hunts, the Alpha generally hangs back in a less risky position—yet when a victim is seized, the Alpha drinks first. But the job has its perils, too. For one, the Alpha has the difficult task of choosing replacements for fallen subordinates. In this, it must walk a fine line: while the Alpha must be stronger than its pack, it cannot afford to carry weak, ineffectual hunters. Contrary-wise, stronger subordinates can rise up and become a threat to its position.

Like virtually all mammals, vampires assert their dominance through display behavior and fighting. They will hiss and growl, bare their fangs and claws, draw weapons and showcase their prodigious strength, speed and leaping ability to intimidate rivals. Physical size and power are important but by no means the only determinant of Alpha status; in fact, intellectual capacity is more important in determining success and longevity for any vampire. If one is cunning enough, they can command minions twice their size.

While Alpha vampires seem to be in an enviable position, they actually have a higher mortality rate than their underlings. Each new challenge from within the pack takes its toll; injuries pile up, including many of the permanently-disabling variety: they can lose an eye, have flesh and ligaments torn out, and shatter bones beyond repair. As a result, elder vampires are far from the dashing, handsome types so often seen in movies, as they're likely to be heavily scarred with parts of their face missing. The ultimate fate of the Alpha is a grim one: cast out of the safety of the pack and no longer able to fight, the once-proud vampire is reduced to a solitary existence, subsisting on the blood of whatever cat or dog it can win the confidence of. Eventually, the Alpha succumbs to malnourishment or the weapons of vampire hunters.

A vampire hiding in plain sight

Fledglings: When a recently-turned vampire joins a pack, it is usually taken under the wing of an elder, who helps the fledgling learn how to hunt. While some packs have no patience with slow learners, most fledglings are given a bit of time to get up to speed. However, an unusually-quick learner may be perceived as a threat and destroyed by the Alpha. Fledglings with ambition learn to keep a low profile and hide their agenda until the time is right.

Hunting: Vampires will utilize all at their disposal to hunt while avoiding detection: they will slather themselves with makeup to appear more human, have female pack members pose as prostitutes to lure male victims, and haunt the shadows around nightclubs, sporting and concert venues and all-night diners. Unsurprisingly, prostitutes and homeless always make up a disproportionate number of victims. Vampires have also been known to kill or turn taxi drivers and use their vehicles to pick up additional victims.

Much like gangs and drug dealers, a given swath of real estate can only support so many vampires. While an urban area may offer more hunting opportunities, it also increases their chances of running afoul of another pack. The country is safer, but hunting opportunities may be few and far between. Therefore, hunting packs must be ruthless in defending their territory, making such battles almost unimaginably vicious. It is not enough to merely win the confrontation: to have a future, they must show their rivals just how merciless and sadistic they can be.

Treatment of Victims: Treatment of victims can range from indifferent to barbaric. If a pack finds a suitable new member, it will keep that person in their midst until transformation is complete. Of course, they have to make sure not to drain the body too much or the person will die. Interestingly, vampires of a more traditionalist mindset have been known to perform elaborate rituals based around transforming supportive civilians into one of their kind.

Once a pack size is set, vampires will usually tear their victims apart after feeding. Some consider this behavior as proof that vampires are cruel and monstrous, but in fact it is more a question of pragmatism. Left intact, today's bite victim could become tomorrow's rival, however unlikely. Plus, it is much easier to hide severed parts than a full corpse.

The Vampire's Abode

Vampiric dwellings of the modern era are the very definition of crude and utilitarian. Since they spend most of their waking hours out hunting, there is little need for creature comforts at home. Besides blood, other priorities demand avoiding detection and getting out of the sun, and their abodes reflect this transient nature of their lives. If a pack has found a particularly safe, secluded hiding spot, it may make perfunctory efforts to dress it up with furniture and assorted decor. Music is one of their preferred indulgences—a conspicuous habit they've had to curtail in the face of nosy vampire hunters. Knowing that their lair may be discovered at any time, vampires always travel light. In the country, they live in caves, mines and old barns; in the city, they inhabit sewers and abandoned buildings and subway stations, or tunnel under piers along the waterfront.

Their lifestyle wasn't always this clandestine. During the Middle Ages, when vampire packs roamed the countryside without fear of extermination, they enjoyed occupying lavish digs. Once set up in these palaces, the Alpha would conspicuously display symbols of their success with all the windy self-importance of today's ruling classes.

Agents clean up after a battle with vampires in an abandoned

Hygiene: Due to their cat-like aversion to water, vampires are generally uninterested in personal hygiene, as they dislike washing and will wear the same clothing as long as possible. However, because their hunting missions may require them to hide in plain sight, they ultimately have no choice but to wash themselves and put on new clothes—usually stolen from stores or taken off victims. Obviously, Alphas tend to be the better dressers, considering their lack of strenuous and messy fieldwork.

Weapons: To prevent wasteful blood loss, vampires will do their best to avoid wounding victims prior to feeding. Even so much as bruising them can be detrimental, since the blood becomes trapped under the skin. When it comes to rival packs and lone investigators, vampires have no qualms using melee weapons and silenced firearms—anything that doesn't give away their position. Only during raids on their hideouts do they break out the big guns and body armor.

Demographics & Population

The vast majority (about 80 percent) of vampires are males who were between the ages of 18 and 35 upon transformation. Another 10 percent are females between the ages of 15 and 35. The remaining 10 are males and females past 35, with the absolute oldest case being 72. The racial and ethnic makeup of a pack will generally mirror that of the local populace. Alpha vampires are usually, but not always, male.

Despite the fact that they do not age on a genetic level, vampiric mortality rates have always been high. By the year 1800, a newly-turned vampire could expect to live 10 years on average. A century later, that number had dropped by half. And then by 1960, life expectancy encompassed a couple years at most. The leading causes of death have also changed with the times. During the Middle Ages, vampires were frequently murdered by other vampires—an act known as vampiricide—usually over long-lasting disputes involving territory and human trafficking. By 1930, the exponential rise of skilled and organized vampire hunters had become their greatest killer, partly in thanks to the Great Depression and its atmosphere of desperation.

Suicide rates are also much higher among vampires than humans. For much of the 20th century, suicide rates in the United States hovered between 10 and 15 suicides per 100,000 people; and vampires were easily triple that number. However, even that estimate is probably low, because many vampires who succumbed to malnutrition had made a conscious decision to stop feeding. Still, the Vanguard would handle vampiric suicide reports on a weekly basis. They would fling themselves off buildings and in front of trains and trucks, light themselves on fire, take poison or shoot themselves in the head, among other dramatic methods. Artery cutting and organ stabbing usually met with failure, while sun exposure was only moderately successful.

Population: As of today, the world's vampire population is estimated to be approximately 5,000. The vast majority of this estimate (95 to 98 percent) are believed to be in the dormant phase. As the FVZA and other organizations around the world made significant progress in vampire abatement during the 1950s and 60s, many vampires went into hiding, hoping to reawaken at a more hospitable time. Unfortunately, seeing as how the FVZA has been out of commission for over 40 years, this day and age would be the perfect time for them to emerge.

Global distribution of likely vampire hideouts, marked in red

Vampiric population distribution largely mirrors that of humans, so they're most likely found in and around large cities. That does not mean the country is completely safe: in fact, many vampires find areas in the countryside—caves, cemetery crypts, abandoned mines—more suitable for a safe dormancy.

Politics: Contrary to the clichéd notion of good and evil vampires, it's arguably more useful to categorize them as either Elitists or Populists. Naturally, the vast majority of vampires are Elitists who want to keep their numbers small to avoid drawing attention or rivalry. Occasionally, a Populist will emerge to promote the idea of significantly expanding the ranks of their species. Nevertheless, Elitists have always controlled the agenda and they brook no dissent.

Shiva the Destroyer

Vampiric Religion

It may come as a surprise to many that vampires practice religion. Perhaps because they share with us a desire to make sense of the world, they have sought to put their bloodlust into some sort of context. Historically, vampires see themselves as the antithesis of the prevailing religion in the land of their origin. Thus, the worship of Satan, Judas and Lilith was born among vampire packs in Christian countries, while many vampires from Hindu countries believe themselves to be descended from Shiva, the God of Destruction.

For another example of vampiric cult practices, see the Historical Tale for The Order of the Broken Cross.

Vampiric Language

As many movies and books have suggested, vampires do have their own language. It is a variation of Latin known as Bursan, which is thought to have originated in Burs, an area of present-day Romania. Not all vampires bothered to learn Bursan, of course, but the more disciplined packs made it mandatory for any new members. In addition to reinforcing their cultural identity, learning this unique language also had the advantage of allowing vampires to secretly communicate even in the presence of other humans. Ultimately, this practice started to fall out of favor by the early 20th century, due to higher mortality rates and the confiscation of important documents and artifacts.

The Black Book

The oldest surviving Bursan text was found in the remains of a Viking camp near present-day Wexford, on the southeast coast of Ireland, and is thought to date back to the mid-9th century. It is known as the Black Book—not because of its color, but because the Vikings were sometimes referred to by the Irish as the “dark invaders.” Still, it remains unknown how the book came to be in the possession of the Vikings. The Black Book currently resides in Trinity College, Dublin.

The Science of Vampirism
Vampiric Mythology
By Hugo Pecos & Robert Lomax
Return to Vampiric Sociology

Most vampire myths come to us from the Dark Ages, when science was in its infancy and people looked to religion or superstition to explain the world around them. While some vampire myths have their basis in Christian Orthodoxy and Victorian romanticizing, others represent imaginative interpretations of actual vampiric characteristics and behavior. Seeing as how they thrive on deception, it's also highly likely that many of these myths were perpetuated by vampires themselves in order to gain an edge over their ill-prepared victims, to instill more fear in the populace, or to gain more followers.
Presented in no particular order:

Kurt Barlow from Salem's Lot

Vampires sleep in coffins
Source:
This myth likely arose from gravediggers and passersby who observed vampires emerging from coffins and crypts.
Fact:
If a vampire did spend the night in a coffin, it probably had nothing to do with sleeping preference. In the old days, many bite victims were interred while still in a vampiric coma —which in-turn gave birth to the myth that vampires must sleep within the soil of their homeland. The truth is, they will sleep wherever they feel safe. That's not to say some don't choose to sleep in coffins, although it's more out of a sense of ritual or tradition than an actual need (besides the perk of keeping out light and sound).

Garlic repels vampires

Source:
Most likely based on observation. To ward off vampires, garlic would be worn, hung in windows, or rubbed on chimneys and keyholes.
Fact:
Vampires have sensitive noses and can be momentarily driven off by pungent odors. However, this method of deterrence is unreliable and certainly won't work on an experienced vampire. Basically, you'd be better off using pepper spray.

Horror of Dracula

Crosses repel vampires and burn their flesh
Source:
Christian beliefs that vampires are demons and therefore enemies of God. During the Dark Ages, vampires were known to have been tortured by the church using superheated iron crosses to "burn the Holy Spirit into them" before execution.
Fact:
Unless heated by fire or used as a bashing or throwing weapon, crosses have absolutely no effect on vampires. They have no trouble entering churches, either.

Vampires can be killed by driving a stake through their heart

Source:
This myth actually started out as a misguided method of keeping suspected vampires in their coffins by driving a long iron stake through the torso and into the coffin floor, effectively pinning it in place. Eventually this evolved into simply stabbing the heart using special kinds of wood—such as oak, ash and hawthorn—which were thought poisonous to vampires because of the "purity" associated with trees and nature.

Fact:
Because their blood clots quickly and is circulated by skeletal muscles, vampires can easily survive injuries to the heart and torso; and they have little trouble freeing themselves from impalement. They also have no apparent allergy to wood (or silver, for that matter). When fighting vampires, your best bet is to aim for the head or spine.

Vampires burst into flames upon exposure to sunlight
Source: Most likely based on observation of a vampire's extreme reaction to sunlight, and possibly mixed up with their vulnerability to fire.

A vampiric patient is set ablaze in Let the Right One In.
Fact: Sunlight renders vampires, with their hyperdilated irises and reflective retinas, blind. It also causes neural pathways to fire randomly in the brain, creating an extreme epileptic reaction. On top of that, vampiric skin is highly sensitive to UV rays, becoming badly burned and blistered within minutes. However, as dramatic as these reactions may appear, not even a hint of smoke will occur.

Holy water burns vampiric flesh
Source:
Christianity.

Fact:
Holy water, or any water for that matter, has little effect on vampires. They can, however, still be drowned; and they generally hate getting wet as it can lower their body temperature, making them less energetic and able to hunt.

Vampires prey on virginal women

Dracula whispers sweet nothings to his next victim.
Source:
A reflection of 19th-century fears over the sexual awakening of young women. In Balkan and Bulgarian folklore, male vampires were believed to deflower virgins and even impregnate them with half-human hybrids known as dhampir.
Fact:
While vampires have a stated preference for the taste of young blood, they are not particular as to which gender provides it. Being asexual, sterile and impotent, they also cannot have intercourse, let alone produce any kind of offspring; and biting a pregnant woman will only result in miscarriage or stillbirth.

Vampires can fly & move at the speed of sound
Source: Embellished accounts of vampires running, leaping and using their cat-like reflexes.

The Strain featuring its bloodthirsty main antagonist, who can move like the wind despite having once-crippling gigantism Fact: While they can sprint faster than most humans (25 to 30 miles per hour) and jump higher than any (at least ten feet), vampires cannot fly, levitate, teleport, or move any faster than a top-tier athlete.

Vampires can turn into bats
Source: Association of vampires with vampire bats, since they're both nocturnal and utilize pointed fangs to feed on blood. More importantly, both species are the main vectors for the human vampirism virus. As a result, they were typically believed to be different forms of the same creature.

Fact: Vampires cannot turn into bats, or anything else for that matter. Although vampires can't shapeshift (or retract their fangs), their appearance does change over time, and they can be quite adept at disguising themselves using makeup and other appliances.

Vampires do not cast shadows & are not visible in mirrors
Source:
Christianity. It was thought that a vampire, or any creature lacking a soul, would not cast a shadow or produce a reflection.

Fact:
Like any typical disease, vampirism has no effect on the body's ability to block or reflect light. However, considering the fact that vampires tend to avoid light altogether and are often quite uncomfortable with their own reflections, this myth has a slight grain of truth to it.

True Blood

Vampires shed bloody tears
Source:
Vampires typically have red, bloodshot scleras—the so-called "whites of their eyes." Because of this, people throughout history have come to believe that vampires have bleeding eyes.
Fact:
Because their blood is confined to the eyeball, vampiric tears are just as clear as ours (unless they wear mascara).

American Horror Story: Hotel

Humans become vampires by drinking infected blood
Source:
19th-century sexualization of vampires and their victims "exchanging" bodily fluids.
Fact:
While it's true that the vampirism virus is also carried in the bloodstream, transmission almost always occurs through biting. Contrary-wise, human ingestion of vampiric blood tends to induce vomiting, while injection can be outright lethal.

Vlad III, aka Prince Dracula

Elizabeth Báthory & Vlad the Impaler were vampires
Source:
Their alleged penchant for drinking the blood of the people they killed. This eventually inspired Victorian author Bram Stoker's famous vampire character Count Dracula.
Fact:
There exists no verifiable evidence that Countess Báthory and Prince Dracula were biological vampires. Even the notion that they drank blood is dubious at best, being a likely fabrication to further demonize them. Still, "behavioral vampirism" was not uncommon throughout history, as hematophagia was suspected to be the sole reason behind vampiric longevity before modern science disproved that claim.

Vampires have psychic, hypnotic & telekinetic powers

Dracula's brainwashed thrall, Renfield
Source:
The common vampiric ability to read subtle emotions, and their reputation for using their "silver tongue" to get what they want. Telekinesis was simply thrown in later as a baseless supplement, likely due to the superstitious association of vampirism with witchcraft and the occult.
Fact:
While vampires do have heightened senses thanks to their enlarged amygdalae, they cannot read minds or see the future—only physical expressions and mannerisms. This in-turn benefits their powers of persuasion, as they can more easily subvert their victims on an emotional level. Logically, such abilities depend greatly on individual skill and experience. Their enhanced hearing also allows them to talk discreetly amongst each other—an act easily mistaken as telepathy.

Vampires retain the same appearance as the day they were turned
Source:
19th-century romanticizing of vampiric longevity, in addition to their common use of makeup; and possibly the fact that child vampires remain permanently stunted after transformation (although such individuals were quite rare, given the high death toll of young coma victims).
Fact:
Older vampires actually look more like Nosferatu's Count Orlok—or, more accurately, anorexic drowning victims with alopecia and pinkeye. On a related note, the myth that a vampire's hair never changes most likely came about from its slowed growth rate, as well as their tendency to wear wigs after it falls out.

Vampires can choose to live on only animals and blood bags
Source:
Hollywood idealization of vampirism as something that can be rehabilitated and reintegrated into human society.
Fact:

Although animals and blood bags can get them by for a while, vampires ultimately have to feed on live humans to get all the nutrients they require.

A vampire's wounds can heal within seconds
Source: Likely an exaggeration of vampiric resilience.
Fact: While it's true that even major injuries can clot within a few minutes, vampiric healing rate is only double that of a human, and they can still suffer prominent scarring. As for regeneration of lost body parts, they can regrow their upper and lower fangs, but nothing else.

Slain vampires become ash
Source: Most likely the practice of cremating slain vampires to prevent the possibility of infection, as well as the selling of their ashes in some parts of the world.

Fact: Dead vampires actually decompose at a slower rate than human corpses, thanks to natural antibiotics in their bodily fluids.

Count von Count

Vampires can be distracted by leaving seeds for them to count
Source: Due to changes in the part of the brain that regulates habitual activity, vampires are more susceptible to mental disorders such as arithmomania, or the obsessive counting of objects. Some forms of porphyria—often mistaken for vampirism—have also been linked with such conditions.
Fact: Regardless of how severe a vampire's OCD might be, counting objects is a low priority when faced with a potential meal or threat.

Vampires absorb ingested blood directly into their veins
Source: Association of hematophagia with blood transfusions.

A female mosquito digesting blood while excreting excess fluid to make room for the more solid nutrients

Fact: While many fictional vampires are depicted as being able to fully absorb undigested blood through a variety of methods—hypodermic fangs, larger pores in the GI tract, fusion of the stomach and vascular system, reconnection of the esophagus into the heart—the truth is that vampires digest blood no differently than hematophages such as vampires bats, leeches and ticks (or even how we digest our own food).

Vampires have the strength of 20 bodybuilders
Source:
Exaggeration of vampiric strength; further embellished in Bram Stoker's Dracula.
Fact:
Drop the zero and you have a more accurate number. A vampire is usually quite a bit stronger than the average bodybuilder, but not so much as those on the upper end of the scale—the ones squatting 1,000 pounds and bench pressing 600. Details aside, the leaner-bodied vampires still have speed and agility on their side when faced with heavier-muscled humans.

Lilith

The vampire race can be traced back to a single progenitor
Source:
Association of vampires with demons, fallen angels, half-angels, and biblical creation myths—such as the legend of Lilith, who was said to be Adam's first wife before leaving him to spend the rest of her existence feeding on the blood of men.
Fact:
While it's true that many organisms can be traced back to a most recent common ancestor (such as Mitochondrial Eve), and infectious diseases to an index case or "patient zero," there is no all-powerful mother or father of all vampires—not one that's still living, at least. One grain of truth to the Lilith legend, however, is that vampires have very likely been around for as long as humans have (if not longer), since Adam and Lilith were said to be created at the same time and from the same source.

Vampires have a prominent widow's peak
Source: Observation of early-stage hair loss. This eventually inspired numerous Hollywood villains such as Bela Lugosi's portrayal of Count Dracula, along with typical depictions of Lucifer or Satan.

Fact: Like typical male-pattern baldness, early vampiric alopecia creates a receding hairline where hair is lost from above the temples but not the front and center of the scalp. This resulting widow's peak is most apparent after about a year of vampirism. Within a couple more years, the remaining upper hair is eventually lost as well, before additional baldness spreads further down the rest of the scalp over the next few years until there's nothing left but bare, blue skin.

Human ear pointing isn't too different from the tissue loss experienced by older vampires.

Vampires have pointed ears
Source:
An actual characteristic of older vampires, which may be a possible reason why mythical immortal beings like elves and fairies usually sport pointed ears themselves.
Fact:
While not the elongated bat ears of some depictions, vampiric ears do experience a degree of shrinkage over the years—almost like shriveling leaves—causing the ear helix to fold or crumple into a subtle point.

Vampirism can cure any human ailment
Source: The vampiric ability to ward off a multitude of diseases including cancer.
Fact: Although vampirism can effectively cure a diseased human, such individuals have a much harder time surviving the transformation process—especially with advanced age and most definitely with organ transplants. On top of that, debilitating injuries remain largely unaffected—although it can prevent degenerative conditions (like Alzheimer's) from progressing further. In addition, vampires with cerebral palsy and ALS can potentially recover a limited degree of fast-twitch motor function, while the blind and deaf may regain some hearing and night vision. This, of course, depends on the severity of such disabilities prior to infection.

Vampires are indiscriminate hunters, and those facing them can expect no quarter, no matter their standing in life.

Giuliano de' Medici & Simonetta Vespucci

1453-1476

See Historical Tales: Guiliano & Simonetta

Lucrezia Borgia
Daughter of Pope Alexander VI
1480-1519

The femme fatale of the murderous, incestuous Borgia clan met her match when brother Cesare, recently transformed into a vampire, cornered her inside the Vatican.

Ivan the Terrible
Russian Tsar
1530-1584

After transformation, Ivan used his family as a personal smorgasbord, drinking the blood of his son and daughter-in-law before being slain by palace guards.

Percy Bysshe Shelley
English Romantic Poet
1792-1822

While vacationing in Italy with wife Mary and friend and fellow poet Lord Byron, Shelley decided to pay a call to the vampiric residents of a Lake Trasimeno castle. The hosts, unimpressed with his reputation, drank his blood and then threw his body over the castle ramparts into the lake. Shelley's drained and battered corpse eventually washed ashore and was later cremated on location.

Nat Turner
American Slave Revolt Leader
1800-1831

Turner turned his bloodlust into a full-scale insurrection by leading other transformed slaves on a hunting spree across the Virginia countryside. The vampiric rebels traveled from home to home, feeding on white residents while turning their slaves. All told, Turner's pack—which ultimately grew to over 70 slaves and free blacks—killed 65 men, women and children before a local militia put an end to them. Turner himself was captured two months later and subsequently stripped and hanged out in the sun before being flayed, disemboweled, beheaded and quartered. Tragically, up to 200 innocent blacks were murdered by militias and mobs in the frenzied aftermath, and civil rights for both slaves and free blacks were stripped by state legislatures.

Edgar Allan Poe
American Author & Poet
1809-1849

The Master of the Fictional Macabre met up with the real thing when he stumbled into a couple of vampires while on a bender along the Baltimore waterfront. Found drained and delirious, he was then taken to the Washington Medical College, where he slipped into a vampiric coma and soon died. Newspapers at the time reported Poe's death as "congestion of the brain" or "cerebral inflammation," so he most likely died as a result of the coma—although some conflicting reports state that he was euthanized to keep him from transforming.

Grigori Rasputin
Russian Mystic & Advisor to the Romanovs
1869-1916

Russian aristocrats, fearful of Rasputin's undue influence over the Tsar and his wife, lured him to a vampire hideout in Saint Petersburg. After transformation, the "Mad Monk" was shot several times (once in the forehead), bludgeoned with a dumbbell, tied up and then thrown into the icy Neva River. Amazingly, he still turned up at the palace the following night, whereupon he was beheaded by the Tsar's guards. Taking no chances, his body was then dismembered and burned.

While in New York City to promote his new movie, the Italian sex symbol was lured into a speakeasy, then set upon by a hunting pack. Wounded but alive, he managed to get back to his hotel, where he fell into a vampiric coma and was eventually euthanized. Although the studio attempted to prevent panic by claiming his death was caused by a bleeding ulcer, the news of his untimely passing resulted in mass hysteria among his female fans, including suicides and a prolonged riot on the day of his funeral.

The Science of Vampirism
Vampires Versus Zombies
By Hugo Pecos
Return to Famous Vampire Victims or Famous Zombie Victims

The above poster may seem fanciful today, but in ancient times zombies and vampires were frequently pitted against each other for the enjoyment of bloodthirsty spectators. So which is more formidable? It's a question I'm commonly asked. In the vernacular of boxing, here is the tale of the tape:

Attribute	Vampires	Zombies	Advantage
Brain	Highly Developed	Barely Functional	Vampires
Eyes	Night Vision	Extreme Myopia	Vampires
Sense of Smell	Above Average	Exceptional	Zombies
Hearing	Exceptional	Impaired	Vampires
Jaws	Powerful	Vice-Like	Zombies
Nervous System	Normal	Capable of Repair	Zombies
Circulatory System	Resilient	Virtually Indestructible	Zombies
Strength	Exceptional	Powerful Grip	Vampires
Speed/Agility	Advanced	Stiff-Limbed, Slow	Vampires

When vampires and zombies were pitted together in one-on-one combat, the vampire's advantage in the areas of speed/agility and brain power would usually be enough to trump the zombie's indestructibility. But the zombic tendency to cluster together in large packs often spelled trouble for vampires when the two met out in the real world.

The Science of Vampirism
Top Five Most Likely Places to Find Vampires
By Hugo Pecos
Return to Vampires Versus Zombies

In choosing their abodes, vampires prefer secure, secluded spots near large areas of human population. Here are five places in the United States where you very well might find vampires living today.
DISCLAIMER: This site is not responsible for anything that might happen if you visit these locations. If you must, do not travel unarmed and do not travel alone.

North Brother Island, New York City
Located in the East River just off the southeast end of the Bronx, North Brother Island is thought to be home to one of New York City's last remaining vampire packs.

A derelict of the island

The island has housed various facilities over the years, including a hospital and a drug rehabilitation center. Typhoid Mary, a cook who spread typhoid fever to more than 50 people in New York City, was quarantined here from 1915 until her death in 1938. The island has been abandoned since the 1960s.

In 1974, the FVZA dispersed a pack of vampires that was using the city's subway tunnels to attack people. Three of the pack members commandeered a boat and escaped on the East River. The boat was discovered the next day floating near North Brother Island. There was speculation that the vamps had taken shelter on the island, but by then the FVZA was in its last days and no raid ever took place.

North Brother Island features a number of large, abandoned structures, which make it a perfect spot for a vampire pack looking to lay low until conditions improve. And if those vampires should desire to start hunting again, the large populations of Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx are only a short boat ride away.

Urban explorers have reported seeing signs of habitation on the island. If the FVZA is ever reconstituted, this is one of the first places they should sweep.

Sunset Strip, Los Angeles

The Sunset Strip—the mile-and-a-half stretch of Sunset Boulevard in West Hollywood—wasn't always a hotbed for vampirism. At the start of the 20th century, the Strip was nothing more than a swath of avocado groves. But a combination of zoning laws and population growth made the Strip increasingly attractive to restaurateurs and nightclub operators. And where there is nightlife, there are vampires.

Vampires found lots to love about the Strip, especially after rock and roll venues like the Whiskey a Go-Go, the Rainbow Bar and Grill, and The Roxy arrived in the 1960s and 70s. There was a steady supply of fresh blood among the would-be musicians and groupies, many of whom were runaways from other parts of the country. The nocturnal life of rock and rollers was perfect for a vampire's schedule. And the vampires' gaunt physiques, pale skin and sunglasses fit right in with L.A.'s nightcrawlers. The story of Wanda Schiffler is but one prominent example of the convergence of rock and roll and vampirism along Sunset Boulevard.

Besides plenty of fresh blood, Hollywood supplied vampires with an assortment of moneyed individuals willing to provide them with shelter in return for a promise of immortality. Clever vampires wormed their way into the inner circles of potential "sponsors"—wealthy, aging individuals with mansions and hedonistic lifestyles. European and Arab heirs and heiresses were a favorite target.

Even vampires who didn't find sponsors had plenty of places to hide in the Los Angeles basin. They squatted in unoccupied mansions, holed up in corners of vast warehouses, and even set up shop in tunnels left over by the Pacific Electric Railway.

Today's atmosphere of vampire glorification creates a fertile environment for a rebirth of the undead along Sunset Strip.

New Orleans Cemeteries

New Orleans' high water table made it an inhospitable climate for in-ground burials: graves would fill with water as they were being dug, and caskets buried in the ground frequently floated up and away during periods of heavy rain. To curb this problem, the city's leaders began requiring interments in above-ground crypts. Cemeteries like St. Louis #1 and #2 and St. Roch's became crowded with tombs resembling small homes and featuring intricate ironwork, crosses, urns and statuary.

It's not certain exactly when vampires began inhabiting New Orleans' cemeteries, but they certainly were a presence in the city proper from its earliest days. The FVZA office in New Orleans was always one of the busiest in the nation. In 1957, an FVZA surveillance team came upon a pack of vampires attacking a tourist in the city's popular French Quarter. Agents pursued the vampires into St. Louis Cemetery #1, but lost them among the crypts and narrow alleyways.

The next day, agents conducted a sweep of the cemetery and found the enterprising pack holed up in one of the larger crypts. The agents destroyed the pack, and then located and destroyed two other packs in the cemetery.

Unfortunately, the assault, which damaged several crypts and memorials, prompted an outcry from the public, and city leaders decided to enact an ordinance prohibiting the FVZA from conducting operations inside cemeteries.

It's quite possible—likely, even—that vampires have been using New Orleans' cemeteries as a base for nightly excursions to the French Quarter, where they are sure to find plenty of drunken tourists stumbling about. Consequently, New Orleans is unlikely to lose its reputation as the Vampire Capital of America anytime soon.

The Caves of St. Louis, Missouri

The limestone bedrock that supports the city of St. Louis is home to more than 125 caves, mostly in the area south of downtown. This cave network served a variety of functions through the city's life: in the days before the Civil War, the caves were an important stop for slaves on the Underground Railroad, and the city's brewers often used them to store beer.

The ceiling of a secret vampire lair
The caves also had a darker role in St. Louis' history: as hiding places for vampires.

Vampires began using the caves in the 18th century during the early days of French settlement. Over time, the bloodsuckers created comfortable underground dwellings, with well-protected entrances and sentries to provide ample warning in case anyone approached. At night, they would leave the caves via hidden exits near the river and hunt for blood in busy areas of the city like Laclede's Landing and Lafayette Square.

The FVZA conducted missions into the caves throughout the 20th century. It was difficult, dangerous work, as the vampire packs often booby-trapped cave entrances. During one mission in 1956, four agents were killed when vampires triggered an explosion in a narrow passageway. In the aftermath of the disaster, the Agency decided to scale back operations inside the caves and instead focus on trying to restrict the movements of the vampires: engineers sealed off cave entrances, and FVZA shadows conducted nighttime undercover operations in popular vampire hunting areas.

Reports of vampire attacks in St. Louis dropped through the 1960s and 70s. However, it's probable that many vampires hiding out in the caves had entered a dormant phase during that time. Now, with no FVZA in the way, they're very likely to be on the verge of recommencing their activities.

Downtown Detroit
Take a plethora of abandoned buildings, add a large homeless population, and—presto—you have yourself the ideal setting for a vampirism outbreak.

Brush Park, Detroit
Detroit's downtown area has long had its share of vampires, but the area really became active in the 1970s when the automotive industry fell into decline with the Arab oil embargo and the rise of the Japanese carmakers. Vampires were able to prey upon the homeless during the nighttime hours and then hide away during the day in one of the many abandoned homes in the city's once-grand Brush Park area. The feeding opportunities were so plentiful that some vampire packs became sloppy: in 1973, FVZA agents broke into the basement of a Brush Park home and encountered the hellish sight of dozens of drained and dismembered corpses heaped in the corner.

When the FVZA was disbanded in 1975, Detroit was at the top of the list for likely outbreak locations in the United States.

The economic situation in Detroit has deteriorated further in the ensuing decades, and economic hardships always raise the risk of a vampirism outbreak, since vampires can prey on the homeless for years without being noticed. In addition, Detroit's downtown area is home to a number of commercial buildings that are abandoned or rarely used and could serve as a base for vampiric operations.

Vampiric Virology
Vampires are former humans who have been infected with a viral agent that rewrites the genome of every tissue, resulting in a horrific metamorphosis that defiles both mind and body. Changes to the brain and digestive tract cause them to hunger for the blood of uninfected humans, and they will commit monstrous acts to get it. They are also known for their enhanced physical capabilities, longevity and averse reaction to bright light and UV rays.
In 1616, Italian scientist Ludovico Fatinelli published his Treatise on Vampires, in which he speculated that vampirism was caused by a microscopic pathogen. Tragically, he was burned at the stake for heresy, but his research lived on to inspire countless dedicated men and women to bring you the information included on this page.

The Virus

HVV carrier: vampire bat

HVV source: the bat flea Ischnopsyllus elongatus
The source for this disease is the human vampirism virus (HVV). Like Ebola, rabies, mumps and measles, HVV belongs to the order Mononegavirales—viruses with a nonsegmented, negative-stranded RNA genome. They vary in appearance, but they all bud from infected cells, rather than use the more destructive "fill and burst" method known as lysis. A close ancestor, HVV shares the following characteristics with rabies:

1. Its capsid bears a distinct bullet shape, although it's about triple the size of rabies, and contains over a thousand more genes.

2. It infects cells via endocytosis, meaning that it's absorbed into the cell fully intact. From there, the virus is uncoated so that its genetic material can escape into the cytoplasm. This is different from some other viruses, which either "melt" into the outer membrane or inject their genes from the outside.

3. The virus is zoonotic, meaning that it can be transmitted from one species to another, mainly through biting.

HVV's natural host is a flea commonly found on cave-dwelling bats, including the vampire bat. In the most common scenario, the flea bites a bat, which in-turn passes the virus on to humans and other mammals. It's believed that a vampire's need for blood is derived from both of these animals, possibly through a form of lateral gene transfer between hosts at some point in their evolution.

Transmission & Replication

Unlike many other viruses, HVV is not airborne. Airborne viruses can travel from one host to another through the air and quickly cause an outbreak by infecting a significant number of people through the ventilation systems in large public buildings, such as a casino or shopping mall. Thankfully, HVV is limited only to bodily fluids. The virus can also survive in running water, but the chances of infection are far slimmer. For those who still want to take precautions: drink only bottled water, or buy filters with an iodine matrix. Boiling water for at least five minutes is also a cheaper safeguard.

The virus releases its genetic information into the cell, transforming it into a viral factory.

As touched upon, a virus is a protein shell that introduces its genetic material into the cytoplasm of a vulnerable cell. In effect, the virus takes over the cell's machinery and uses it as a factory for more viral proteins. This usually kills the cell, since it can no longer perform its normal functions, and the release of virus progeny is quite damaging to the cell's membrane. With HVV, the cell is instead altered so that it can "multitask" its own needs—such as regenerating its membrane—while also producing virus clones. Infection of the thyroid gland raises the host's metabolism, allowing the virus to spread even faster throughout the body. This causes gradual weight loss as the body uses up nutrients to fuel the transformation, until the virus enters latency to avoid working the cells to death.

While most viruses are highly specific in what tissues they target, HVV is able to infect every living cell in the body, with the exception of red blood cells. Its replication cycle is also frighteningly rapid, with an incubation period lasting only six to twelve hours.

Although technically a mononegavirus, HVV behaves more like a retrovirus, such as HIV. Once inside a cell's cytoplasm, the virus uses a reverse-transcriptase enzyme to produce DNA from its RNA genome, via the cell's ribosomes. This new DNA is then absorbed into the nucleus and incorporated into the host's genome via an integrase enzyme, becoming a provirus—which in-turn transforms the cell and directs it to synthesize new virions. This is much different from other mononegaviruses, which do not produce DNA or use the nucleus for replication.

While in theory HVV infection is possible through any exchange of bodily fluids, transmission occurs through the bite of an infected person or animal in virtually every case. Provided the immune system is in working order and a proper vaccine is administered in time, the host's body will be able to recognize and destroy any cells showing signs of infection, along with the virions they produce. Depending on the amount of cells destroyed, the patient may require rest and recovery while the body repairs itself. A single vaccination remains effective for up to two years before a booster shot is required—unless of course the victim is drained of blood to the point of reduced immune function.

Additional Facts

HVV has a wide variety of glycoproteins, which function as keys.
Ingestion/Injection: Contrary to popular myth, ingestion of vampire blood does not speed up the transformation in any way. Not only are most of the virus particles destroyed by digestive enzymes, the blood itself may curdle in the stomach and cause the victim to vomit. As for directly injecting vampire blood, this is even worse. Unlike human blood, which may or may not match the recipient's blood type, vampire blood is highly toxic and will always produce an extreme allergic reaction that is often times fatal.
Locks & Keys: The reason why most viruses can only infect a certain number of tissues is because they're very limited by the amount of genetic information they can carry. This information is needed to construct the "keys" lining the outer capsid, and they have to be compatible with a cell's surface "locks" in order for the virus to infiltrate it. Although every cell has the same DNA, different cell types express different genes, so their outer receptors will be different. There are around 210 types of cells that make up the human body, each with their own locks, and HVV has a special key for almost all of them. Because the virus is so large, it has no trouble storing all the information required to make them.

Antibodies: While it's true that most victims will experience a rapid immune response within several hours of exposure, no actual HVV antibodies are produced before it's too late, since the body has never encountered it before. As you may know, an antibody is a special protein that latches onto a foreign antigen, which allows the immune system to recognize and destroy it. Created by plasma cells, antibodies are unique and work only with the antigens they were made for, and generally aren't produced until days or even weeks after a new infection. HVV symptoms are instead the result of secondary infections and chemical imbalances caused by both the virus and the bite wound it came in through.

Red Blood Cells: Making up approximately one quarter of the 100 trillion cells in the average human body, red blood cells (erythrocytes) are the only ones that lack a nucleus and other organelles. As a result, no virus in existence can infect them, and this includes HVV. However, the virus can still infect the bone marrow, where it can then modify the production of new erythrocytes. Since 2.4 million of them are destroyed and replaced every second, it doesn't take long for much of the bloodstream to change. Still, there are 25 to 30 trillion RBCs in all, and the vampire spleen doesn't work any faster at removing "old" human blood. In effect, it will take a good three to four months for a newly-turned vampire to replace its entire blood volume.

Viral Reactivation: Like the various herpes viruses, HVV usually remains dormant in a fully-transformed vampire—aside from the viral shedding from dying cells into its saliva and other fluids. Only when the immune system is seriously compromised does the virus reawaken and resume its replication cycle, should the following conditions be met: severe malnutrition, extreme psychological stress, and prolonged exposure to ultraviolet rays. Unlike the early replication process prior to post-transformation latency, this form of viral activity is much more damaging, causing shingles-like blisters to erupt from the nerve endings of affected tissues. However, these painful sores will quickly heal if the vampire calms, feeds or gets out of the sun long enough for the virus to become dormant again.

The Science of Vampirism
Extended Edition: Part II
By Robert Lomax
Return to Part I

Origin & Evolution

Vampirism has plagued our ancestors for millions of years, as evidenced by the virus' complexity and compatibility with our species compared to other mammals. 25,000-year-old rock paintings, found at the Apollo 11 cave in the African country of Namibia, provide more concrete evidence to this theory. It's also believed that vampirism was a likely cause of the mass exodus from Africa 125,000 years ago. Despite this long history, the virus didn't seem to start spreading to other continents until around 5000 BC, which implies that some kind of containment measure was used.

Early human migration across the Red Sea

The actual evolution of the human vampirism virus is difficult to comprehend, since viruses are far too small and fragile to properly fossilize. However, judging by their similar structures, it's believed that HVV and rabies share a common ancestor—not unlike apes and humans.

Vampirism spans numerous eras and cultures.

HVV probably started off identical to rabies before mutating into a virus more similar to HIV and HPV, which alter cellular DNA. As detailed before, HVV bears the following differences from other viruses: it can infect and replicate in cells without destroying them, infect many different types of cells, and complete its incubation period in less than 24 hours. It's also the most logical order in which the virus evolved these characteristics. Most viruses to this day are no more advanced than they were thousands of years ago because they still haven't "learned" to stop killing the cells they infect. This is perhaps HVV's greatest evolutionary achievement, as it set the foundation for many beneficial mutations to occur. Infection of the entire body was another important step, as it would prevent rejection of mismatched tissue. From there, infection of the thyroid gland resulted in faster replication.

Despite these accomplishments, the virus would still need to go through a long and rigorous refinement process in order to correctly "rewrite" all the cells they infect. Early proto-vampires were most likely mindless, feeble and short-lived—riddled with cancer, tissue necrosis and immune disorders before natural selection weeded out the failures. Non-human mammals provide some proof of this, as they will display these very symptoms after transformation, and generally die within a week. The virus has no effect on non-mammalian species, although they can still become short-term carriers before the virus dies in their system. The only known long-term carrier is the aforementioned bat flea.

No intact or discernible fossils of vampires older than 10,000 years have ever been discovered, unfortunately, leaving only these educated guesses regarding their evolution.

Stages of the Disease

Electron micrograph of HVV (L).
The virus budding off an infected cell (R).
Stage One: Infection.
Within six to twelve hours of exposure, the victim develops a headache, fever, chills and other flu-like symptoms. These can be easily confused with influenza and other common infections, although the presence of pinpricks or puncture wounds on the body is usually enough to confirm the diagnosis. An increase in metabolism occurs as well, resulting in faster heart rate, extreme thirst, excessive sweating, frequent urination, rapid weight loss, and moderate to severe itching. These symptoms generally last another six to twelve hours, during which the vaccine is over 98 percent effective. The bite wound itself will become badly bruised and inflamed during this stage, and should be cleaned as thoroughly as possible and treated with antibiotics. The victim should also make sure to drink plenty of fluids to avoid dehydration.

In 1800 France, an infected woman is given a transfusion of goat's blood— a desperate,
futile measure to ward off the disease.
Stage Two: Coma. Within 24 hours of exposure, the victim will slip into a vampiric coma. During this phase, pulse and breathing are fast and erratic, the pupils are dilated, and the skin is sweating profusely; virus production, cellular conversion and weight loss continue at a rapid but steady pace. While it is commonly believed that anyone infected with HVV turns into a vampire, in fact only a small percentage of people survive vampiric comas. Generally, the very young, old and feeble never come out of their comas and eventually die, while the vast majority of survivors are males between the ages of 18 to 35. For the latter group, vampiric comas last about a day and typically end at night, but the former demographic may linger for an additional day or so before death. The vaccine is roughly 50 percent effective when administered during the first half of this stage: the longer the coma has passed, the less effective the vaccine. Vaccination is of no use once the body becomes cold and the heart slows to a complete stop. Although this means death for most victims, it's only a ruse for others: metabolism, breathing and circulation persist, but at a very faint capacity. Thousands have been buried alive because of this.

During vampirism epidemics,
still in a vampiric coma.
Stage Three: Transformation. An HVV victim who survives the coma will awaken fully transformed into a vampire. An acclimation period follows—characterized by confusion, despondency and paranoia, along with the pain of dehydration and malnutrition. If the fledgling is at a house or other place of residence, it may attempt to normalize its situation by getting a drink of water, using the bathroom, or taking a shower—completely in denial about what it's become. These old comforts won't last long, unfortunately; soon, an overwhelming hunger for blood will take over and drown out all other needs and concerns. Within 24 hours of transformation, the vampire will abandon its former life and begin hunting—starting with pets, and even friends and family, if need be. All virus activity goes dormant once its mutagenic task is complete, and will remain within the mutated cells and body fluids until introduced into the warm bloodstream of another human or non-human mammal, where it will awaken to start the process all over again.

Additional Symptoms

Although many of the symptoms during the first stage of infection are virtually identical to influenza, the more unusual ones should be cause for alarm.

In the interest of public health, we've compiled a full list for both the first and second stages of infection. Unless stated otherwise, they'll generally appear during the first stage and become progressively worse up until the coma, where they'll stabilize and persist until the transformation is complete.

Vampire vaccine in an earlier incarnation

Unfortunately, hospitals in the United States no longer carry stores of the human vampirism immune globulin and vaccine (known together as simply "the vaccine"). The remaining supply is locked away in an underground vault at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Georgia. The decision to store the supply came in 1963 after U.S. officials deemed the threat from vampires to be over. There was also concern over the safety of having vaccine accessible at hospitals, since in rare cases it can actually cause vampirism.

If you feel you have contracted HVV, then you should head to the nearest hospital straight away, and hope for the best. If you were bitten by an animal, tell them that the symptoms showed up within several hours so they can rule out rabies and other diseases. If it was a vampire, show them the bite wound and describe what the attacker looked like: pale skin, bloodshot eyes and dilated pupils should suffice. Do not mention vampirism, because you'll just sound crazy. Hopefully they'll call the CDC and convince them to fly the vaccine out to you in time. The closer you live to Atlanta, the higher your chances will be. If you're lucky enough to live in Atlanta, then you should definitely head to the CDC instead of a hospital.

HVV patients were typically restrained during their treatment and recovery.

Bite Wound: The mouth of a vampire (or vampire bat) is saturated with not only HVV virions, but also bacteria and anticoagulants. As a result of this unhealthy cocktail, the wound will experience moderate to severe bruising and inflammation, with persistent aching that turns to tingling and numbness as the coma nears. Vampiric saliva also contains a potent narcotic that makes the victim drowsy.

Systemic: High fever, with moderate to severe chills. Viral infection of the thyroid gland increases metabolism for the purpose of faster replication. Drying of the tissues, dilated vessels and weight loss are some of the more prominent metabolic symptoms, and can be potentially fatal if the victim becomes overly dehydrated or malnourished. Hormones secreted by the infected cells can also cause symptoms such as acne and heavy menstruation. During the coma, fever is dangerously high and persists for roughly 12 hours, before dropping sharply into room temperature.

A comatose child shortly before her death.
Note the bloodshot, hyperdilated eye.
Eyes: Inflammation, watering and blurred vision. Pupils become fully dilated during the coma.

Ears: Dryness, itching and aching in the outer ear, with aching and congestion in the tubes of the middle ear.

Nose: Sneezing and congestion with clear discharge.

Mouth: Dryness and chapped lips; inflammation of the oral mucosa, with possible ulceration.

Throat/Lungs: Dryness, coughing, soreness and inflammation, with possible ulceration of the esophagus. Moderate to severe inflammation of the lungs during the coma, which can be fatal.

Skin: Dryness, itching, flaking and possible cracking; flushing, with redness around the eyes, nose, mouth and throat; excessive sweating, with possible acne and hives in places covered by clothing. During the coma, some degree of acne and hives will appear on the victim's back and buttocks, as well as the backside of their shoulders, arms and legs if they're laying completely flat.

Brain/Nerves: Headache, dizziness and general discomfort; hypersensitivity to stimuli such as light, sound and touch; insomnia, mood swings and irritability, with possible auditory hallucinations. Dementia, tingling, numbness, loss of motor control and partial paralysis shortly before the coma, with possible seizures. Moderate to severe inflammation of the brain during the coma, which can be fatal.

Muscles: Fatigue, weakness and joint pain, with shivering due to chills, and minor spasms in the extremities. During the coma, these spasms become more synchronized, allowing blood flow to continue even after the heart stops.

Heart: Increased heart rate, with high blood pressure and possible palpitations. Can be potentially fatal for those with pre-existing conditions. Moderate to severe palpitations during the coma until around the halfway mark, when the heart slows and cardiac arrest sets in.

GI Tract/Bladder: Extreme thirst, loss of appetite and frequent urination; nausea, vomiting and abdominal pain with possible bloating, excess gas and diarrhea (depending on food contents); moderate to severe acid reflux and inflammation of the stomach lining, with possible ulceration.

An example of skin discoloration, flaking and abdominal swelling during the coma

Liver/Spleen: Moderate to severe swelling and inflammation with concurrent abdominal pain and fluid bloating, all of which can be easily confused with the GI symptoms. This interference with their normal functions also causes a gradual buildup of the waste product bilirubin in the victim's bloodstream and extracellular fluid, causing the skin and the whites of the eyes to develop a sickly yellow coloration during the coma stage.

Blood/Vessels: Viral interference with the liver, bone marrow and vessel lining causes a temporary reduction in clotting factors and coagulation. As a result, the hyperdilated vessels will leak more easily, causing the skin to bruise and the victim to cough up, vomit and excrete blood, with possible hemorrhoid formation. Mild bleeding from the eyes, nose, gums and sweat glands may also occur as well, either during the coma or just before it hits. If the victim is susceptible to strokes, then this can be potentially fatal.

Lymph Nodes/Vessels: Moderate to severe swelling and inflammation, causing the neck to appear lumpy or enlarged.

Natural Immunity

As with some diseases, a very small portion of the population will display natural immunity to HVV. An estimated one in every 150 victims will only show symptoms for about a week before the disease disappears completely, with no coma whatsoever. The study of antibodies first began in 1890 when Japanese physician Kitasato Shibasaburō described antibody activity against the virus while looking at immune blood samples, but the finer mechanics weren't understood until the early 1900s. Unlike most victims, immune hosts will produce antibodies as soon as they start showing symptoms. As explained before, it can take days or weeks for the body to produce antibodies for a new infection. The one exception to this rule is "natural antibodies," which are believed to be the result of microbes native to the body since birth.

Because HVV has such a wide variety of glycoproteins on its surface, it also means more antigen types, which makes the virus much more vulnerable if it happens to have just one antigen that an existing antibody can lock into. The most logical explanation for immunity is that the virus will sometimes share a similar antigen with a microbe the host already developed antibodies for. Whether it's the result of natural antibodies is unknown.

It's quite possible that if it wasn't for this phenomenon, early humans would have been completely wiped out by vampirism.

Past Treatments

Even before 1890, attempts were made to utilize immune blood as a cure—through the use of transfusions.

Since the 1830s, hundreds were institutionalized so they could be used as human blood farms, which was excused as a necessary evil at the time. Even worse, before the discovery of the ABO blood group system in 1900, this ended up killing thousands of recipients due to mismatched donors. This too was brushed off as being a better alternative to vampirism. In addition, the antibodies in each transfusion would only last about three months before a new one was required—otherwise the infection would relapse from an apparent dormancy, since a recipient won't produce their own antibodies as long as they have someone else's. Because of the sheer rarity of compatible blood, this form of treatment was far from reliable, and ended up being a luxury only the very rich could afford. It was a sad irony, humans depending on blood to avoid vampirism.

Many vampires were studied behind the walls of this facility in the Dry Tortugas.

A more radical treatment involved removal of the thyroid gland, the organ responsible for the virus' rapid replication. Unfortunately, it also slowed the body's ability to make antibodies. In the end, it only prolonged the inevitable by about a week, and all cases resulted in death during the coma stage.

Without a long-term vaccine, infection was basically a death sentence for civilians and agents alike. In the early days of the Agency, these unfortunate individuals would be imprisoned and kept alive for study after they turned. There was, according to historical accounts, a rather hellish facility in the Dry Tortugas for this very purpose, until it was leveled in 1915. In later years, victims were at least given the option of being euthanized, as opposed to facing outright vivisection. It was a difficult scenario for everyone involved, and it certainly didn't help recruitment numbers. Worse, many infected agents would flee and become the organization's most dangerous adversaries: vampires with all the knowledge and training of an FVZA agent.

The 1943 plan that sought to put an end to all this was dubbed the Zozobra Project, after the giant marionette that's built and burned every autumn in Santa Fe, New Mexico. Although this detail has been long forgotten by most, the marionette is actually an effigy of a vampire, as evidenced by its pale face and black eyes. By burning him, people would destroy their worries and troubles in the flames. It was an effective form of catharsis for many who lost loved ones to vampire attacks.

Zozobra (2007)

The Zozobra Project

Note from Mr. Lomax: The following is a personal testimony of Dr. Hugo Pecos, based mostly on his site biography and fleshed out by a few private interviews. As such, it will be told from his perspective.

During the War, I gained valuable experience fighting vampires and treating those wounded by them. And so, after I returned to the States, I was summoned to Washington, D.C., where I first heard the words "Zozobra Project."

The Zozobra Project was an attempt to bring an end to many millennia of vampiric activity by developing a vaccine for the virus. Mindful of what happened to my brother, I signed on.

Zozobra Project housing was rustic at best.

A day later, in an atmosphere of stone-faced secrecy, I was flown to the Air Force base in Albuquerque and then escorted into the back of a van with no windows. About an hour or so later, I arrived at what could have passed for a summer camp, except for all the scientists milling about.

The scientists of the Project were a true "dream team." Men I had read about in books were now sitting across from me in the lunchroom. As one of the younger scientists, I felt like I was in over my head. But there was no time for anxiety, as reports of vampirism outbreaks were reaching us almost every day.

The early years of the Project were a string of failures. In vaccine work, the objective is to expose the patient to enough of the virus to develop immunity, but not enough to make him sick. With the human vampirism vaccine, it was always the same problem: injections of "killed" virus failed to stimulate antibody production, and injections of the treated live virus caused vampirism. We knew that the secret lay in finding the right way of manipulating the virus before injecting it into the patient.

We did, however, find success in another branch of research: harvesting antibodies from immune blood by separating and purifying the plasma to make it safe for any blood type. This byproduct is known as immune globulin. Once injected into an infected host, these donor antibodies would immediately mark the viral antigens as targets for the immune cells to neutralize. Unfortunately, as with regular transfusions, immunity only lasted about three months before the infection came back. We needed a vaccine for long-term protection, as well as to produce more globulin.

Fortunately, the War ended without the threatened onslaught of vampiric armies; but most of us stayed on with the Project, plugging away. Weeks turned to months, turned to years. To alleviate the stress and isolation, we played chess, watched movies, listened to music, formed a softball team and enjoyed frequent barbecues.

Harvesting the vaccine

Five years after the Project had begun, we finally had a breakthrough. Simply put, we injected the virus into a fertilized chicken egg, where it would then multiply in the cells of the growing embryo. After 24 hours, we took fluid from that egg and injected it into another egg, and repeated the process about a dozen times. In doing this, we were able to weaken the virus, but not so much that it failed to stimulate antibody production.

One would think this would obviate the need for globulin, but vaccine on its own has a major disadvantage: once inoculated, it takes at least a few days for the plasma cells to start producing antibodies. While this is great news for those who can get vaccinated before being bitten, it's completely useless otherwise. The two go hand-in-hand: the vaccine confers years of immunity and produces useful antibodies, while the globulin provides immediate protection until the vaccine can take effect.

Now that we had perfected this duality, we required just one more thing: a human test subject.

The First Recipient

On a sunny October morning (Friday the 13th, believe it or not), a 35-year-old Santa Fe auto mechanic named Joseph Valdez was taken to a facility in the small town of Santa Rosa showing early signs of vampirism. Leaving our compound for the first time in five years, it was a tense and bumpy ride for my four colleagues and me. No windows, as usual.
By the time we arrived, Valdez had already been cleaned up, treated with antibiotics, and given a blood transfusion to replace the pints he lost to his attacker. After some greetings and introductions, we prepared a small, plastic cooler full of single-dose vials. Using a 50cc syringe, I then administered the globulin: one 10cc shot of viscous, molasses-like serum into the muscle of his left lower neck, right at the bite wound. Opening a cooler of larger vials, we used a 30cc syringe to give him the vaccine: 20 CCs of a more aqueous solution, divided evenly into six patches of abdominal muscle. Despite his bite-induced drowsiness, the whole regimen was far from pleasant for him.

It was a long day and night as Mr. Valdez tossed and turned with fever, before slipping into a vampiric coma. We saw this coming thanks to our animal testing, but it barely put a dent in our anxiety. Following cautionary procedures, we restrained the unconscious man and made preparations to euthanize him if he started to show definite signs of transformation—with his signed permission, of course.

When morning finally came, we checked on Mr. Valdez in his room. Much to our amazement, we found him awake with no further symptoms!

A certain doctor examines Joe Valdez six weeks after he received
the vampirism vaccine.
As the remnants of his disease faded, Valdez remained at the facility for his follow-up vaccinations: three on the second day, three on the third, two on the fifth, and two on the seventh. He became completely healthy by the second week. However, he had to stay for six more months to make sure he didn't relapse, and his blood was needed as well. We made sure to keep him comfortable, of course, and allowed frequent visits from his family.

During this time, we got back to work harvesting more vaccine from our chicken eggs, while hundreds more patients arrived for treatment. We could only accommodate five more people for follow-up shots, observation and blood donation, but we sent the others to local and state hospitals for that purpose. Many gallons of inoculated blood was harvested, which we were able to synthesize into more globulin. Soon, entire stockpiles were shipped out all over the country and the rest of the world, forever stunting the spread of this terrible affliction. Even better, none of our patients showed any signs of relapse!

Santa Rosa Institute; 1955

After we wished him and his fellow patients a heartfelt goodbye, Joe Valdez returned to his home in Santa Fe, where few would know of his historic contribution to society. He lived a long, quiet life with his family, and died of natural causes in 1994.

To this day, no viral relapse has ever been reported to occur in recipients of the HVV vaccine.

Vaccine and globulin production peaked in the late 1950s and tapered off after that. No new batches were produced after 1965. The CDC estimates it has a combined total of 250,000 doses on hand—far too little to treat a full-scale outbreak. They claim that existing vials can be diluted to stretch out the supply, but there are no studies to support this. Not to sound too alarmist, but if an outbreak occurred today, it would take several months to ramp up vaccine production, during which time the outbreak could have claimed millions.

Vampiric Biology
Untreated, a person who comes out of a vampiric coma will have undergone a number of major physiological changes affecting the various systems of the body. The information included below is an overview of those changes, taken from writings that are no longer in circulation. These include Kristof Goessman's Among Vampires & Zombies, Henry Gray's Anatomy of the Vampire, and Andreas Vesalius' Five Books on the Structure of the Vampire Body.

Brain & Nervous System
A vampire's nervous system is similar to humans and has proven to be their Achilles' heel, as injuries to the spinal cord and brain can be devastating for them, and they remain just as vulnerable to electricity. While a vampire's spinal cord and nerves (mostly) work as before transformation, a number of changes take place in the brain, and that altered brain chemistry goes a long way toward understanding vampiric behavior.

The normal brain (L) shows much more serotonin activity than the vampiric brain (R).
Serotonin: Vampires have much lower levels of this neurotransmitter than humans. Serotonin acts as an inhibitor against violent, aggressive and impulsive behavior, which also explains why criminals such as murderers and rapists have so little of it in their brains. Unfortunately, no conventional medications can reverse this in vampires.

Dopamine/Endorphins: These neurotransmitters induce feelings of euphoria, and are released in a vampire's brain when it feeds. Neural pathways activated in feeding vampires are much like those found in drug users. In fact, vampires are highly susceptible to drug addiction, which can occur simply by drinking the blood of an addict. Cocaine and opiates (such as morphine and heroin) can mitigate a vampire's hunger by altering its dopamine and endorphin receptors, causing it to become lethargic and disinterested in hunting. This also causes its pupils to contract, inhibiting its keen night vision. A vampire that continues to indulge in drugs will die from malnutrition in a matter of weeks. For more information, see the 1880 case of the opium vampires.

Circadian Rhythms: Chemical changes in the brain that help us "rise and shine" with the morning light are reversed in vampires.

Extrasensory Perception: Compared to humans, vampires are perceptive to the point of bordering on precognition. One researcher identified the source of this ability as enlarged amygdalae—a pair of almond-shaped nuclei located deep within the brain, devoted to processing, memory, emotional reactions and identifying danger. This is thought to be an adaptive change that allows vampires to anticipate danger before it's manifest, resulting in faster reflexes. It also helps them figure out what people are thinking based on certain cues: eye and muscle movement, mannerisms, vocal tone, breathing, flushing of the skin, pulsating vessels, perspiration, etc. Even the most subtle expression appears greatly exaggerated, making it almost impossible to lie to them. A downside to this powerful attention to detail is that vampires are much more prone to obsessive habits, such as rearranging and counting objects.

Photosensitivity: Vampires are very sensitive to all light, but the ultraviolet rays emitted by the sun cause them special problems: UV light that enters a vampire's eyes sets off a chain reaction in their brain that leads to violent convulsions, which can be fatal for vampires stuck out in the sun for too long. Even if a vampire were to close its eyes, the lids just aren't thick enough to block out these harmful rays (which is also why people who spend time in tanning beds wear special goggles). However, there are sunglasses now that provide near-perfect protection from UV light.

Sense Organs

Powerful sense organs give vampires an advantage in both hunting and eluding capture. Sneaking up on them is virtually impossible, as they are aware of your presence long before you are aware of theirs.

A normal eye compared with a vampire's

Sight: In vampires, the iris in each eye becomes hyperdilated, giving them what appear to be black eyes. In addition, increased reflectivity of the retina causes them to shimmer in the dark, reminiscent of the tapetum lucidum in many nocturnal animals. This is the result of glittering tissue that reflects unabsorbed light back into the rod cells. While all this gives vampires excellent night vision, it renders them effectively blind in daylight. They also experience extreme vasodilation of the sclera, making the whites of their eyes appear red. To disguise themselves, vampires will take to wearing either sunglasses or contact lenses.

A vampire's glowing retinas

Smell/Hearing: Both senses are extremely acute: thanks to a combination of hypertrophic cerebral neurons and additional receptor cells, hearing range (and differentiation) is tripled while smell is tenfold. There is a downside to this, as vampires are much more sensitive to pepper spray, air horns and the sound of gunfire. They can also hear dog whistles, and other high-frequency noises that human ears can't pick up. Over time, fluid loss causes the cartilage of the ear helix to shrink and take on a somewhat pointed appearance.

Touch: Despite the fact that vampires experience less blood flow in their epidermal tissues, their nerve endings are actually much more sensitive than a human's, due to enlargement of the primary somatosensory cortex. While this greatly improves their balance and reflex action, it also makes physical sensations such as touch, heat, cold and the feeling of water quite uncomfortable for them—not unlike those suffering from autism. Pain, however, is somewhat dulled.

Taste: Not only is the taste of human blood much stronger for vampires, those with experience can even tell the following about the person it came from: general age range, gender, blood type, general diet, and the presence of adrenaline and drugs. Similar to a drowning victim, vampiric gums take on a ghastly pale-purple color, while the tongue is a darker greyish-purple during rest and more pinkish when fully circulated (especially before feeding).

Hair, Skin, Teeth & Nails

Part of the terror of encountering a vampire stems from dramatic changes to their outer appearance. Some of these changes are functional, while others are simply the result of various chemical imbalances.

As you can see, the upper fangs are quite straight compared to the curved lower fangs.

Teeth: During the latter half of the vampiric coma, the upper and lower eyeteeth experience rapid growth. Produced inside the pulp, specialized ameloblasts travel through the narrow pores of the dentin and crown. Once they reach the surface, they will deposit additional enamel onto its tip, creating a sharp fang. If the victim has artificial crowns, fillings, bridges or veneers, the fangs will simply grow through and break off the impediment. There's also a small groove on the back of each fang that helps vacuum up blood as the vampire feeds, and many will file the tips to make them sharper. As a vampire "ages," fluid loss causes a noticeable recession of the gums, making the teeth appear longer. They also become quite discolored over time, as dental hygiene is usually neglected.

Dental Regeneration: Vampires who have had their teeth pulled out—both before and after transformation—have been observed to regrow their top and bottom canines within a month (while having to rely on knives in the meantime). Unfortunately, these replacement fangs are thinner and don't protrude as much, which makes feeding a bit more difficult. Since even the slightest damage is repaired, vampires are incapable of getting permanent cavities in their fangs, and they'll have to keep filing them to keep them sharp. If the vampire has a dental implant (which is screwed into the jawbone), then no regeneration will occur, since the root canal is effectively destroyed by a drill prior to implantation.

Close-up of a vampire's skin and veins

Skin: As with late-stage coma victims, a newly-transformed vampire has a sickly, pale-yellow skin tone (jaundice) from all the bilirubin in its system. Over the next 72 hours, blood circulation slows even further—especially in the surface capillaries—causing the skin to fade to a ghastly bluish tone. Vampiric complexion depends largely on race and ethnicity: those of African descent will appear more greyish, while untanned Caucasians are nearly as white as a fishbelly. Warm temperatures, strenuous activity and nutritional intake cause the surface capillaries to open up more, making the skin appear less blue. Unsurprisingly, a starved vampire will relapse back to that sallow jaundice pallor once its organs start failing. Over a matter of years, vampiric skin becomes more and more translucent as its fat and water stores shrink away, revealing a fine network of veins underneath. Thinner areas of skin, such as the eye sockets, lids and lips, are the first to be affected by these changes. To disguise themselves, vampires will cover as much skin as possible with clothing, and apply thick makeup to the rest.

An Italian woman before and after contracting vampirism in 1831

Scent: Vampires bear a strong, unpleasant odor reminiscent of ammonia. Because vampires don't urinate that often, toxins build up in their bloodstream and into their sweat, causing a stench that worsens as bacteria grows in it. Natural pheromones only add to the aroma. Before venturing out in public, they'll take great pains to bathe themselves and cover their scent with deodorants, colognes and perfumes. If you've ever smelled musky cat urine, then you already know the foulness of an unwashed vampire.

Wound inflicted by a jagged vampire claw.
Those from pointed claws are more narrow and deep.

Nails: Both fingernails and toenails thicken, yellow and grow at a rapid rate—closer to the speed of human hair. Because keratin growth occurs only at the nail's proximal end, it takes a while for the tough new nails to fully replace the old ones: a month or two for fingernails, and three to six for toenails. To prevent tension on their nail beds, vampires will generally keep their nails within a centimeter in length, and also quite jagged or pointed to help them grab victims and injure opponents. Alpha vampires tend to keep their nails longer as a display of status, since they don't do much actual hunting or fighting. Contrary to some fiction, vampire claws typically don't have the sharpness and tensile strength to rip open arteries and tear off faces, although they can still cause nasty scrapes and gouge out eyes. They're mainly used for grabbing, while combat is reserved for fists, feet, teeth and knives. Provided they're not wearing full-fingered gloves, nail length remains an effective way to spot a disguised vampire.

A 68-year-old vampire suffering from the effects of UV exposure after a failed suicide attempt; 1942.
Note the pointed ears and lack of hair.

Photosensitivity: As stated previously, vampiric skin becomes highly inflamed and blistered when exposed to ultraviolet light, causing serious burns and scarring as well. This reaction is a more severe form of that found in people who suffer from shingles, along with some aspects of lupus. In addition, vampires will slowly lose all their skin pigment due to a form of vitiligo, which only exacerbates their sun allergy. In order for a vampire to go out in the sun, it would have to wear UV-proof clothing, powerful sunblock, top-of-the-line sunglasses, and a large umbrella. Going out on cloudy winter days would obviously be safer, and prevent the possibility of overheating.

Hair: Hair growth slows down substantially—closer to the rate of human nails. For instance, while it takes about a day or so for stubble to appear after a human shaves, it can take almost a week for a vampire. Because vampiric nails use more protein, the growth speed of both tissues is drastically reversed. Not only that, once a follicle reaches its terminal length and falls out, each regrowth will become smaller and lighter until it's gone for good. Since blood supply is also a factor, the extremities are the first to go completely, while other areas simply become patchy. Next up is torso and facial hair —including the eyebrows, eyelashes and nasal hair. Then what's left on the scalp will disappear as well. Within ten years of transformation, a vampire's entire epidermis will be completely bald, with not even a hint of peach fuzz. Some vampires will cut or shave their hair before it's all gone, while others will simply yank it out with their bare hands. To disguise their alopecia, vampires will take to wearing wigs, hats and hoods over their naked scalps. They've also been known to glue on synthetic eyebrows and eyelashes, as well as mustaches, goatees and beards. Disturbingly, many vampires made their own wigs by scalping their victims.

Adaptations in their skeletal and muscular systems give vampires significant advantages over humans. Not only are they superb athletes with enhanced strength and speed putting them on par with even world-class sprinters and weightlifters, they can also perform much longer before fatigue sets in.
Vocal Folds: During the coma, structural changes in the larynx cause vampires to speak more quietly. As a result, their voices crack when they try to shout, which is why they prefer to hiss, expelling air through their clenched mouths. Over the years as their mucous membranes thin and they lose elasticity in their vocal cords, a male vampire will develop a higher, thinner-sounding voice, while a female's voice will deepen. Contrary to some fiction, vampires do not growl like wolves or roar like lions, but they can emit high-pitched shrieks if they scream loud enough.

X-ray of a vampire's
Muscles/Connective Tissue: About 90% of vampiric muscles are of the fast-twitch variety (compared to 50% for the average human). This brand of musculature enables short bursts of maximal force, ideal when hunting prey. However, unlike typical fast-twitch muscles, vampiric muscles are highly resistant to fatigue, thanks to a drastic increase in myoglobin and mitochondria. Much like cardiac muscle, this allows a greater amount of activity without lactic acid buildup. This makes a newly-turned vampire 3 to 5 times stronger than before transformation, with a top running speed of 25 to 30 miles per hour, and a vertical leaping ability of at least 10 feet. Ligaments and tendons thicken in response to the workload imposed upon them by the muscles, and gradual fluid loss causes a vampire's muscle tissue to shrink by roughly 35% (with no apparent loss of power). Starving vampires lose even more water weight, as well as muscle protein, but these discrepancies can be regained after feeding. Because of the extra feeding required, bodybuilders rarely continue their profession after transformation, causing their extra musculature to waste away over the course of a year.

Skeletal System: Osteoblast production causes a vampire's entire skeleton to harden and thicken, both during the coma and after each feeding. This makes their bones much more efficient at absorbing shock from high-impact forces such as jumping, falling, blunt trauma, and even bullets. As a vampire loses its fat and water stores, its overall height will shrink down by 1 to 3 inches, due to a gradual contraction of the ligaments between the joints and spinal vertebrae. The former symptom results in frequent crackling and popping of the joints, while the latter causes the spine to curve into a hunchback (a condition known as kyphosis). The taller a vampire is, the more height it will lose, since a longer spine will curve more than a shorter one.

Respiratory & Digestive System
A vampire's slowed metabolism allows them to survive on a purely-liquid diet, as well as less oxygen.
Respiration: Because vampires don't produce much body heat, oxygen use is cut down by roughly two-thirds. Along with the fact they can absorb more oxygen with each breath, this allows them to go significantly longer without drowning or suffocating. For example, while an average human takes 12 to 20 breaths per minute (at rest), a vampire takes only 3 to 7.

What vampires are most known for Saliva: As with vampire bats, vampiric saliva contains a potent anticoagulant known as Draculin, which makes blood flow much more easily down their gullets—and keeps it from curdling in the stomach so it won't be regurgitated. Vampiric saliva also contains a useful narcotic that renders victims less able to fight back.

Diet: As you may know, the average human body contains 5 to 6 liters of blood, but a vampire's stomach can only hold about 1.5 liters. While a pack of vampires has no problem draining a single victim, a lone vampire is forced to rely on a series of smaller feedings over a period of several hours. This is where its narcotic-like saliva comes in, as it keeps the victim sedated while the vampire goes back and forth between feeding and draining its bladder. Similar to humans with solid food, a vampire can go more than a month without drinking blood; but they're also different in that they can go equally as long without any kind of water, while humans can only go about a week.

A bottle of vampiric urine
Digestion:
Because blood is 50% water, half of it is shed through sweat and urine, and the other half through defecation. Depending on how often a vampire feeds, urination can take place anywhere from an hour after each feeding to once a week, with defecation on a weekly basis to once a month. Like other carnivorous creatures, the high iron content in human blood makes vampiric excrement completely black. Depending on how often they urinate, it can be anywhere from clear to tea-colored.

Fat: Vampires experience a noticeable degree of weight loss during the coma, since they require a tangible amount of fuel to change their body structure—hence why they're starving by the time they wake up. Vampires who are overweight will shed the extra pounds over a matter of weeks, thanks to their liquid diet and highly active lifestyle. Despite the rapid weight loss, hanging skin is never a permanent problem for a vampire, since victims who are obese/old enough to cause irreversible skin stretching never survive vampiric comas anyway. Needless to say, vampirism is not a recommended weight loss remedy.

Dietary Substitutes: Vampires have trouble digesting solid food, and soup is one of the few forms of sustenance they can hold down. During the Middle Ages, vampires in urban areas often opened secret restaurants called potages, after the French word for "soup." These restaurants became their de facto meeting places, as well as shelters where they could hide out from hunters. As a result, soup became a symbol of brotherhood among the vampire race, and only the most trusted civilians were invited into their potages. Vampires are also very limited in what they can drink: carbonated beverages such as soda and beer are hard on the stomach, alcohol has a more adverse effect on the brain and liver, caffeine causes intense headaches, and they're lactose intolerant.

Dietary Restrictions: Aside from the fact that vampires can't consume much else other than blood, they're also limited to mostly human blood. While they can live several weeks on non-human mammals, such a diet does not supply all the nutrients essential for their survival. Non-mammals, such as birds and lizards, will only do for a few weeks. Vampire blood is by far the worst substitute. In 1928, the Goessman Institute supplied a total of 20 starving vampires with a plentiful diet of vampire blood. Although sated at first, they became lethargic and disoriented after only 3 days. Within 10 days, all 20 vampires were dead. To put it simply: vampires must drink the blood of humans, or die. It is this simple equation that drives their powerful survival instinct. Not even blood bags will do for more than a few months, as vampires absolutely require that thrill of hunting—as well as sufficient amounts of fear hormones from their victims—to effectively metabolize each meal. This shouldn't come as a surprise, considering that vampires have spent their entire evolution feeding directly on living humans against their will.

Nutrition: For more information on how vampires utilize human blood, see the CDC article on vampire nutrition.

Cardiovascular System

The most profound differences between our species are found in the circulatory system, as they enable vampires to survive injuries that would kill a human being. Fortunately for us, their tissues are still vulnerable to most kinds of poisons, toxins and venoms.

Human arterial blood (top) compared with that of a vampire

Blood: Known as ichor (pr. ik-er), vampire blood takes on a much darker color due to an increase in iron, bile and other toxins that escape from the liver and spleen. This ichor darkens even further over the next three to four months as a vampire feeds and replaces its blood supply. Although vampire blood may appear brown or black, arterial blood is actually a dark rusty red when diluted. The extra iron not only darkens the blood, but makes it clot faster as well. And although a vampire's oxygen intake is lowered by its slowed metabolism, the blood oxygen itself actually increases thanks to the added iron storage in the new hemoglobin and erythrocytes.

Heart: Vampire blood is pumped via the contraction of skeletal muscle rather than the heart, which eventually atrophies from disuse. This forces high-pressure venous blood toward the heart, which constantly swells and drains as low-pressure arterial blood is pushed away from it. While at rest, involuntary spasms known as fasciculations take place in the limbs, and emanate from the furthest extremities inward—similar to the wave-like peristalsis of the GI tract. Since it affects the muscles required for movement, slight tremors are common, but only when the muscles aren't in use. Voluntary diaphragm and abdominal action also aid blood flow to the brain. Along with their claws, hand tremors can be a dead giveaway for a disguised vampire, so they'll try to keep them out of view while in public.

Humans also pump blood this way, though it's strictly voluntary.

BPM: Normal healthy humans experience a resting heart rate of 60 to 100 beats per minute, with the average being 72. Since vampires lack a working heart, bpm must be determined using a single area of fasciculation. There are three in all: calves, thighs and biceps. The former are tensed first, then the latter two simultaneously, and then all three are relaxed at once—a process that takes about a second to complete. These points of contraction are called vasonodes, or simply "nodes." A newly-turned vampire starts out with a node bpm of around 50, which drops into the 30s over the next few days as its yellowed skin turns blue. Over the next few months it finally stabilizes into the 20s, and sometimes even the teens, with the record being a mere 10. Like fully-functioning hearts, these muscles will pump harder and faster in response to physical exertion, while the opposite occurs during sleep.

Some humans experience fasciculations as well.
Blood Pressure: Because the skeletal muscle pumps take over circulation from the heart, the cardiovascular system experiences a drastic pressure reversal: the veins now exceed the arteries. This is referred to as introverted circulation, or "undead circulation," while normal humans possess extroverted circulation. This is sufficient to sustain a vampire, as not only do their cells require less oxygen, the blood itself can transport more of it at once, and most of the arteries flow with gravity rather than against it. A couple exceptions are the carotid and vertebral arteries, but the lower veins and arteries constrict enough to allow as much pressure as possible toward the brain. Perhaps the biggest upside to this reduced blood flow is that it also helps the blood clot faster, preventing fatal bleeding even in major arteries.

Adrenaline: This "emergency hormone," produced by the adrenal glands, is released in consistently large amounts in vampire blood during "fight-or-flight" situations. This quickly raises a vampire's sluggish metabolism by increasing blood flow, dilating air passages and accelerating the production of clotting factors. Along with changes in muscle, bone and connective tissue, this ability to release adrenaline only adds to a vampire's extraordinary power.

Disease Resistance: In addition to natural antibiotics that slow the growth of harmful bacteria, most viruses are simply incompatible with vampiric cells thanks to changes in their surface proteins. For reasons tied closely with their lack of aging (as detailed later), there has also never been a reported case of a vampire having cancer; in fact, vampires who had cancer when they were infected lose all traces of the disease within a few months after transformation. This resistance to disease is not surprising, considering that the HVV virus can infect every tissue in the body without causing cancer or fatal bacterial infections.

A vampire after taking four bullets to the chest, resulting in only about 20% blood loss.
Date: November, 1815.
Clotting/Healing: Vampire blood clots much faster upon injury than with humans, which plays a major role in why they're so resilient. Stabbings and gunshots to the torso—including the heart—are largely ineffective as a result, since a typical wound only results in about 5% blood loss, and vampires can lose over half of their total blood volume and still survive (if they feed soon afterward). Healing rate is more than doubled as well. Along with increased iron levels, this is in thanks to the larger number of blood cells responsible for clotting and tissue repair, as well as the fact that blood flow is quickly drawn away from open wounds. Vessel obstructions never seem to be a problem for vampires, since they don't suffer from fatty plaque and the body is better at dissolving clots inside healthy vessels. These adaptations likely came about from the Ebola-like hemorrhaging of vampiric comas.

Intestinal Injuries: While untreated stabbings and gunshot wounds to the stomach and intestines usually result in agonizing and fatal infections in humans and other vertebrates, it's only a temporary (though still painful) inconvenience for a vampire. The surrounding organs and abdominal wall are coated with a thick layer of antibacterial mucus which protects the body in the event of an intestinal breach—along with the fact that a vampire's liquid diet requires less gut bacteria. In addition, if any part of the GI tract has been severed, it will quickly mend back together over the course of several days, using the same process as a broken bone or severed tendon. The vampire will not be able to feed during this time (due to vomiting and possible diarrhea), and will usually go dormant until it is fully healed.

Pulmonary Injuries: As with bowel perforations, injuries to the lungs are rarely fatal: although a pneumothorax will occur when air leaks into the pleural space between the lung and chest wall, only a portion of the lung will collapse in most cases. As a result, vampires with chest injuries will typically experience dizziness, shortness of breath and eventual unconsciousness until the collapsed lung(s) can heal and reinflate over the next several days. Only in cases where both lungs suffer multiple perforations do vampires pass out before they can escape their attackers. Generally, death only takes those that are too malnourished to withstand the effects of oxygen deprivation—a hazard lessened by the vampiric ability to slow their metabolism in extreme circumstances.

Medical Applications: Along with their profound resistance to disease, there was considerable research into vampiric circulation and possible applications for human medicine. One such breakthrough was the ventricular assist device, which allows humans to live without a heartbeat. There's also a physical exercise based on this method of circulation, which involves tensing and relaxing one's leg and arm nodes while at rest. Not only does it strengthen the muscles, it also improves venous circulation and nerve control. As for faster clotting abilities, the problem of vessel blockage formation has yet to be solved.

Medical Complications: Depending on the particular model, a vampire wearing a pacemaker upon transformation may experience agonizing pain from the constant shocking of their paralyzed heart, until the device runs out of power. However, this only applies to the older models: the newer ones only shock the heart a certain number of times before deactivating. Victims bearing transplanted organs will always die, even if they're vaccinated before the coma. This is due to their chemically-suppressed immune system being too weak to combat the virus, which then strengthens the immune system enough to attack the foreign organ, which in-turn kills the host. Pregnant women who are bitten will always miscarry, and can even die if left unvaccinated (depending on how developed the fetus is). In fact, there were many cases of desperate women seeking out vampires and their blood to abort their pregnancies, starting from 1950 when the vaccine was created up until 1973 when Roe v. Wade was decided.

Body Temperature & Dormancy

Seen through thermal vision,
a vampire attacks its prey.
Like the naked mole-rat and two-toed sloth, vampires do not regulate their body temperature in typical mammalian fashion: being thermoconformers rather than thermoregulators, their core temperature depends largely on the surrounding environment. Unlike typical ectotherms, however, vampires can still shiver and produce enough heat to keep their temperature at a bare minimum of 60 degrees Fahrenheit during rest, and up to 74 when fully active—compared to 96.8 and 100 degrees for normal humans—provided the ambient temperature isn't much colder than 32 Fahrenheit (0 Celsius).
This temperature anomaly proved to be a great help for modern vampire hunters, as it made vampires easily distinguishable from humans when viewed through infrared imagery.

For important chemical reactions, vampires have at least two "emergency" enzyme systems that each operate at either freezing or feverish temperatures. While not nearly as efficient as their more moderate counterpart, they at least allow the body to survive a wider range of core temperatures than humans and other mammals, if typical regulation is not an option. This is known as poikilothermia, another characteristic vampires share with the naked mole-rat.

Because their body temperature is dependent on environment and they are unable to bask in the sun like reptiles can, sick vampires cannot experience or (sans hot weather) induce consistent fevers to slow the growth of harmful infections, but the natural antibiotics in their bodies more than fulfill this purpose.

A vampire's cold feet on a heating pad

The high 70s and low 80s seem to be their preferred temperature range. While the 90s are simply uncomfortable for vampires, anything over 100 can be potentially lethal. The fact that they sweat less than humans doesn't help, although they can either shed or don clothing to help regulate themselves. They will also drench or submerge themselves in water to cool off, but avoid it like the plague at colder temperatures. In fact, diving or boating into a large body of water is one of the better ways to escape from pursuing vampires. That's not to say that they won't attempt to follow you into the water, but if you can stay out far enough and long enough, they will hopefully consider you more trouble than you're worth.

Despite their aversion to the cold, vampires will not freeze to death—even when frozen solid. Like the wood frog, their bodies can quickly produce and accumulate higher levels of urea and glucose, which act as cryoprotectants by limiting the formation of internal ice crystals while reducing osmotic shrinkage of cells. However, while wood frogs can survive this way for only seven months at most, vampires have been known to last as long as 40 years—a decade longer than frozen tardigrades. As with the latter organism, this ability to remain desiccated for extended periods is largely dependent on high levels of the nonreducing sugar trehalose, which protects their cell membranes even after the event of osmotic dehydration.

If food is scarce, or if the situation is less than hospitable, even temperate vampires can go dormant and hibernate voluntarily, provided they're well-fed and can find a safe place to construct a lair. Abandoned buildings, mines and caves are high on the list of potential lair sites. Once safely ensconced, the vampire will fall into a deep sleep, during which its bodily functions slow to a level just enough to sustain it. Respiration drops to only one breath every six to eight hours (depending on temperature), circulation slows to only three to six fasciculations per hour, and hair and nail growth grinds to a halt. The longer a vampire hibernates, the more dried and withered it becomes as its body uses up nutrients; rate of hair loss is about the same as an active vampire. In time, it may resemble a mummified corpse or wax sculpture, which can be dangerously deceiving to whomever may discover it.

Dormant vampires tend to lay flat on their backs or curl into a fetal position, usually with their arms crossed.

In addition, they will typically strip naked as extra body heat can be detrimental to a long dormancy.

Unlike bears and other hibernating animals, a vampire can quickly snap out of its dormancy in full attack mode. Still, they are much easier to sneak up on while in the dormant phase. The outer limits of this phase have yet to be discovered, although FVZA scientists in the 1940s and 50s observed vampires remaining dormant for over 10 years, awakening only once every three to four years to excrete waste and gorge themselves on human blood. They subsisted just fine on blood bags for the full decade, but without a live human to feed on directly, they were unable to go dormant again and subsequently starved to death within a month.

As long as they take these so-called lunch breaks, and feed on a live human every ten years, there appears to be no limit to how long they can hibernate. The longest record was discovered in 1964 when a construction crew in London uncovered a vampire that had been dormant since 1688—almost 280 years! Interestingly, it was found inside the remains of an old wine cellar in the Whitechapel area, near the site of one of Jack the Ripper's murders.

This ability to go long intervals without blood begs the question: why do so many vampires die of starvation? The simple answer is that they simply become addicted to the taste and effects of blood, so they remain active to feed as much as possible. It actually takes a fair amount of self-discipline to simply lay down and give that up. Another important reason is that vampires have to gorge themselves on human blood in order to get them through at least three years of inactivity, which is impossible if they're already starving and unable to hunt. Non-human mammals do suffice, but this only gives them a year at most, and a human meal is absolutely required afterward.

As for why dormant vampires don't suffer from pressure sores and muscle atrophy: like bears, vampires will periodically stretch, shiver and reposition their bodies to simultaneously exercise their muscles and improve circulation. This occurs about three to four times a day in bears, but only once or twice a week for a vampire. Muscle wasting in both species is also suppressed by a proteolytic inhibitor which is released into the bloodstream.

Reproductive Organs & Sexuality

One of the few upsides to the vampire menace is their inability to reproduce sexually. Not only are they rendered infertile during the coma, they can't even experience any kind of arousal. Of course, their overwhelming lust for blood more than makes up for this, and feeding can be thought of as a form of rape, with the virus serving as their sperm. In a way, this method of reproduction is far more frightening, considering that it produces fully-grown offspring within two days of "conception."

What little sperm that can be harvested from vampiric testes is always highly deformed.

A nude vampire corpse

Right-click for full size.

Vampiric impotency is mainly caused by a chronic lack of blood flow to the genitals, as well as hormonal insufficiencies. It should also come as no surprise that the scrotum is always contracted, since the body is usually quite cool, preservation of sperm is no longer necessary, and elevation of the testicles makes them less vulnerable to injury. Similar to prepubescent children, testosterone and estrogen levels appear to be identical in males and females, effectively making them sexless as far as bodily functions go. As for gender identity, vampires usually feel no emotional attachment to their breasts and external genitalia—superfluous mounds of flesh that serve only as a cruel reminder of what they used to be—and will sometimes amputate them to achieve a more "neutral" appearance (a task made easier by their rapid healing and reduced pain, bleeding and infection risk).

Alterations to the brain's structure and chemistry are responsible for a vampire's lack of gender identity and apparent asexuality, which would explain why they aren't picky as to which gender to feed on. That's not to say that vampires don't feel affection for the people they knew; but tragically, most of them can't stop themselves from making loved ones their first victims.

As one might suspect, there have been many reports throughout history of troubled individuals who purposely got themselves infected in order to rid themselves of their sexuality, such as frustrated virgins and sex addicts, shunned and self-loathing LGBT individuals, victims of rape and adultery, those who had committed adultery, priests who had broken their vow of celibacy, and rapists who felt remorse for their crimes.

Aging & Life Expectancy
While no vampire on record has ever died of natural causes, vampires do undergo an aging process—just not in the same way as humans. Vampires do not age on a molecular/genetic level, but their life of hunting and eluding capture creates tremendous wear and tear in the form of injuries to bones and tissue.
Because they presented such a danger to society, most vampires were destroyed long before the outer limits of their lifespan were determined. Ancient history offers some clues, however. In ancient China, there was said to be one vampire in the Emperor's court through the entire Eastern Zhou Dynasty, which would put his age at 550. More accurate modern records have certified vampires of over 300 years old.

Chromosomes (purple).
Telomeres (pink).
Contrary to the opinions of many theologians, vampiric longevity is not the result of some pact with the Devil, but rather an ability to ward off the DNA damage that occurs during cell division in normal humans. Specifically, the protective caps on the ends of chromosomes (known as telomeres) become chewed up over time in humans, but not vampires. This is due to an increased production of telomerase, an enzyme that adds DNA sequence repeats. In addition, higher levels of the antioxidant enzyme catalase protect the cells from free radicals and ambient radiation, preventing oxidative and ionization damage to the DNA. This also prevents proteins from clumping together, which can accumulate inside tissues and cause them to stiffen and function less efficiently—a process known as glycation.

Like naked mole-rats, vampires also have a high resistance to tumors—at least those of the malignant variety. In addition to the slowed aging process, the proliferation of cancerous cells is further inhibited by an "over-crowding" gene which prevents cellular division once individual cells come into contact—a mechanism known as "contact inhibition." Basically, vampiric cells will commit mass suicide when overcrowded, thus preventing tumor formation.

Note the curved spine, lack of hair
and emaciated frame.
Although their DNA has the ability to resist aging, mutations that take place during the initial coma cause a vampire's appearance to change dramatically within the span of a decade. It will lose all of its hair as its fat and water stores shrink away, causing its skin to become thinner and more transparent. This gives it a distinctly withered and dried appearance, with smaller muscles, deflated breasts and a pronounced, vulture-like curvature of the spine. Skin pigment disappears as well, so all vampires end up virtually albino, regardless of ethnicity. Once that period is over, however, they will generally look and perform the same way for however many years, decades or centuries they can avoid disfiguring or debilitating injuries.

Vampires cease growing when they're

He had also filed his fangs down, inserted needles into his flesh, and castrated himself.
Despite their rather feeble appearance, older vampires are still extremely powerful and agile, and their bones are harder and thicker than those of their younger counterparts. Many a vampire hunter has made the mistake of underestimating them.

Cross-Species Infection
Because HVV is zoonotic, humans aren't the only mammals capable of infection, as documented by countless experiments performed at facilities like the Plum Island Animal Disease Center off the coast of New York. Depending on the species, symptoms can range from similar to outright identical to those of humans, with fever, chills, increased metabolism, itching and coma remaining universally consistent. The same applies to incubation time and coma duration, though the death toll is quite high compared to humans. Primates have the most chance of surviving, while larger mammals have better odds than smaller ones.

A rabid canine
Bloodshot eyes, dilated pupils, skin discoloration, sun sensitivity, darkened blood and reduced body temperature also remain consistent in coma survivors, along with increased muscle power and aggression. As for heart stoppage, only primates seem affected by this change. This is likely due to the size of their limbs, which are large enough to adequately pump blood through skeletal muscle contraction. Fasciculations still occur in non-primates, but they beat only enough to support the slowed heart rate. This has also been brought up as evidence as to how this form of circulation evolved in vampires.

Unlike vampires, non-humanoid coma survivors do not experience dental growth, and are completely rabid from brain swelling. Cancer, tissue necrosis and immune disorders occur as well, and also shed light on how early proto-vampires may have started out. One reason for these problems is that not as many cells can be infected and transformed, causing tissues to become mismatched and identified as foreign by the rest of the body. In addition, some degree of viral production will continue even after the coma, which only causes further cell destruction. This biological incompatibility with the virus is always fatal: the vast majority of primates live less than a week; non-primates even sooner.

The virus' effect on animals raises an important question: why us? Why is the virus so much more compatible with our bodies? After all, the rabies virus doesn't treat us any better than other mammals. While it's perfectly plausible that millions of years of natural selection could craft the vampires we know today, it would require relatively constant exposure, death and re-exposure to weed out the problems seen in other animals. As disturbing as it is to consider, vampires could have very well been bred like dogs.

The Science of Zombism
Zombic Virology
By Hugo Pecos & Robert Lomax

Perhaps because they were easier to control and kill, zombies never acquired the cachet of their vampiric cousins. This phenomenon extended to science: zombic research was considered a less glamorous field and consistently lagged behind vampiric research in funding. Since development of the vaccine in 1911, the zombic threat has been greatly reduced. However, this should not make us complacent: most experts believe that in today's world, a zombism outbreak is far more likely than vampirism.

The Virus

The human zombism virus (HZV) comes from the same Mononegavirales order as the human vampirism virus, and bears the same distinct bullet shape—although it's only twice the size of rabies, while HVV is triple.

Zombic plague spreaders:
the brown rat & hard tick

The virus is propagated mainly through ticks of the family Ixodidae, which have hard shells instead of soft. The prevalence of these ticks in tropical climes is the main reason for the large number of outbreaks in those regions. The nature of the spread of zombic plagues generally depends on the place of origin: most urban plagues were spread by aggressive rats that had been bitten by an infected tick; in the country, the tick would bite humans directly, or pass the virus through mice, raccoons and other mammals.

As is the case with vampirism, humans infected with HZV mainly pass it from their saliva into the bloodstream of another through bite wounds.

Depending on soil conditions and UV exposure, the zombism virus can remain active in zombic excrement and carrion for anywhere between 15 days and all the way up to three months—compared with only 5 days to one month for the vampirism virus. Needless to say, this poses a real danger to water supplies. The best ways to treat water potentially tainted with the virus include the use of chlorine, ozone and in some cases bromine or iodination.

Regarding the virus' evolutionary lineage, structural and genetic similarities between HVV and HZV suggest that both vampires and zombies share a common ancestor, which was likely more zombie-like than vampiric.

Stages of the Disease

The stages of zombic transformation are the same as those that occur in vampires, with two major differences: for zombism, the onset of symptoms and transformation occur much faster, and has no relation to the cycles of day and night.

The zombism virus,
magnified 6500 times

If the victim is bitten by a zombie, there's also the added risk of the wound becoming septic, since zombic mouths are ridden with dangerous bacteria and other microbes. In most cases, it can only become fatal if the victim is vaccinated without also being treated with antibiotics, as the virus can prevent the onset of clinical death.

Stage One: Infection.

Symptoms of zombism appear quickly: within one or two hours, the victim will develop a headache, fever, chills and other flu-like symptoms, along with extreme thirst, severe itching and increased heart rate and metabolism. This stage lasts about half as long as its vampiric counterpart—mostly between three and six hours, during which the vaccine is about 99 percent effective. Unlike vampire bites, zombie bites clot pretty quickly; however, the higher bacteria count can cause even worse pain and inflammation, with copious amounts of pus.

A bite victim under quarantine in Panama; 1905

Stage Two: Coma.

Zombic comas are considerably more brief than vampiric ones, lasting only four to six hours as opposed to a day. Unfortunately, even though the fever is shorter, it also burns higher, which ends up causing brain damage. Only the very young and very old do not survive zombic comas, although zombies have been found as young as five and as old as 90. As with vampirism, the vaccine is roughly 50 percent effective when administered during the first half of this stage: the longer the coma has passed, the less effective the vaccine. Cardiac arrest occurs within two to three hours as blood flow, breathing, metabolism and body temperature plummet to almost nothing.

Stage Three: Transformation.

Zombies awaken from their comas in a catatonic state. They are unresponsive to most stimuli as they shuffle about, trying to locate human flesh. Unlike vampires, there is no acclimation period: zombies will begin hunting immediately upon transformation.

The Vaccine

Perhaps because zombies weren't as much of a threat to our ancestors, natural immunity against the zombism virus isn't nearly as common as with vampirism—only one in every 450 people as opposed to one in every 150—so immune blood was a lot harder to come by for treatment purposes. Fortunately, there was a silver lining.

FVZA scientists at a vaccine
production facility; 1944

Compared to the human vampirism virus, the creation of a zombism vaccine was a much simpler process. In the year 1911, the French had accomplished this all-important task by using the same method as many other vaccines: chemically-killed virus suspended in a solution that's injected into the patient's muscle tissue. It was dubbed the "Pasteur Project," in honor of Louis Pasteur's groundbreaking medical research in the years before his death in 1895.

As for post-exposure infections, a transfusion of immune or inoculated blood was required to provide antibodies along with the vaccine, until the creation of the human zombism immune globulin during the 1940s Zozobra Project.

Sadly, as with their vampiric counterparts, every available dose of the zombism vaccine and globulin is currently stored at the CDC headquarters in Atlanta, Georgia—and in equally-limited numbers (approximately 250,000).

The Science of Zombism
Zombic Biology
By Hugo Pecos & Robert Lomax
Return to Zombic Virology

Because of their catatonic state, zombies have been unable to offer any personal testimony to augment scientific research. Therefore, all we know about them is based upon empirical evidence. A person infected with the zombism virus is transformed into a single-minded hunting machine, with all changes to bodily functions serving the zombic imperative: locate prey, capture prey and feed. Overall, the changes that take place in zombies are more limited than in vampires, and primarily affect the nervous and circulatory systems, as well as some aspects of the muscular and skeletal systems.
For a more detailed account, click here.

Brain & Nervous System
This system has been of great interest to researchers, as zombic nervous tissue appears to have regenerative properties not found in humans or vampires.

Cross-sections of a normal brain and a zombic brain show the extensive atrophy of the latter.
Brain:
Contrary to most fiction, zombies are able to survive an enormous loss of brain tissue, as long as the lower brainstem remains intact. For instance, former FVZA zombie specialist Dr. Waxman Himmelburger tells of encountering a zombie who had lost over three quarters of its head from a shotgun blast, with no apparent effect.

Spine/Nervous System:
Zombies have exhibited the ability to withstand significant trauma to their central and peripheral nervous system. In a famous series of experiments conducted by FVZA scientists in 1972, zombies who had their spinal cords severed regained the ability to walk within 24 hours. Thus far, researchers have been unable to unlock the mechanism for this process of repair.

Dopamine/Endorphins: The smell and taste of living flesh trigger a large release of these adrenaline-like neurotransmitters into the zombic brain.

Sense Organs
"Follow your nose" might be the zombic motto, as their powerful sense of smell compensates for the weakness of their other senses.

Ocular close-up of an early-stage zombie
Sight:
Due to degradation of the lens and cornea, zombies suffer from severe myopia. In addition, they are colorblind, their scleras are red with irritation, and cataracts gradually obscure the pupils.

Hearing:
Infection and eardrum perforation cause zombies to lose about 50 percent of their hearing within a few weeks of transformation. Complete deafness sets in within another month as necrosis spreads further into the ear.

Smell:
Zombies have even more sensory cells than vampires. If the wind is right, zombies can smell humans from as far as a mile away.

Epidermis

The extremities are the first to experience necrosis.
Like bad apples, zombies mostly rot from the outside in, because their surface tissues receive the least blood flow and the most exposure to environmental trauma.

Skin: Starting off pale and ashen, decay sets in shortly after transformation, becoming more jaundiced over the course of a week as liver function degrades. Gradually consumed by open sores, the skin turns dark and leathery before sloughing off completely.

Hair/Nails: Zombies who live long enough will lose all these keratin-based tissues.

Muscular & Skeletal System

Changes here are of good news-bad news variety. Yes, zombies are stiff-limbed and slow, and they move along at a shuffle rather than a sprint; but they are also very powerful, with a vice-like grip and jaws that can bite through metal.

A normal jaw (L) and a zombic jaw (R).
Note the larger jawbone and thicker muscle of the latter.

Muscles/Connective Tissue: The muscle fibers of the hands, forearms and jaw become concentrated and take on the consistency of nylon rope when contracted. Ligaments and tendons thicken in response to the added stress.

Skeletal System: Important modifications occur to the zombic jaw: extra bone is deposited on the lower mandible to form an attachment point for larger chewing muscles. These adaptations enable zombies to bite through skull and bone to get at the pillars of their diet: brains and bone marrow. As with vampires, a zombie's entire skeleton hardens and thickens as it ages.

Teeth: Although early-stagers are smart enough to use heavy objects (or the pavement) to shatter skulls, older zombies are much less savvy in their eating habits. Unfortunately, zombic teeth are not adapted to the powerful forces exerted on them by the jaw, causing them to crack and fall out. Eventually, all the teeth are gone, and the zombie is forced to chew with its exposed jawbones.

Cardiovascular System

A pool of dried zombie blood

As anybody who ever emptied their gun into an advancing zombie can tell you: they just don't bleed to death. Their circulatory adaptations allow them to survive massive trauma that would kill even a vampire.

Blood: Saturated with extra iron and bile with additional erythrocytes, zombic blood is thick and dark, hence the nickname "zombie oil."

Heart: As with vampires, zombic blood is pumped by skeletal muscle rather than the heart. However, the rate of circulation is much slower, hence the tissue necrosis.

Before (top) and after (bottom)
thermal imaging of the transformation

Body Temperature
Like vampires, zombies will take on the temperature of warmer environments and produce their own body heat when ambient temperatures drop between 30 and 60 Fahrenheit—although zombies are about 5 to 10 degrees warmer than vampires, with core temperatures ranging between 64 and 76 at rest and up to ten degrees higher when fully active. This physiological discrepancy is due to heat released by the various parasites living in zombic flesh—a phenomenon that causes zombies to emit steam in cool weather and phosphorescence when in water.

Aging & Life Expectancy
The great irony of zombic life is that even as they voraciously feed, they too are being fed upon: a zombie's body is like a big Petri dish serving host to everything from bacteria and fungi to maggots and ants. The resulting state of putrefaction means, as terrifying as a zombie may be to the eye, it actually commits far worse offenses to the nose.
A long-held, common misconception is that zombies are immortal, when in actuality the vast majority of them live less than a year. It is possible to determine a zombie's age based on their external appearance—specifically, their level of decomposition, also known as necrotic degradation.

The three stages of necrotic degradation
Stage I: 1-3 months. The skin is mottled, flaking, peeling and covered with open sores.
Stage II: 4-6 months. The ears, lips, nose and eyelids are rotting away; loss of skin, teeth, hair, nails, fingers and toes. Bacterial breakdown of dead tissue causes bloating and eventual splitting of epidermis.

Stage III: 7-9 months. Body is emaciated, with large areas of exposed muscle and bone; loss of facial features, breasts, genitals and likely limbs. Outer tissues are dry, tough and leathery. Most of the hair and teeth are gone, and one or both eyes fall out.

The Science of Zombism
Zombic Sociology
By Hugo Pecos & Robert Lomax
Return to Zombic Biology

On the surface, the words "zombic sociology" seem to be the ultimate oxymoron. After all, it was long thought that zombies were incapable of social interaction beyond determining whether the person before them was friend or food. To make matters worse, their catatonic state prevented any personal testimony to abet empirical findings. Nevertheless, modern researchers have uncovered a surprisingly complex social order among zombies, an overview of which is presented here (many thanks to Waxman Himmelburger for his assistance).

The Recently Turned
Unlike vampires, newly-transformed zombies have little to no acclimation period. While they do possess and recall memories, there is none of the nostalgia or pining for the past often found in vampires; they simply create a rough sense of geography. A nascent zombie may attempt to return to its home, although the trip is motivated by hunger rather than nostalgic yearning. Relatives of these individuals often make the mistake of trying to help their diseased loved ones, and soon find themselves joining the ranks of the undead.

The Hunting Pack
Using their prodigious sense of smell to lead the way, newly-risen zombies will instinctively gravitate to other members of their kind, making solitary individuals very rare. Such packs are typically much larger than their vampiric counterparts: within days of an outbreak, mobs made up of dozens of zombies will have formed. While vampires form packs to improve their hunting capability, it is actually detrimental for zombies to group together, as it draws more attention and strains resources. Despite these drawbacks, zombic researchers believe this behavior fulfills some primal need for community and connection (much like humans).
While hunting, zombies are all business—but in moments of repose, they show evidence of affection: they will cluster together, rest against each other, even display particular warmth towards child zombies. Furthermore, hunting packs will assemble themselves into approximations of family units, with children, parents and grandparents huddling together.

Hierarchy: There is a distinct pecking order in a zombie pack, although it is much more subtle than that of vampires. Like any pack creature, the strongest and quickest will take the lead in hunting and eat first, and any rival who disrupts their feeding will be dealt with viciously. While vampires often use their cunning to improve their standing in the pack, zombies are relatively guileless, as weaker pack members tend to accept their fate and make the most of the scraps they scavenge. However, they all possess a chilling single-mindedness when it comes to hunting: while vampires have been known to succumb to malnutrition because they lacked the stomach for hunting, there is no such thing as a cowardly zombie.

Hunting: Contrary to popular opinion, zombies are surprisingly observant and fast learners, especially when it comes to hunting. A lone neophyte may stagger mindlessly for a few days, but once it joins a pack its learning curve rises sharply. Since they cannot speak, zombies communicate using gestures and wordless vocalizations. A favorite hunting strategy is to have a few pack members drive prey towards an area where many others are hiding.

The cooperation zombies show in hunting generally vanishes when they start eating, and they can seriously wound one another during a feeding frenzy. Hungry mobs gnaw ravenously to the bone, which they'll crack open to get to the marrow and brains. In times of surplus, the most sated zombies will consume only these nutritious tissues, leaving the rest of the viscera for their weaker subordinates.

Note the ghoulish smile as it stares down the photographer.

Their voracious appetite begs the question: if zombies consume entire corpses, how do they manage to increase their numbers? Perhaps an outbreak's most important method of expansion lies in a victim's ability to escape after sustaining an infectious injury, along with the fact that zombies—easily triggered by movement—will commonly abandon downed prey to chase after fleeing survivors. There is also some debate as to whether zombies will, like vampires, occasionally seek to increase their numbers. This theory is backed up by the fact that they will sometimes consume only the feet and legs of a victim, leaving everything else mostly intact so the person can survive and transform. Furthermore, when a victim falls into a zombic coma, any zombie that comes across the person will usually leave them alone until they fully turn. If not, only a few bites will be had.

It should come as no surprise that zombies have very limited range. While vampires can move quickly and tirelessly, covering up to 20 miles in one night, a zombie is lucky to cover a few miles in 24 hours. What they do share in common, however, is that a given swath of real estate can only support so many predators. For these reasons, zombism outbreaks tend to be self-regulating: a plague will usually start fast, hit a plateau, then die out quickly as food supply diminishes. On average, they tend to be over within a week or two.

Zombic Housing

Agents looks over the remains of a home in which 24 zombies were found and destroyed.
For the zombie, home is nothing more than a safe place to rest before the next hunt. Whether holing up in an abandoned building or a fully furnished house, they make no effort at decoration or comfort. As for the finer things in life, zombies do respond to music: a favorite song will cause them to move their bodies in a kind of stiff-limbed dance. They've even been known to embrace each other while silently moving their lips to the lyrics.

Since zombies can go out in the daylight, their choice of hideouts is somewhat more varied than that of a vampire. For example, while the latter must find a cave or construct a crude hovel before the sun rises, a zombie can simply rest against a tree in the woods. However, because they lack the vampire's supreme adaptability, zombies rarely proliferate in urban areas. They do much better in the country, where they can disappear into the landscape.

Hygiene: Unlike vampires, zombies are not sophisticated enough to infiltrate crowds and public places. Thus, there is no need for them to practice personal hygiene. They will wear the same clothing until it's as soiled and tattered as the flesh it covers.

Demographics

While vampires are predominantly males in the 18 to 35 age group, zombies come from all over the demographic spectrum; the average age is 55 years, and females outnumber males. A disproportionate number of the elderly and infirm are found in zombic populations for the simple reason that they are less able to flee during an attack. As for mortality and lifespan, the zombie faces an even bleaker prognosis than the vampire: rare is the zombie who lives even one year. The two leading causes of death have always been extermination by zombie hunters, and malnutrition (often due to injuries sustained in fights with other zombies).

The Science of Zombism
Zombic Mythology
By Hugo Pecos & Robert Lomax
Return to Zombic Sociology

While bookshelves and video aisles are full of stories based on the mythology of vampires, comparatively little folklore exists that is unique to zombies, which share quite a few characteristics with their vampiric cousins. Many zombie myths arose from African and Caribbean superstition—a fact not surprising when one considers the disproportionate number of zombies in tropical regions.

Zombies are reanimated corpses

Night of the Living Dead (1968)
Source:
A zombie's decaying flesh, catatonia, cold temperature, black blood, reduced bleeding and lack of a heartbeat, along with observations of apparently-dead bite victims rising again as zombies. This myth has also been applied to vampires for many of the same reasons.
Fact:
Despite appearances to the contrary, a person infected with the zombism virus never actually dies before awakening as a zombie. For instance, zombic circulation is taken up by the skeletal muscles, rendering the heart inert.

Zombies are immortal
Source: As with vampires, zombies are highly resistant to injury, along with the fact that turned victims arise from comas—an event often misinterpreted as some sort of resurrection.
Fact: Most zombies live less than a year. Even if they manage to remain fed and avoid extermination, they will eventually either starve to death as their GI tract becomes too necrotic to absorb nutrients, or die from respiratory failure. While vampires often fare better than zombies due to their speed, intellect and agelessness, they too are far from immortal.

West African and Caribbean slave mythology, along with the large numbers of zombies in tropical areas.

Fact:
Like their vampiric cousins, zombies are created by the transmission of a virus.

Zombies are brain eaters

Observation.

Fact:
Although hungry zombies will eat down to the bones, the well-fed can afford to be discriminating, as they will consume the more nutritious brains and bone marrow and leave the rest of the corpse untouched. On a related note: as touched upon in Return of the Living Dead, zombies do in fact experience chronic pain, and the various neurotransmitters found in human brains and bone marrow provide them temporary relief. Unlike that movie, however, zombies are unable to speak.

Zombies can be created by exposure to toxic chemicals or radiation

Tarman from Return of the Living Dead

Source:

Innumerable B movie plotlines, which likely came about due to the fact that exposure to such elements can cause the skin to slough off, much like a zombie's.

Fact:
While toxic chemicals and radiation are quite effective at cooking flesh and causing cancer, sterility and birth defects, they absolutely cannot create zombies. In high enough doses, it's lethal even to them.

Zombies lack blood circulation and do not need to breathe or eat

Mitochondria require oxygen and glucose to produce long-term cellular energy.
Source:
Association of zombies with corpses.
Fact:
Although slowed to minimal levels, zombies do in fact require all of the above in order to create enough adenosine triphosphate (ATP) for long-term muscle movement and organ function. If they had to rely on anaerobic respiration and autodigestion, they wouldn't last very long at all, and would be far too weak to pose much of a threat. Furthermore, if they had zero circulation, all the blood would pool into the hands and feet, causing them to swell and necrotize faster, rendering the zombie even more immobile and unable to hunt.

Zombies have no physical sensations & are unaware of other zombies

Source: The Zombie Survival Guide by Max Brooks (son of famous filmmaker Mel Brooks). Published in 2003, the book basically attempts to explain zombies as they appear in George Romero's movies, while readily admitting that their assumed biology makes very little sense and seemingly violates every natural law—requiring no rest or fuel and being borderline invincible against everything except brain damage. Still, this doesn't stop the author from ironically lambasting Hollywood zombies as being "fantastical and unrealistic."
Fact: If the former claim were true, zombies wouldn't even be able to stand—let alone walk and capture prey. As for the latter, zombies are actually surprisingly social creatures, being able to communicate with one another using grunts and gestures, much like apes. Also included in the book is the disproven myth that humans use less than 10 percent of their brain capacity, in an attempt to explain how zombies could locate prey without their other senses (which isn't true, either). On a closing note, there is no such thing as a zombism virus called Solanum, which is actually a genus of flowering plants. And while it's true that the (real) zombism virus is ultimately fatal to non-human mammals, it has no effect whatsoever on non-mammals—contrary to the book's claim that it somehow kills and repels all forms of life.

Firearms alert nearby zombies

Source: True under certain circumstances.
Fact: Not only do zombies lose all of their hearing within a couple months, their powerful sense of smell allows them to sniff out prey within a mile-wide radius. As a result, unless you're able to mask your scent, it doesn't really matter how quiet you are.

It takes only one headshot to kill a zombie
Source: Likely from layman observation of expert marksmen who knew where to shoot. Possibly confused with vampires, whose brains are much more vulnerable to injury.

The Walking Dead
Fact: Unless the brainstem is hit, zombies can survive multiple gunshots to the head and keep coming—though not without some reduced functionality in sensory and movement. Essentially, you need to remove a zombie's head from its body to stop it, preferably with a shotgun (or a sword). Using anything else requires more precision, such as a pistol in the mouth or a sniper round through the base of the skull. Automatic weapons tend to be rather wasteful, and are better suited for vampires anyway. Lastly, unless poison or fire is added to each bolt, crossbows are practically useless against either species.

Fact:
While it's true that their heads can remain conscious for up to a minute after decapitation, any movement after that is purely reflex action.

Fact:
Although true for early-stagers, zombies ultimately become less intelligent as they decay and lose brain function.

Zombies never sleep

Fact: Zombies do in fact sleep, if only for a couple hours at a time. A long string of catnaps is probably the best way to describe their sleep cycle.

Michonne and her pets
Fact: "Disarmed" zombies, overwhelmed with panic and confusion, will actually thrash around violently until they pass out from exhaustion, sleep for a while, then wake up and repeat this cycle until they die of starvation. Even if that weren't the case, zombies operate mostly on scent to distinguish prey from themselves, and it takes a lot more than being near a zombie to mask it. Which brings us to our next entry:

The latest fashion of the modern zombie hunter?

Humans can mask their scent to keep zombies from attacking them

Source:
Recent breakthroughs in zombic research.
Fact:
Experimental "deadsuits" employ the suppression and filtration systems of the modern wetsuit to mask the human pheromone, while the addition of several non-toxic plant extracts (used to simulate the scent of rotting flesh) transforms the wearer into a "zombie." These have functioned wonderfully in the field, with the only real drawbacks being heat discomfort from the suit's insulation and breathing difficulty in the respirator equipment. Maximum time in the deadsuit is about 3 hours.

Orgone-charged water can ward off zombies and even destroy them

An orgonite pyramid
Source:
Orgone energy is a hypothetical universal life force originally proposed in the 1930s by Wilhelm Reich, and the term itself is derived from the word orgasm. Said to repel negative and malevolent forces such as demons and other evil entities, it's basically just a New Age incarnation of garlic and holy water.
Fact:
Unless you drown them in it, orgone water has absolutely no effect on zombies or vampires. As for orgonite itself: while aesthetically pleasing, you'd be better off using it as a paperweight.

Zombism outbreaks can last for years & spread across the globe
Source: Numerous horror films, which tend to rely on the myth that zombies can function for years without eating or sleeping.

Fact: Because zombies travel slowly between towns and cities and break down quickly without food, most outbreaks are strictly local and last only a week or two at most. Furthermore, the virus isn't airborne and takes at least 8 to 14 hours to create a zombie, and ingesting contaminated water rarely results in infection. Mosquitoes pose some airborne danger, but the virus usually dies in their system between meals. Considering that transportation of infected rats is the most efficient means of spreading the virus, it would take considerable human effort to cause even a statewide epidemic.

Fact:
The popularity of zombies is growing, and we see their characters everywhere. The best example of this is Casino guide Zed, hosted by Zombie Zed, who instead of human blood is attracted to the best casino bonuses, casino games and other things related to online casinos in Canada. Zombie Zed is not an evil zombie he just loves to play games for real money, because prizes are his attraction. Also, he likes to help other players to find the best casino offers.

Zombies can only be killed by dismembering and burning them

Zombic remains being burned
Source: Exaggeration of zombic resilience, along with the burning of their corpses to prevent further infection. This myth has also been applied to vampires for the same reasons. Specifically, because they were thought of as reanimated corpses, it was assumed that every body part could function and move on its own—a myth reinforced by the fact that severed zombie hands can reflexively move their fingers, heads can keep biting, legs can keep kicking, and torsos can keep crawling.
Fact: While dismemberment and incineration are effective methods of extermination and disposal, they are by no means the only ones.

Zombies are unaffected by injuries to the torso
Source: Observation of short-term resilience.

Fact: Although drastically muted and delayed, zombies will eventually die if they take too much damage to their internal organs—weeks for collapsed lungs, days for perforated intestines, and mere minutes for waist/torso bisection. However, they're much more resistant to blood loss and spinal injuries than vampires.

Zombies retain memories and are capable of revenge

The meaning of the term undead
Coined by Bram Stoker, this term is generally used to describe a reanimated corpse in its most literal sense. Still, it was eventually adopted by the scientific community to describe both vampires and zombies, which are very much alive but simply give the appearance of being dead—their corpse-like coma and body temperature, slow circulation, dark blood, cardiac arrest, etc. Unfortunately, it still creates a fair amount of confusion among those who are ignorant of vampiric and zombic biology, or how the human body works and what can and can't be changed about it. For example, it tends to be treated as outright blasphemy to suggest that a vampire or zombie needs to breathe, or move their bowels.

Robert Lomax's explanation for AMC's The Walking Dead
The most plausible scenario (in my opinion) is a hypothetical species of parasitic nanotubes, which are spread mainly through inhaled spores—hence why everyone is infected. From there the parasite grows throughout the living host's body, interfacing with every important cell (like an insect's tracheal tubes) while covering itself in a thick film so the immune system can't attack it. Once the host's body temperature drops below a certain point after death, the parasite rouses from dormancy and sprouts numerous microscopic spiracles through the epidermis to absorb oxygen from both air and water—allowing the walker to survive underwater and without lungs. Via the parasite's dense network of air tubes, the absorbed oxygen is transported around the walker's body to fuel its nerves, organs and musculature.

A submerged zombie head surveying its surroundings
Limited circulation still takes place in the walker's cardiovascular system via skeletal muscle contraction, both to transport ingested nutrients and to keep too much blood from pooling in the extremities. Chemicals secreted by the parasite also slow the growth of any necrotizing bacteria. Thanks to this symbiotic relationship, walkers can function for years while intact and well-fed—or at least several months as just severed heads—until they shut down from starvation.
As for why humans die so quickly from walker bites: a deadly cocktail of oral bacteria and a neurotoxic venom produced by the parasite.

1822-1895

After discovering the rabies vaccine in 1885, the great microbiologist turned his focus toward vampires and zombies. 10 years later, Pasteur was gravely injured while attempting to administer a vaccine prototype to a zombie in Paris—a tragic event, considering that vaccines are now known to be completely useless after transformation. While his death was a major setback, the good news is that his colleagues were able to finish his work in 1911, when the first successful zombism vaccine was created.

Vampires Versus Zombies
By Hugo Pecos
Return to Famous Vampire Victims or Famous Zombie Victims

The above poster may seem fanciful today, but in ancient times zombies and vampires were frequently pitted against each other for the enjoyment of bloodthirsty spectators. So which is more formidable? It's a question I'm commonly asked. In the vernacular of boxing, here is the tale of the tape:

Attribute	Vampires	Zombies	Advantage
Brain	Highly Developed	Barely Functional	Vampires
Eyes	Night Vision	Extreme Myopia	Vampires
Sense of Smell	Above Average	Exceptional	Zombies
Hearing	Exceptional	Impaired	Vampires
Jaws	Powerful	Vice-Like	Zombies
Nervous System	Normal	Capable of Repair	Zombies
Circulatory System	Resilient	Virtually Indestructible	Zombies
Strength	Exceptional	Powerful Grip	Vampires
Speed/Agility	Advanced	Stiff-Limbed, Slow	Vampires

When vampires and zombies were pitted together in one-on-one combat, the vampire's advantage in the areas of speed/agility and brain power would usually be enough to trump the zombie's indestructibility. But the zombic tendency to cluster together in large packs often spelled trouble for vampires when the two met out in the real world.

The Science of Zombism
Top Three Zombie Outbreaks
By Hugo Pecos
Return to Vampires vs. Zombies

Like vampires, zombies are great opportunists, so it should come as no surprise that zombism outbreaks often happen in the wake of natural disasters. Combine such disasters with warm climates and you truly have a recipe for a major outbreak, as the following stories prove.

Key West, Florida; 1935
On Labor Day, September 2 of 1935, a major hurricane bore down on the Florida Keys, a string of islands separating the Gulf of Mexico from the Atlantic Ocean. The hurricane, one of only two Category 5 storms ever recorded in the United States, made landfall at Key West, the most populous of the keys. As day turned to night, heavy rains and winds of over 150 miles per hour rolled over the island, destroying virtually everything standing.

Key West; 1935: zombified corpses being prepared for disposal
Amid the destruction, infected rats began roaming the island. By morning, the first of the zombies had appeared. Many islanders mistook the zombies for dazed hurricane survivors, and so the plague spread across the island like wildfire. To make matters worse, the roads and bridges connecting the keys to the mainland had been washed out by the storm, leaving the islanders with no way to escape. Scores of people drowned when they chose to leap into the choppy surf rather than face the voracious zombies.

Within 48 hours, FVZA troops from all over the South converged on Key West in a variety of seacraft. Soon after, they established a beachhead on the south side of the island and went about the process of extermination. It took up to three weeks to secure the entire island, wherein a total of 3,500 people were infected and destroyed—an enormous number considering that there was a zombism vaccine available at the time.

Vicksburg, Mississippi; 1863

1863 was the pivotal year of the American Civil War. The Union Army, sensing victory, tried to deal a knockout blow to the Confederacy by taking control of the Mississippi River. After New Orleans fell to the Union, the city of Vicksburg remained as the last Confederate holdout on the Big River. On May 18, 3200 Union troops arrived off the coast of Vicksburg and demanded an immediate surrender. But Confederate leaders refused, and so the Union laid siege to the city. A month of heavy bombardment ensued.

A zombie attacks a Union soldier in Vicksburg

On June 17, city residents spotted the first zombie. Within a few days, dozens were wandering about. Still, this development hardly worried the 30,000 Confederate troops protecting the city—they even entertained themselves by conducting target practice on the zombies. Unfortunately, with their supply lines cut off, the Confederate troops soon ran out of ammunition, and the zombies kept coming. To this day, Southerners claim that the Union let the zombic plague continue out of pure malice.

In any case, when Union forces entered the city on July 3, hundreds of zombies were roaming the streets, many in Confederate Army uniforms. As there was no FVZA at this time, the Union soldiers had to do all the killing themselves, and they quickly found out that zombies, unlike soldiers, do not surrender. In the end, an estimated 2,000 people were infected and destroyed at Vicksburg—almost as many as were killed during the Battle of Bull Run.

Hawaii; 1892

Queen Lili'uokalani

At the beginning of the 1890s, Hawaii found itself in a tug of war between native islanders who wanted the islands to remain independent, and powerful sugar growers who wanted to join the United States.

Queen Lili'uokalani ascended to the throne in 1891 and promptly enacted a series of measures designed to weaken the influence of the sugar growers. However, her mind was soon occupied by different matters: in August of 1892, a zombic plague—which began among Chinese laborers in the sugarcane fields of Oahu—had spread to Honolulu. Wave after wave of zombies came staggering out of the jungle, forcing desperate islanders to board outrigger canoes and flee to neighboring islands.

Despite her fear of losing independence, the queen had no choice but to ask the United States for help. A detachment of FVZA troops arrived in the fall and quickly wrested control of the city from the zombies. But the surrounding countryside proved more difficult to clear, so more FVZA agents were called in. The sugar growers took advantage of the chaos and panic by launching a coup, and the queen was deposed in January of 1893.

Hawaii was eventually annexed by the United States in 1898, but they did not become the 50th star on the American flag until August 21, 1959. There has long been suspicion that the sugar growers let the plague go in order to destabilize the queen, a notion strengthened by the fact that the top growers left Hawaii shortly after the outbreak began. Whatever the case may be, Hawaii's 1892 zombism outbreak killed just under 2,000 people, making it the third-worst in U.S. history.

The Science of Zombism
Extended Biology: Part I
By Robert Lomax
Return to Zombic Virology

To view the original version of this section, click here.

Because of their catatonic state, zombies have been unable to offer any personal testimony to augment scientific research. Therefore, all we know about them is based upon empirical evidence. A person infected with the zombism virus is transformed into a single-minded hunting machine, with all changes to bodily functions serving the zombic imperative: locate prey, capture prey and feed. Overall, the changes that take place in zombies are more limited than in vampires, since the virus infects and transforms far fewer tissue types than vampirism does (hence the smaller genome and shorter transformation). Specifically, the nervous and circulatory systems are drastically restructured, while more specialized modifications are made to the muscular and skeletal systems.

Brain & Nervous System
This system has been of great interest to researchers, as zombic nervous tissue appears to have regenerative properties not found in humans or vampires, which is one reason why they're able to survive their gradual necrosis. Unfortunately, their cerebral atrophy leaves them functionally lobotomized, and their hardy nervous systems remain just as vulnerable to electricity.

The brainstem is the only vulnerable region of the zombic brain—specifically the pons and medulla.
Brain: Contrary to most fiction, zombies are able to survive an enormous loss of brain tissue, as long as the lower brainstem remains intact. For instance, former FVZA zombie specialist Dr. Waxman Himmelburger tells of encountering a zombie who had lost over three quarters of its cranium from a shotgun blast, with no apparent effect. However, blindness can be inflicted by destroying the thalamus, occipital lobe or midbrain (which also causes deafness), while balance and fine motor control can be inhibited by targeting the cerebellum. Damage to the frontal and temporal lobes only result in a premature loss of what little intelligence and memory zombies start out with, while the parietal lobe simply reduces vision and physical sensation. As for a zombie's powerful sense of smell, the fact that the limbic system is anchored to the brainstem (via the hypothalamus) makes olfactory function extremely difficult to disable. Taste is even more resilient, thanks to its close connection to the medulla oblongata. This advanced form of neuroplasticity makes sense, considering how necrotic the brain becomes and how poorly zombies can defend themselves against cranial trauma.

This image from AMC's The Walking Dead shows the proper trajectory for a frontal headshot.
Going straight through the mouth also works, as does the ear canal or the base of the skull.
Serotonin: As with vampires, zombies possess very little serotonin activity. Their lack of intelligence and restraint only make them that much more aggressive.

Dopamine/Endorphins: The smell and taste of living flesh trigger a large release of these adrenaline-like neurotransmitters into the zombic brain. Unlike vampires, zombies are largely unaffected by mind-altering drugs, as most of their compatible brain functions are inactive.

Circadian Rhythms: As with humans, zombies tend to sleep at night. However, it's fitful at best, as they will doze off for an hour or two, awaken, and doze off again, with lots of twitching and groaning and apparent nightmares.

Memory: As a result of brain damage sustained during the coma's high fever, the window for learning is only open a crack to begin with, and it closes rapidly after transformation, due to poor circulation and liver/kidney function. Within the first two to three days, a zombie can operate simple machinery and even drive, as well as learn simple activities such as pumping gas and using a key to unlock a door. But their ability to learn goes downhill fast as they decompose and experience a steady loss of grey matter. Learning new things becomes well-nigh impossible for them because their short-term memory is the first to go. Melee weapons are also within early zombic capabilities—and even firearms, though their aim is very poor and they rarely have the mental faculties to reload once the weapon runs out of ammunition.

Spine/Nervous System:
Zombies have exhibited the ability to withstand significant trauma to their central and peripheral nervous system. In a famous series of experiments conducted by FVZA scientists in 1972, zombies who had their spinal cords severed—and then laid on their backs—regained the ability to walk within 24 hours. Zombies who were laid on their bellies took at least 72 hours to regenerate, since less blood was able to pool in their spinal nerves. Although researchers have been unable to unlock the exact mechanism for this process of repair, massive stem cell production and the absence of obstructive glial scarring are definitely key elements. Limited regeneration also occurs in the lower brainstem, though it's somewhat slower due to the higher complexity of its neurons. As for medical applications, there is hope that this process can be harnessed to reverse the effects of brain damage and paralysis in humans.

Reflex Action: Severed zombie heads are still capable of blinking, flaring nostrils, moving lips, making expressions, and even biting, up to one hour after the brain loses consciousness (which doesn't occur until a full minute after decapitation, compared to just a few seconds for normal humans, and up to 30 seconds for vampires). Comparatively, reflex action occurs in humans for only 30 seconds, and in vampires for up to 5 minutes. Interestingly, once all the blood oxygen has been used up, the onset of brain death seems to occur within a consistent time frame in all three species (roughly 5 minutes). As for other body parts, severed zombie hands can open and close for more than a minute after detachment.

Sense Organs
"Follow your nose" might be the zombic motto, as their powerful sense of smell compensates for the weakness of their other senses.

Ocular close-up of an early-stage zombie
Sight: Due to degradation of the lens and cornea, zombies suffer from severe myopia. In addition, they are colorblind, the scleras are red with inflammation, and gradual cataract formation causes the pupils to become milky and white. In time, complete blindness will set in as the optic nerves degrade, the vitreous humor filling the eyeballs liquefy and leak out, and the tissues holding the eyes in place rot away, causing them to come loose and fall right out of their sockets.

Hearing: Infection, swelling, fluid buildup and eardrum perforation cause zombies to lose about 50 percent of their hearing within a few weeks of transformation. Complete deafness sets in within another month as necrosis spreads further into the ear. Needless to say, zombies are poor candidates for ASL training, and it's unknown if modern-day cochlear implants could rehabilitate them.

Zombic ear canal prior to drum perforation
Smell: Zombies have even more olfactory receptors and limbic neurons than vampires, making their sense of smell approximately 25 to 30 times keener than a human's (compared to just 10 for vampires). If the wind is right, zombies can smell humans from as far as a mile away.

Taste/Touch: Contrary to some sources, zombies still retain some degree of physical sensation—similar to how a person's hand feels after laying on it for too long—with taste being the most prominent. Although their sense of pain is quite muted, zombies still suffer from chronic aching as their bodies break down. Decomposition sometimes causes the tongue to swell inside a zombie's mouth, blocking its airway; to avoid suffocating to death, it has no choice but to chew off or rip out the bloated organ.

Epidermis
Like bad apples, zombies mostly rot from the outside in, because their surface tissues receive the least blood flow and the most exposure to environmental trauma.

Skin mottling and ulceration in an early-stage zombie
Skin:
Pale and ashen, zombic skin appears bluer for Caucasians while Africans appear more grey, as with vampires. Decay sets in shortly after transformation, becoming more jaundiced over the course of a week as liver function degrades. Over the next two to three months, the skin becomes more mottled and flaky as infected, pus-filled sores erupt all over the body. Within a few more months, the sores become larger and more numerous, the outer layers of skin peel off, and the underlying tissues swell and become a putrid mix of green, grey, yellow, purple and black, before coming loose and sloughing off completely.

The extremities are the first to experience necrosis.
Photosensitivity: Although zombies aren't nocturnal like vampires, they will still seek shade when possible from harsh sunlight as their skin burns progressively more easily as they age and lose pigmentation, coupled with the fact that such burns take progressively longer to heal as their surface capillaries die off.

Hair/Nails: Early-stage zombies still experience growth to hair and nails, albeit to a much slower degree. It only goes downhill from there as toenails and fingernails start detaching from their beds and hair sheds from the extremities. As with vampires, the scalp is the last area to lose all of its hair, though the rate of hair loss occurs at a much faster rate (within the span of a year, as opposed to a decade). Like their teeth and jawbones, zombies will claw at their victims using their exposed finger bones long after their nails have come off.

Muscular & Skeletal System
Changes here are of good news/bad news variety. Yes, zombies are stiff-limbed and slow, and they move along at a shuffle rather than a sprint; but they are also very powerful, with a vice-like grip and jaws that can bite through metal.
Vocal Folds: Early-stage zombies sound somewhat similar to their human selves. They try to form words and sentences, and they can vary the pitch and volume of their voice. However, they are unable to speak clearly because of degradation in the language centers of their brains (imagine a severely drunk person trying to speak). They may growl, hiss and even shriek to express their emotions. As time passes, their vocal cords deteriorate and they begin to emit some truly horrible noises—nothing like the steady groan of fictional zombies. Mid-stage zombies will wheeze and gurgle due to excess fluid in their lungs. Later, as that fluid dries up, zombies will emit a chilling, guttural sound often referred to as the “zombie rattle."

Muscles/Connective Tissue: The muscle fibers of the hands, forearms and jaw become concentrated and take on the consistency of nylon rope when contracted. Ligaments and tendons thicken in response to the added stress. Using their grip, zombies can exert about 400 pounds per square inch of pressure—approximately 10 times that of normal humans and close to the gripping strength of a bald eagle. That's more than enough force to crush bones. This gripping strength is fairly consistent among all zombies, although those with larger hands have an advantage in that they can exert that pressure over a larger area. Lastly, while early-stage zombies have been observed overturning cars to get at their prey, their ability to lift heavy objects goes downhill fast after transformation. However, a zombie's bite and grip remain extremely powerful even in later stages.

Comparison between human and zombic muscle tissue.
Note how the latter is much more interwoven.
Speed: Zombic speed and agility are inversely proportional to time of infection. When a person first awakens as a zombie, their decomposition is in its early stages and the musculature is largely intact. Such a zombie is capable of running at a reasonable clip. However, upon transformation, changes to a zombie's brain have already affected its coordination; so while it may move swiftly, it has trouble maintaining balance and running in straight line. That's why a freshly-minted zombie sometimes moves in the manner of a drunk or a stroke victim. After 48 hours, most zombies enter the "stagger" or "shamble" phase, and their ability to move only goes downhill from there.

A normal jaw (L) and a zombic jaw (R).
Note the larger jawbone and thicker muscle of the latter.
Skeletal System: Important modifications occur to the zombic jaw: extra bone is deposited on the lower mandible to form an attachment point for larger chewing muscles. A normal human bite can exert between 150 and 300 pounds per square inch of pressure; a zombie puts that to shame with a bite that adds up to well over 1,000 pounds psi. This makes a zombie about equal to a wolf in biting strength, allowing it to bite through skull and bone to get at the pillars of its diet: brains and bone marrow. One ironic characteristic about zombies is that, while everything else is rotting off, their bones actually become stronger with every meal.

A typical early-stager's teeth

Teeth:
Although early-stagers are smart enough to use heavy objects (or the pavement) to shatter skulls, older zombies are much less savvy in their eating habits. Unfortunately, zombic teeth are not adapted to the powerful forces exerted on them by the jaw, causing them to crack and fall out. Eventually, all the teeth are gone, and the zombie is forced to chew with its exposed jawbones, which ultimately become cracked and worn down as well.

Respiratory & Digestive System
Contrary to popular myth, zombies do in fact require oxygen and food to survive, and their excretory system remains somewhat functional.

Late-stage zombic lung tissue
Respiration: As a result of their slowed circulation and lack of higher brain functions, a zombie's oxygen usage is even lower than a vampire's. However, due to lung damage, their rate of breathing starts off at about the same level as a vampire and gradually increases to that of a human as they lose more and more of their lung tissue. Interestingly, although zombies retain enough primitive instinct to hold their breath underwater, they usually can't hold it for very long, and will generally start drowning within a minute. Not only are they poor swimmers, they'll become overwhelmed by a strange sense of panic when in deep water, and will therefore expend more energy and oxygen trying to escape. Like fainting goats, their muscles will often "lock up" as they drown, giving the illusion of a quick death. Early-stage zombies are an exception to these rules, as they've been observed to ambush prey from underwater, thanks to their superior intelligence and lung function.

Saliva: Unlike vampire victims, those attacked by zombies can sustain horrific injuries as they are literally eaten alive. However, because zombic saliva contains a potent coagulant (as opposed to the anticoagulants in vampiric saliva), the victim is usually able to survive having flesh and even entire limbs chewed off as they (luckily) go unconscious from a combination of intense agony, acute blood loss, and the narcotic-like effect of zombic saliva—which also has the effect of significantly lowering blood pressure and cardiac output so that open wounds experience minimal blood flow. As long as the victim remains intact enough so that their heart keeps beating, they will usually transform into a zombie as well.

The degrees of rectal prolapse suffered by Stage II (A) and Stage III zombies (B)

GI Tract: As with humans, zombies can go over a month without eating, but only a week or two without water—which they will drink from sources such as puddles, streams, sewers and even bottles, faucets and water coolers. Digestion time remains close to that of humans, and early-stage zombies even retain enough sensation and intelligence to use a toilet or other sanitary location. However, this civilized behavior slowly goes out the window as the brain and bowels degrade, until the waste just dribbles out on its own like a broken sewer pipe. This usually prompts the zombie to go without lower clothing for the remainder of its life to ease its incontinent eliminations. Older zombies tend to suffer from complete rectal prolapse as well. Interestingly, well-fed zombies are easier to track because of the copious amounts of foul-smelling excrement they leave behind. Like wolves and other carnivores, zombie scat is usually quite dark due to the high blood content in the raw meat they consume.

An example of urinary retention with a greatly enlarged bladder

Bladder: Zombies are physically incapable of urinating—a condition known as urinary retention, or ischuria. This is caused by a combination of poor circulation, brain damage, and necrotic kidneys (which gradually develop kidney stones), along with a bloating of the prostate in males. Unable to drain its contents, the bladder swells to an enormous size, becoming tight and distended as excess urine backs up into the ureters and kidneys. While this would cause horrific agony in a normal human, zombies don't seem too terribly bothered by it. Within a week or two, depending on how much water the zombie has consumed and how much it sweats out, the grossly-engorged organ finally bursts, flooding the abdomen with dark, bloody fluid until it can be released through perforating ulcers (usually hastened by frequent clawing at their bellies). Catheters can be inserted to avoid this, but zombies obviously aren't smart enough to do this themselves—though they have been known to stick themselves with knives to create a crude drainage port.

Fat: Like vampires, zombies also lose weight during and after the transformation, though the cause behind the latter is quite different. While the diets and lifestyles of vampires and zombies are polar opposites, zombies will gradually lose additional body fat as their intestinal tracts rot and become increasingly inefficient at extracting nutrients from food, which is further exacerbated by parasites such as tapeworms. By the time a zombie enters Stage III, it will have become as emaciated (and hairless) as a decade-old vampire.

Dietary Restrictions: Unlike vampires, zombies can indeed survive on just animals, though they definitely prefer human flesh. Curiously, while they seem to enjoy carrion, zombies will always ignore necrotic human flesh—even when on the verge of starving to death—which is likely why they never try to eat each other. Another interesting difference from vampires is that, when force-fed, zombies can keep almost anything down, and chemicals such as caffeine and alcohol have very little effect on them.

Cardiovascular System

As anybody who has ever emptied their gun into an advancing zombie can tell you: they just don't bleed to death. Their circulatory adaptations allow them to survive massive trauma that would kill even a vampire. Some poisons, however, remain just as effective at taking them down—especially ones that attack the nervous system.

A pool of dried zombie blood

Blood:

Zombic blood is thick and dark, hence the nickname "zombie oil." As with vampires, higher iron and bile levels cause the blood to darken drastically, and total oxygen storage will gradually increase after transformation. A zombie's slowed circulation also improves clotting, but at the cost of tissue integrity. Also like vampires, it takes a while for the blood to fully darken, and it won't reach its full clotting and oxygen storage potential until after a few months.

Heart:

As with vampires, zombic blood is circulated by skeletal muscle rather than the heart. Cardiac paralysis was once a confounding mystery regarding vampiric and zombic transformation, until it was chalked up to simply being the result of involuntary muscle spasms slowly rendering the heart obsolete as these creatures evolved. What's known for sure is that if vampires and zombies had to rely on their heart for survival, a single well-placed bullet could easily paralyze the organ and kill them (as would gradual decomposition for zombies). However, this doesn't mean they can live without a heart.

Even though it no longer beats—and the blood clots too quickly to allow fatal blood loss—it's still the hub of their circulatory system, as it connects all the veins and arteries together. If it were removed, either through trauma or surgery, fatal thrombosis would occur throughout the body.

Varicose veins are a common side effect of a zombie's sluggish circulation.

BPM: Unsurprisingly, zombies experience a much lower bpm than vampires. Starting out at around 30, it falls into the teens over the next several days, and then the single digits over the next few months, becoming much more erratic and unpredictable as the vessels and skeletal muscles degrade.

A diagram of zombic vein dysfunction

Adrenaline: As with vampires, zombies also produce large quantities of this hormone/neurotransmitter during stress. While it makes them more powerful during combat, it also causes them to drown faster when trying to escape from deep water.

Bruising caused by burst veins

Immune System: Zombies do retain a working immune system, as evidenced by their pus-filled wounds, but it doesn't stop the slowed circulation and organ failure from allowing bacteria, parasites and gangrene to ravage their bodies—though it's greatly slowed by the natural antibiotics in their bodily fluids. As a result of this immunodeficiency, victims bearing transplanted organs are usually able to survive the coma, unlike vampirism victims. Lastly, like vampires, zombies are unable to get cancer.

Clotting/Healing: While zombies have fewer clotting factors than vampires, their lower bpm effectively evens out the rate of blood loss. However, the fact that zombies don't require as much blood volume allows them to survive being cut in half at the waist for roughly 1 to 3 minutes (compared to just 10 to 30 seconds for vampires). In addition, besides their nervous system, they can also heal any healthy tissue that isn't yet overtaken by necrosis, though it's a much slower process than with humans.

Organ Perforation: Because they feel much less pain than vampires, zombies barely notice injuries to the lungs and intestines—although a collapsed lung or two will definitely tire them more easily during extended encounters. As for the latter organ, the higher ratio of fecal bacteria to immune strength and healing ability makes such wounds ultimately fatal after a few days.

Body Temperature & Dormancy
Like vampires, zombies will take on the temperature of warmer environments and produce their own body heat when ambient temperatures drop between 30 and 60 Fahrenheit—although zombies are about 5 to 10 degrees warmer than vampires, with core temperatures ranging between 64 and 76 at rest and up to ten degrees higher when fully active. This physiological discrepancy is due to heat released by the various parasites living in zombic flesh—a phenomenon that causes zombies to emit steam in cool weather and phosphorescence when in water.

Before (top) and after (bottom)
thermal imaging of the transformation
Zombies also tend to sweat more than vampires—due in large part to their higher temperature and poorer regulation habits—but it's mostly a case of overactive sweat glands, which are likely a physiological response to their inability to urinate. The fact that they drool profusely could be another form of fluid removal.

Another vampiric trait zombies share is the ability to survive being frozen solid, along with the act of voluntary dormancy. However, given their constant state of decay, how long they can hibernate depends greatly on the surrounding temperature: a matter of weeks in the cold; mere days in the heat.

A frozen zombie discovered in North Dakota; 1972

Reproductive Organs & Sexuality
As with vampires, zombies are sterile, impotent and presumably asexual—although bloating from decomposition can sometimes cause the genitals to appear erect. Interestingly, while vampiric testicles still retain a scarce amount of sperm (though deformed and useless), zombic testes produce none whatsoever due to higher toxin levels and poorer circulation.

The bottom panel reflects the reality of both vampiric and zombic ovaries. Worse, the latter also develop pus-filled cysts over time, followed by necrosis.

Aging & Life Expectancy

The great irony of zombic life is that even as they voraciously feed, they too are being fed upon: a zombie's body is like a big Petri dish serving host to everything from bacteria and fungi to maggots and ants. The resulting state of putrefaction means, as terrifying as a zombie may be to the eye, it actually commits far worse offenses to the nose.

A long-held, common misconception is that zombies are immortal, when in actuality the vast majority of them live less than a year. It is possible to determine a zombie's age based on their external appearance—specifically, their level of decomposition, also known as necrotic degradation.

The three stages of necrotic degradation

Stage I: 1-3 months. The skin is mottled, flaking, peeling and covered with open sores.

Stage II: 4-6 months. The ears, lips, nose and eyelids are rotting away; loss of skin, teeth, hair, nails, fingers and toes. Bacterial breakdown of dead tissue causes bloating and eventual splitting of epidermis.

Stage III: 7-9 months. Body is emaciated, with large areas of exposed muscle and bone; loss of facial features, breasts, genitals and likely limbs. Outer tissues are dry, tough and leathery. Most of the hair and teeth are gone, and one or both eyes fall out. Another interesting difference from vampires is that older zombies do not experience any significant spinal curvature.

These two zombies destroyed near Gainesville, Florida in the early 1960s offer a good example of the differences between Stage II and Stage III zombies:

Stage II Stage III

The Stage II zombie retains both eyes, although the nose is already gone (along with most of the hair), the area around the mouth is beginning to undergo significant necrosis, and much of the soft tissue has become horrifically swollen. Still, the zombie has a large amount of intact flesh and some jagged teeth left, making it a formidable adversary.

Both eyes, ears and lips, and all of the nose and teeth are gone in the Stage III zombie, with mere tufts of dead hair glued to what's left of its crusted scalp. Having only its sense of smell and very little muscle strength and touch sensation left, such a zombie is likely to be malnourished and confused. In the old days, people often made sport of the poor wretches, taunting them with sticks and rocks and knocking them down. But as many of these pranksters found out, the Stage III zombie still had some power in its jaws and was capable of clamping down on a forearm and spreading the virus in an instant.

Cross-Species Infection

As with vampirism, the zombism virus has a similar effect on non-human mammals, especially other primates. Like their human counterparts, they will become aggressive, necrotic and lacking in coordination and speed—the latter being far unlike the swift zombie dogs seen in some fiction. However, as with HVV-infected animals, their symptoms are much more rabid, and as a result they don't live much longer than a few days.

The remains of a canine infected with zombism

Even vampires can be infected, though the transformation process takes a day or so longer due to their slower metabolism. The resulting abomination is known as a vampirozombie (or zompire), and it retains some of its vampiric characteristics, such as fangs and night vision. Everything else is rather muted: a vampirozombie will gnaw flesh as it drinks blood, it can barely feel its numbed skin burning in the sun, and its dying brain is not as prone to seizures. They are, however, still quite blinded by bright light, since their pupils remain fully dilated. Their fast-twitch muscles also make them somewhat more agile than normal zombies, but their lack of coordination prevents them from sprinting and jumping.

Interestingly, only vampires can become vampirozombies—which explains the old saying that the zombie is the last stop on the Undead Express. Even if a vampire did bite a zombie, the latter would not turn. It's not really known why, but it's speculated that zombies have far too many toxins in their bodies for the vampirism virus to function properly. As for how vampires can become infected with zombism when they're immune to most other viruses, it's believed that HZV's genetic similarities to HVV allow it easy access into vampiric cells.

While his obsession with twins is well known, Josef Mengele also had a morbid fascination with the undead.

Needless to say, vampirozombies were extremely rare (outside of laboratory experiments), as most vampires knew to stay well away from their undead brethren.

As for what would happen to a normal human infected with both viruses at the same time, heinous experiments performed by Nazi scientists have shown that zombification occurs in most surviving subjects, since that particular process is much more rapid than vampirism. In order for someone to become a hybrid, they first must be infected with vampirism, then zombism after they've entered the coma. What few subjects experienced immunity to one virus always succumbed to the other. Variations of these experiments included transplanting vampiric and zombic organs and limbs onto humans and vice versa—even grafting entire individuals together—with predictably disastrous results.

The preceding information brings up another question: do the vaccines work on animals and vampires? Seeing as how vaccines are basically killed or weakened virions, the answer is yes. Immune globulin, however, is a different matter entirely, since human antibodies that target the viruses are largely ineffective in other organisms. As a result, the vaccines must be administered before infection takes place. Immune globulin can be created for individual species, but the cost and manpower of such an endeavor is better spent on humans. After all, they pose the biggest danger when turned.

The Science of Lycanthropy
Werewolf Virology
By Hugo Pecos & Robert Lomax

Compared to vampires and zombies, werewolves are poorly understood. They live an isolated existence and have such refined senses that observing them in the wild is usually impossible. Watching them in captivity is also futile, as every werewolf ever captured for research purposes has died within three weeks of capture. Much of what we know about their biology comes from post-mortem examination of werewolf tissue and anatomy. Unfortunately, werewolf research ground to a halt after the FVZA was disbanded in 1975, so the current knowledge comes from a time when genetic research was less advanced.

The Virus

The lupine parvovirus
magnified 225,000 times
Wolves are natural hosts for the lupine parvovirus (LPV), the virus responsible for lycanthropy. Unlike the vampire and zombie viruses, LPV belongs to the Parvoviridae family, which includes the smallest known viruses in existence. Officially discovered during the 1960s, Parvoviridae have a genome consisting of single-stranded DNA and a non-enveloped icosahedral capsid. Unlike Mononegavirales, they don't uncoat until after entering a nucleus, and they tend to burst infected cells rather than bud from them. They're also highly resistant to environmental trauma, including digestive enzymes, making it much easier to spread via contaminated food and water sources.
What distinguishes LPV from other parvoviruses, however, is that it uses the budding method of reproduction and its capsid is much larger in size—though still smaller than the vampire and zombie viruses, as it lacks numerous genes dedicated to cross-species infection.

LPV's main carrier, the timber wolf

Wolves transmit the virus to humans through biting, which is why werewolf occurrences closely mirror wolf populations. Unsurprisingly, hunters and fur trappers have always been common victims. There is a growing fear that wolf recovery programs in the United States will result in an increase in werewolves, especially in suburban areas. One saving grace, however, is that LPV cannot infect or be carried in organisms other than canines and primates.

Like vampirism, LPV infects and transforms every living cell in the body that has a nucleus, rather than just infecting and destroying certain tissues. Since it's a DNA virus, unlike the RNA vampire and zombie viruses, no reverse transcription from RNA to DNA is necessary. Upon entering a cell, the viral DNA can immediately integrate itself into the host's chromosomes. Ironically, despite this simpler process, LPV is a much slower-acting virus than even vampirism (likely because the virus doesn't stimulate the thyroid gland as much).

Unfortunately, there is currently no vaccine for LPV. Anyone bitten, or accidentally infected during lab research, is doomed to either transformation or death, with no known cases of natural immunity. There were efforts to create a vaccine before the FVZA was disbanded, but the methods used for the vampire and zombie vaccines fell quite short.

Origin & Evolution

The evolutionary lineage of the lupine parvovirus is even more obscure than HVV and HZV, since it belongs to a completely different family while bearing many similar characteristics. Whether it's a matter of common ancestry or convergent evolution is a matter of debate. LPV seems more closely related to HPV, since they're both non-enveloped DNA viruses that alter cellular genomes.

Sites of Neanderthal and werewolf fossils

Like vampires and zombies, there were likely many flawed forms of werewolves roaming the world before natural selection narrowed them down into a single, perfected breed. As for a werewolf's lupine visage, it's surely no coincidence considering the virus' more canine host. Lateral gene transfer between wolves and humans is an undoubted possibility.

Lastly, while vampires and zombies came from Africa after plaguing our human ancestors, werewolves were believed to originate in the forest-heavy landmass of Eurasia—possibly after infecting and wiping out our Neanderthal cousins some 40,000 years ago—judging by the discovery of dozens of well-preserved fossils.

Stages of the Disease

The transformation of a human being into a werewolf shares some similarities with that of vampires and zombies: after infection, there is a period of high fever, chills and other flu-like symptoms, and the victim is likely to experience extreme thirst and itching as their metabolism and heart rate increase.

A severe skin rash is one prominent symptom of early LPV infection, and will persist through most of the transformation.
These symptoms take about 24 hours to appear and last approximately 48 hours. Unlike people infected with vampirism or zombism, lycanthropy victims do not ever slip into a coma, and they will more or less experience thicker and faster growth of body and facial hair which becomes difficult to shave through.
A person infected with LPV comes out of the fever in a highly dangerous state, displaying fierce aggression and bloodlust as their communication degrades into grunts, growls and hisses. The victim will make great efforts to flee the company of humans and complete their transformation in a more secluded area, such as a forest, sewer or an abandoned structure.

The physiological transformation into a werewolf begins approximately one week after infection, as the viral DNA essentially takes over the body's process of cellular differentiation—selectively altering certain parts of the human genome based on the final design of the organism. This causes a slow and agonizing reshaping of the victim's bones and soft tissues as the infected cells shift and divide according to their newly-modified genetic instructions.

As with vampirism and zombism, not every victim survives the transformation, as it puts a great deal of strain on the heart and body—especially for the very young, old and ill. The past discoveries of partially-transformed corpses confirm this statement, as well as provide valuable insight into a werewolf's intermediate stages of development.

The Science of Lycanthropy

Werewolf Biology

Return to Werewolf Virology

The exact order of these physiological mutations is a continuing source of debate among scientists, but there is a general consensus thanks to the aforementioned discovery and examination of corpses in different stages of transformation. According to these supporting pieces of evidence, the long and painful transformation from human to werewolf takes up to six weeks to complete. The details of this process are as follows.

Sense Organs

Like vampires, werewolves are nocturnal organisms. As such, the earliest known changes augment their ability to see, hear and smell in low-light conditions.

lycanthropic eyeball

Sight: Besides appearing irritated and bloodshot, the first thing to happen to the eyes is the formation of tapetum lucidum tissue behind the retina, causing eyeshine and improved night vision. Afterwards, as the inflamed sclera darkens to a more brownish or black tone, loss of pigment in the iris brightens its hue to either a pale icy blue or an intense yellow/amber coloration. Finally, the iris and cornea will slowly expand to take up more of the eyeball's surface, making the pupils appear smaller.

Smell/Hearing: For an early werewolf, hearing range quickly triples to that of a vampire, while smell becomes as keen as a zombie's. As these senses further sharpen, cartilage production causes the nose and ears to swell and enlarge, with the former becoming wider and flatter and the latter more pointed and raised. Eventually olfaction becomes 100 times keener than that of a human, while hearing ends up quadrupled.

General Appearance & Glandular Changes

After the sensory changes start taking place, a drastic warping of the victim's external appearance soon follows.

This screencap from An American Werewolf in London accurately captures the look of an early-stager.

Hair/Skin:

The first thing the victim will experience is an increase in body and facial hair, much like those who suffer from hypertrichosis. As it becomes coarser and thicker over the following days, the hands, feet and face become bruised and swollen as if they had been severely beaten. Soon this swelling and bruising spreads across the rest of the body as the victim experiences new bone growth. Like bears and other large mammals, an increase in melanin turns the skin either a very light or very dark grey, depending on the victim's ethnicity. However, the eyelids, nose, lips, soles and palms always become dark and thick, while the breasts and genitals remain somewhat lighter in color. The hair on the scalp is gradually shed as a sort of frizzy mane grows from the head, neck, back and chest. Unlike wolves, werewolves do not have whiskers.

Early tail formation

Sweat Glands:
As the victim grows more body hair, they lose most of their ability to sweat everywhere except their palms and soles. Like wolves and other mammals, werewolves cool off mainly by breathing and panting, as fluid evaporation cools the blood vessels of the lungs and tongue. Sweating also occurs around the nose, though moisture is usually the result of fluid from the nasal mucosa. Although these areas are usually dry, additional excess heat is released through the ears, face, shoulders and inner thighs thanks to the sparser hair and thinner skin. Apocrine glands also release sweat into the hair follicles, but these are mostly just used to deliver pheromones.

Anal Glands/Tail:
Like many mammals, including dogs, cats and even humans, werewolves bear a small gland on either side of their anus between the external and internal sphincter muscles. These glands secrete a foul-smelling liquid that is used to identify other werewolves and mark territory. Elongation of the coccyx into a fully functional tail seems to aid in this practice, and is around a foot long with sparser and shorter fur than that of a wolf.

Nails/Limbs:
As the hands and feet swell and bruise, the nails on the serum-glazed fingers and toes come loose and soon fall out as the distal phalanx bones grow into hooked claws, which slowly erupt from the former nail beds as hard keratin forms around the new quicks. Starting off short and small, these claws can grow to over six inches long, with tangible girth and thickness. Eventually a werewolf's hands become more like bear paws, limiting the use of their thumbs while making it easier to dig and move on all fours. Elongation and thickening of the forearms, feet and spinal column occur soon after for this purpose.

Doubling in size, this is what ultimately becomes of the hands.
However, bipedal movement remains just as feasible, thanks to the plantigrade feet and enlargement of the pelvic and shoulder girdle.

Werewolf feet are generally plantigrade during bipedal movement, and digitigrade while on all fours.
Teeth/Jaws:
As with fingernails and toenails, a werewolf's human teeth will come loose and fall out over time as larger and sharper replacements grow in their place, all while the skull and jawbones become larger and more elongated. While humans have a total of about 32 teeth (4 canines, 8 incisors, 8 premolars and 12 molars), werewolves can have up to 42 (4 canines, 12 incisors, 16 premolars and 10 molars) like wolves and bears.

Bad Moon's accurate rendition of a fully-transformed werewolf

Muscular & Skeletal System
Many of the changes to a werewolf's appearance and abilities are a direct result of adaptations to its bones and musculature.

Two open growth plates
Vocal Folds: The growls, barks and howls of a werewolf sound almost identical to that of a normal wolf, only louder and deeper due to their larger body size. They're also more judicious in their use of sounds than wolves, though it's still their main form of communication, along with head and arm gestures.

Growth Plates: As a person grows, cartilage-bound fractures in the skeleton allow enlargement and lengthening of the bones. But once adulthood is reached, these fractures ossify into solid bone, preventing any further growth. So how are werewolves able to bypass this natural restriction? Three cell types are involved in the reversal of this ossification: osteoclasts, which break down bone tissue by dissolving its mineralized matrix (a process known as bone resorption); chondrocytes, which form new cartilage to replace the missing bone; and fibroblasts, which strengthen the cartilage by reinforcing it with additional collagen. Once this process is complete, cartilage can once again stack inside the open growth plates and spread across the outside of the skeleton to form new bone tissue via osteoblasts, which replace old cartilage as it degenerates. This continues until a few years after transformation, when cartilage production stops and the plates once again ossify into solid bone.

Skeletal System: Skeletally, werewolves have more in common with large bears than they do with wolves, with the following differences from the former: the eye sockets and cranium are more ape-like with a similar attachment point to the spine, the upper torso is somewhat shorter with wider shoulders and intact clavicles, the pelvis is larger and wider with a longer tail, the hind legs and feet are more elongated, and the five digits on each paw and foot are arranged in a wolf-like arc. The average height for a fully-grown werewolf ranges from 7 to 9 feet tall when standing on their hind legs, and they can weigh close to 1000 pounds. Both height and weight depend on pre-transformation factors (as do fur and eye color), along with nutritional intake during and after the transformation.

An old, semi-accurate illustration of a werewolf's body structure

Muscles/Connective Tissue:

Like vampires, an early-stage werewolf will quickly become several times stronger as much of its musculature is converted into fast-twitch tissue that's rich in myoglobin and mitochondria. Over the next several weeks, however, extreme muscle growth causes it to become drastically enlarged, making fully-grown werewolves approximately 15-20 times stronger than before transformation, with a top running speed of 50-60 mph, and bone-crushing jaws that can exert up to 2500 psi. As with vampires, the muscles and skeleton become denser and more durable with age, which is quite beneficial given the large body mass and cat-like leaping ability of at least 10 feet. Muscularly, werewolves have more in common with primates than they do with wolves.

Medical Applications:

It's believed that the deossification process in lycanthropic growth plates inspired Italian surgeon Alessandro Codivilla to try this himself, resulting in a surgical practice during the early 1900s known as distraction osteogenesis. This process is used to reconstruct skeletal deformities and lengthen the long bones of the body by cutting the bone in two and allowing new bone tissue to form in the gap, which is gradually moved apart until the desired length is reached. Not only does it lengthen bone tissue, distraction osteogenesis also has the benefit of simultaneously increasing the volume of surrounding soft tissues. This surgical practice is perhaps best known for reversing the effects of dwarfism, and it's hoped that in the future a more natural process can be used to turn ossified growth plates back into cartilage. But alas, only werewolves are capable of this for now.

Human heart (L) compared with a lycanthrope's (R)

Cardiovascular System

Unlike vampires and zombies, a werewolf's circulatory system and body temperature remain largely unchanged from when they were human—aside from a drastic increase in organ size and blood volume to supply its larger body mass. And although it is comparatively rapid throughout the transformation process, fully-grown werewolves experience a decreased resting heart rate of around 40-50 bpm (similar to that of a large bear). As such, the physiological reliance on this organ makes werewolves a lot more vulnerable to chest injuries—especially since their ability to clot blood, heal injuries and fight infection isn't that much better than humans and other mammals. However, like vampires and zombies, there has never been a recorded case of a werewolf having cancer.

Cross-Species Infection
As stated previously, the lupine parvovirus cannot infect organisms other than canines and primates, unlike the highly-zoonotic vampire and zombie viruses.

The carcass of a wolf had succumbed to LPV
In addition, LPV infection leaves most bodily structures and functions unchanged, although it still causes extreme aggression and eventual death. It should also be noted that not even primates such as monkeys and apes can become werewolves, since they'll always die within a week, before such a transformation could even start.
Because their cellular makeup is so different from humans, the lycanthropy virus seems to have no effect whatsoever on vampires or zombies. Fully-transformed werewolves infected with vampirism or zombism would most likely become rabid and die like other non-human mammals, although this scenario has never been tested or observed; and the data on early-stage werewolves is insufficient.

How the Soviet Strigoi probably looked

That's not to say that a vampirolycanthrope isn't possible—if the fast-acting vampirism virus was injected into a human roughly 24-48 hours after being infected with the slow-acting lycanthropy virus, so that not every cell is transformed by one or the other. And because the resulting tissues will be mismatched, the host would also have to be administered cortisone (or a similar drug) to suppress its immune system.

A Soviet experiment during the 1950s used just this method on an unknown number of criminals and political prisoners through cruel and vigorous trial and error. Of course, most of them either died or became vampires—except for one man, a 30-year-old thespian who transformed over the next few weeks into a creature that looked somewhat more humanoid than a typical werewolf, but with all the undead features of a vampire. The Soviets dubbed this hybrid the "Strigoi," after the shapeshifting vampires of Romanian mythology. What happened to this being is unknown, as most of the records on it were either withheld or destroyed.

Return to Werewolf Biology

Unlike vampires and zombies, werewolves are largely solitary creatures. During the transformative process, they will tirelessly relocate to a remote region of wilderness and set about creating a well-hidden shelter. However, they will occasionally commune with other werewolves and are even capable of sexual procreation. Most of what we know about them has been gleaned from eyewitness accounts, post-mortem examination and the excavation of burrows. As a result, the data on werewolves is small—too small to reach statistical significance.

The Recently Turned

Over the first few weeks of a werewolf's life, it will move far away from human population centers, traveling under the cover of night to avoid detection. They will bound down alleys, lope over rooftops and even hang on to the undersides of trucks. Early-stage werewolves can be hundreds of miles from their hometowns in a matter of days. They are very assured in their actions and do not exhibit the stress and discomfort often seen in newly-transformed vampires.

Dwellings & Dietary Habits

Newly-transformed werewolves will live in temporary shelters until they find a place suitable for a permanent abode.

A werewolf den in Georgia; 1944

Far from populated areas, they prefer heavily-wooded hillsides facing towards the world's equator. Rocky outcroppings with small caves are the most ideal for them. They will even drive bears from dens that they covet.

Werewolf dens are snug—typically 10 to 12 feet long and a few feet high. They keep a clean, simple home, with bedding from plant materials, feathers and down. Although their coat thickens in response to cold weather, they can and will skin animals for blankets.

Interestingly, werewolves often hold on to items that meant something to them during their human existence: pictures, jewelry, souvenirs, clothing, books, etc. But for the most part, their living standards are closer to those of their wolf cousins than of humans.

The back feet and front paws of a werewolf are double the size of their former human appendages.
They also tend to be larger than bear tracks, with the digits arranged in a more pronounced arc.

Werewolves take great efforts to camouflage their presence in the wild, as they will cover the opening of their dens with boulders and brush and use their tremendous digging ability to carve out exit tunnels. Outside the den they urinate on bushes and trees to mark their territory and will bury their excrement. They've even been known to cover their tracks.

Like most humans, werewolves are quite attentive to their hygiene: they enjoy frequent baths in lakes and rivers, and will even rake their claws through their fur like a comb. They also chew certain plants to create crude poultices for wounds they receive taking down large prey.

Because of their remarkable intelligence and adaptability compared to common animals, werewolves can survive virtually anywhere, from the coldest polar regions to the hottest tropical rainforests. A single werewolf's home range is typically several hundred square miles. Being omnivorous, they spend much of their time hunting and foraging, eating anything and everything from berries and plants to fish, rodents and even large ungulates such as elk and moose.

As with bears, werewolves can fatten up and hibernate for up to several months without eating, drinking, urinating or defecating. Unlike vampires and zombies, however, werewolves cannot survive being frozen.

Human Attacks

Like other large predators, werewolves don't appear to have a taste for humans.

The attacks that do occur are extremely rare, and evidence suggests that they are a matter of territory rather than hunger.
That is not to say that werewolves never hunt humans: the Beast of Gévaudan killed more than 80 people in 1760s France, and a series of werewolf attacks on fishing camps and small towns in Wisconsin during the 1920s resulted in 23 deaths. The latter wolfman was killed by a team of FVZA agents, and the subsequent autopsy revealed a viral infection in its brain, suggesting that it may have been suffering from derangement. Werewolf attacks on humans are also associated with droughts and other situations that might put the beasts under stress. However, this is not a common phenomenon, considering their adaptability.

Although werewolves are highly territorial and easily threatened, their resulting behavior is largely situational. For instance, a single hiker blundering into their range might be shadowed for a while and then left alone, while a party of armed hunters is far more likely to incite their wrath. If you wish to avoid becoming prey, do not travel in deep woods during the sunrise and sunset hours. Firearms will just agitate the wolfman and are not going to be of much help if it attacks. But rest assured: werewolf attacks are extremely rare, and should not dissuade anyone from enjoying recreational activities such as camping and hunting.

Social Dynamics

Because werewolves are much rarer than zombies and vampires, it is unusual to see one—much less two—in a given expanse of wilderness. Still, it does happen. If two males end up crossing paths, they will get into a vicious and bloody duel, and the battered loser will be forced to relocate to a new range.

Photo of a werewolf that had broken into a Canadian couple's cabin

Females tend to behave quite differently, as they don't seem to mind sharing the same land, and will sometimes even work together in the absence of a male.

Male and female werewolves get along especially well: once contact is made, they will spend the next several days together, hunting, frolicking and mating. Once the female is pregnant, however, the male usually leaves. Still, long-term bonds aren't unheard of.

After a nine-month gestation, the female will give birth to a single pup. Though pink, hairless and only a pound or so at birth, the pup grows quickly, reaching adult size in just two years. It will accompany its mother until then, before being expelled into the wild to survive on its own. For reasons not entirely clear, a female werewolf can only give birth once in her lifetime.

At adulthood, the differences between born werewolves and turned werewolves are very subtle: the latter seem to have more stretch marks on their epidermis, and a more jagged shape to their growth plates. Still, it's far from an exact science. A more obvious way to tell is if the werewolf has tattoos, piercings, surgical scars or a missing foreskin.

Demographics, Life Expectancy & Population

Most werewolves are in the 15 to 45 age group upon transformation. Regardless of their former human age, it seems to have no bearing on their lifespan as a werewolf. However, they still do age on a molecular/genetic level, albeit to a slower degree than humans.

The remains of werewolf killed in a mudslide in southern California; 1986

While the outer limits of their natural lifespan are currently unknown, the most documented cause of death among werewolves is infection, usually from wounds sustained from large prey items. Predation from hunters is rare, and they've never been known to get cancer.

A dessicated werewolf carcass in Alaska

Despite their aging and vulnerability to injury and microbes, werewolves survive much longer, on average, than vampires and zombies. It's believed that one werewolf has been living in the Black Forest of Europe for more than 200 years, based on tracks and scat analysis.

As for population, the number of werewolves in existence is probably less than 1000 worldwide, as development has encroached significantly on their habitat. Werewolf distribution is closely linked with that of their wolf cousins, and are predominantly found across North America, Europe and Asia. Canada is likely home to the largest number.

Global distribution of werewolf habitats, marked in green

Captivity
As mentioned before, werewolves that are placed in captivity always die within three weeks of capture.

Werewolves were typically kept in large bear cages.
The reasons for this are poorly understood, but it seems to be a case of behavioral changes leading to a state of physical decline. Refusing to eat or sleep, they will become highly stressed as they try desperately to break free from their confines, causing an enormous release of adrenaline that forces their metabolism to go into overdrive. Unable and unwilling to meet the nutritional demands required to combat the rapid starvation caused by this, the werewolf becomes lethargic as it ages rapidly. Circulatory decline and organ failure occur shortly after.
Attempts have been made to try to keep werewolves alive by sedating them and inserting a feeding tube, but even the highest dosages have little effect on their will to die.

Early-stage LPV victims tend to last somewhat longer in captivity, but only by a week or so—as proven by the Soviets in their attempts to create more werewolves.

Werewolf myths have been around perhaps even longer than those associated with vampires and zombies. For example, Ancient Greek mythology tells of Lycaon, a man transformed into a wolf after eating human flesh. Furthermore, the word werewolf is thought to be derived from the Old English wer, meaning "man." While the specific attributes of werewolves vary across different cultures, the beast itself is generally the same: a part-man, part-wolf creature of the night who preys on humans. But just as with vampires and zombies, most of the myths surrounding werewolves do not hold up to scrutiny.

Only silver can kill a werewolf

Source:
Silver is identified with the moon and is therefore ideal to slay a creature transformed under the light of the full moon. Eventually this myth expanded to include all "unnatural" creatures of the night, such as vampires.
Fact:
To kill a werewolf, you must use bullets or cartridges with serious stopping power to pierce its thick hide, but they need not be made of silver. Just be sure to aim for the head or the heart.

Werewolves only appear/attack during a full moon

Doctor Who

Source:
Long-running superstitions about the full moon's effects on animals and humans. A similar myth depicts werewolf transformation as being triggered by a full moon, or by negative emotions.

Fact:
Werewolves can appear and attack at any time, although they are much more active at night. Furthermore, the moon has no effect on a werewolf's transformation process, nor does its mental state.

A lycanthrope will transform into a werewolf at sunset and revert back to its human form by sunrise or death
Source: Numerous Hollywood movies.

An American Werewolf in London
Fact: The transformation from human to werewolf is both slow and irreversible, taking up to several weeks to complete. Although it makes for good drama, a rapid transformation into a hulking beast is impossible for one important reason: where does all the extra body mass come from? Proteins, fats, sugars, vitamins, water, all the materials required for cellular growth and energy production would have to either be stored in the body in massive amounts or consumed orally as the victim transforms. Even if the person was bloated and obese with stores of extra body mass, transforming within the span of an hour would produce so much cellular heat that it would literally cook the victim to death. Even the 8 to 14-hour transformation into a zombie causes irreversible brain and organ damage from the high heat production.

You can become a werewolf by performing a ritual

Source:
Association of werewolves with black magic, Satanism and the occult.

Fact:
You can only become a werewolf by being infected with the lupine parvovirus, which is usually spread from the bite of an infected timber wolf. Infection via a werewolf is actually quite rare, considering the high mortality rate of such encounters.

Werewolves can be avoided by climbing an ash tree or running into a field of rye

Source:
The ash tree myth likely stems from Greek mythology, as it was an ash tree that a man of Anthus' family hung his clothes on before swimming across a lake in Arcadia and being transformed into a werewolf. The rye superstition may have come from the fact that rye, commonly eaten by monks, was considered to be a holy grain and therefore able to repel "Satanic" creatures such as werewolves.
Fact:
Because of their long claws and heavy bodies, werewolves make very poor tree climbers. However, they are not bothered by rye (or gluten in general). Even hiding in a tall field of rye wouldn't work, as a werewolf's sharp senses would allow it to find you pretty easily.

Monkshood repels werewolves
Source:
Aconitum, aka monkshood or wolfsbane, is one of the most poisonous plants of European origin. Even touching it without gloves can be potentially fatal. Toxins extracted from the plant were historically used to kill wolves, hence the name wolf's bane. Traditionally, wolfsbane was said to ward off both werewolves and vampires, usually by placing it under one's pillow at night.
Fact:
The only way it would ward off a werewolf is if you buried yourself in an impractically-large pile of it, which is just as hazardous to your health as the beast you're avoiding. Basically, you'd be better off just using bear mace or an air horn.

You can cure yourself by killing the werewolf that bit you

Source:
Simply a way to instill courage and false hope in order to get more able-bodied people to hunt werewolves without fear of infection. The same was also applied to vampires, such as the myth that killing the Alpha or "Master" will destroy or cure the entire pack.
Fact:
Once bitten, the only way to avoid turning is death.

Werewolves look identical to common wolves
Source:
Similar to vampires and vampire bats, the fact that wolves and werewolves share so many similarities gave rise to the myth that infected wolves were simply another form of werewolf.

Fact:
Werewolves look more like human-wolf hybrids with gigantism.

Werewolves resemble furry humans
Source:
Most likely the result of falsely attributing lycanthropy to humans who suffered from hypertrichosis, which causes excessive growth of body and facial hair. Early-stage werewolves look similar to these individuals, although such sightings are extremely rare considering how reclusive they are compared to fully-transformed wolfmen.

Fact:
As stated previously, fully-transformed werewolves barely resemble their original human forms, if at all. In fact, they're often times mistaken as bears.

Werewolves feed on human flesh

Bad Moon
Source:
Occasional incidents throughout history, further exacerbated by fear, ignorance and folklore.
Fact:
Like sharks, bears and other predators, werewolves usually dislike the taste of human flesh—preferring instead large wildlife like elk and moose, along with plant materials such as berries and herbs. The attacks that do happen to people are mostly for territorial reasons, although it's not uncommon for werewolves to make opportunistic meals of such kills.

Return to Werewolf Mythology

Previously, I discussed how vampires and zombies would fare in combat. But what about werewolves? How would they match up against their perhaps more well-known counterparts? Let's go to the chart and find out:

Attribute	Werewolves	Vampires	Zombies	Advantage
Brain	Intelligent	Highly Reflexive	Barely Functional	Vampires
Eyes	Night Vision	Dilated Night Vision	Extreme Myopia	Vampires
Sense of Smell	Extremely Developed	Above Average	Exceptional	Werewolves
Hearing	Acute (6-10 Mile Range)	Exceptional	Impaired	Werewolves
Jaws	Bone-Crushing	Powerful	Vice-Like	Werewolves
Nervous System	Normal	Normal	Capable of Repair	Zombies
Circulatory System	Normal	Resilient	Virtually Indestructible	Zombies
Strength	Epic	Exceptional	Powerful Grip	Werewolves
Speed/Agility	Outstanding	Advanced	Stiff-Limbed, Slow	Werewolves

As frightening and powerful as vampires and zombies are, it is the werewolf that truly occupies the top of the food chain here. A rare blend of power and savagery, the werewolf combines the most formidable traits of its undead cousins, and then some. In fact, it's said the only thing a zombie fears is a werewolf. One reason there are virtually no existing tales of werewolves in the wild is that anyone who had such an encounter did not live to tell about it.

Return to Werewolves Versus Vampires & Zombies

In Wisconsin, sightings of creatures reported as "werewolves" date back to the mid-1930s, first from Jefferson County. In the 1980s, similar reports sprang from Walworth County, the next county south—mostly from around the small town of Elkhorn, near a lane called Bray Road.
A rash of sightings during the 1980s and 90s prompted a newspaper to assign coverage to reporter Linda Godfrey. It was she who initially coined the name "Beast of Bray Road."

A Fox News report on the Beast of Bray Road

Reports state that these creatures are large—two to four feet tall while walking on all fours and five to seven feet when walking upright. There are reports on file in which eyewitnesses claim to have seen either walking style used; and sometimes both have been reported during one sighting. Weight estimates range from 400 pounds up to 700 pounds.

The creatures are said to resemble the stereotypical Hollywood werewolf, looking like a human/wolf hybrid. Yet their behavior is markedly different.

These beings seem to be scavengers, in large part. Many reports of them include details of the creatures eating roadkill, usually held between their large paws. Most sightings end with the creature fleeing humans and returning to the dense brush and forest.

There were also a high number of sightings near Native American effigy mounds, which lead some researchers to make connections between these beings and the skinwalkers of Native American folklore. However, not one documented report is on file in which someone has witnessed these creatures shapeshifting. Of course, the fact that they can easily go from bipedal movement to moving on all fours could possibly be misinterpreted as a pelt-covered man transforming into a wolf.

Accounts of similar creatures are sometimes reported from the neighboring states of Michigan and Minnesota—one prime example being the Michigan Dogman.

Longinus: Vampire Emperor

Longinus in Herculean garb
During the early days of the Roman Empire, vampires were hunted and destroyed by an elite squad of the Legion. The Roman ability to control vampires was widely respected and made it easier for them to colonize farflung nations. Captured vampires were brought to the the Coliseum in Rome, where they fought lions, tigers and Christians in nighttime battles.

Frieze (detail): The Slaughter of the Vampires
A frequent spectator at these contests was the young Emperor Longinus, who began his reign in AD 68 at the age of 17. Longinus' favorite was Brittanicus, who was captured in England in AD 65 and had developed a formidable record as a vampire-gladiator. Against the advice of his Praetorian bodyguards, Longinus had Brittanicus installed in a lavish suite inside the palace. One night, Longinus paid his guest a visit and the inevitable happened: Longinus was bitten and became Rome's first vampire emperor.

The vampire emperor's short reign over Rome was disastrous. The Praetorian Guards who had defended Longinus were expelled from the Palace, and vampires became protected throughout the Empire. Longinus and Brittanicus led other vampires on nightly hunting parties through the streets of Rome. Vampirism, which had previously been contained within Rome, exploded.

Facing a dire future, the expelled Praetorian Guards took it upon themselves to save the Empire. On a warm summer morning in AD 69, about a dozen Praetorians burst into the palace. The vampires, drowsy and bloated from the previous night's feast, were easy pickings and the Praetorians methodically dispatched them, saving Longinus for last. He was decapitated, and his head was stuck on a pole outside the city gates as a warning to any vampires who might want to venture into Rome.

Rome is Saved

Quadilla

The decline of the Roman Empire left Europe in a turbulent state. In an absence of any central authority, the countryside was overrun by a series of vampire armies, each more terrifying than the last. The armies, generally consisting of between 50 and 100 vampires, would swoop into towns on horseback in the dead of night, howling with bloodlust. The only saving grace for the people of Europe was the limited range of these armies, as it was difficult for them to stray far from their daylight havens. But in the Ninth Century, a charismatic leader named Quadilla united a number of vampire armies into a mobile, fearsome fighting force that had many in Europe believing the end of the world was nigh.

Quadilla grew up riding horses and tending goats and sheep on a farm near the Po River in northern Italy. His bucolic upbringing came to an abrupt end at age 16, when a corrupt local priest confiscated his family's property. The evicted family had the distinct misfortune of settling in a gypsy camp shortly before it was set upon by a small vampire army. Quadilla's parents were killed; he was bitten, then taken away to join the army.

Quadilla quickly distinguished himself as a great horseman and fearless warrior whose ambitions outpaced the limited scope of his precursors. Quadilla envisioned himself as the leader of a vampire empire stretching from Gibraltar to the Danube. With his great skills as an orator, Quadilla was able to convince local vampire armies to join his cause. After winning important victories against the Lombards, the army began a slow, inexorable march down the Italian peninsula toward Quadilla's ultimate goal: the papal leadership in Rome.

Charlemagne

Quadilla's offensive was greatly aided by the Italian topography. Each night, he would raid a village for blood, then take shelter in the numerous caves of the Apennine Mountains. Remindful of the corrupt priest who took his boyhood home, Quadilla saved special cruelty for houses of worship. He plundered monasteries and left the heads of priests impaled on stakes outside the churches. These horrific displays convinced many that Quadilla was the Devil himself, and that the advances of his army represented the end of the world prophesied in the bible.

In December of 772, Quadilla's army took Siena, leaving it only 150 miles from Rome. As the Italian capital swelled with refugees, the stories of Quadilla took on an outsized, mythological scale. Eyewitnesses told of a ten-foot-tall, fire-breathing man with horns, cloven hoofs and a tail. While none of these stories were true, they surely unnerved Pope Hadrian II. The Pope, facing desertions in his own army, sent envoys to the Frankish Kingdom of the north to ask the young king Charlemagne for help.

Charlemagne slays Quadilla (from illuminated manuscript)

Though Charlemagne had come to power only two years earlier, at age 29, the six-foot-six-inch King of the Franks already had ambitions to match his towering frame. He wanted nothing less than to rule Europe, and he knew that having the imprimatur of the Pope would help him greatly in his quest. He told the papal envoys that he would take his men into Italy as soon as the snows melted.

In the spring of 773, Charlemagne led his army across the Alps into Italy. He followed the coast south and made camp along the Tiber River north of Rome, not far from the site of Quadilla's most recent assault. Charlemagne had planned to use the camp as a base from which to conduct sorties into the mountains, but Quadilla had different ideas. That night, the vampire army attacked the camp and inflicted heavy losses on Charlemagne's army before retreating back to their caves.

Charlemagne's fire cart, seen in this medieval illustration, outlived him by almost 1000 years

As the day dawned, Charlemagne surveyed the wreckage of his camp and realized he could not fight the vampires by conventional means. After breaking his army up into smaller groups and setting them in defensive positions in the hills, he sent his most experienced vampire hunters into the mountains to conduct reconnaissance. That night, the men located the vampire cave network, and as soon as the sun came up, Charlemagne led his army there. Rather than send his men stumbling blindly into the dark caves, Charlemagne had them heap timber onto modified horse carts, light the pile on fire and roll the carts into the caves. The plan worked beautifully: vampires were smoked out into the light and beheaded by the hundreds.

Working from cave to cave, it took four days for Charlemagne's army to kill the last of the vampires. Quadilla himself fought gallantly; though effectively rendered blind by the bright sun, he killed over 20 soldiers before Charlemagne dispatched him with a blow from his sword.

On Christmas Day, 773, a grateful Pope crowned Charlemagne as Holy Roman Emperor in the city he had saved. During Charlemagne's 47-year reign, Europe enjoyed a relative respite from vampire armies. The fire carts Charlemagne had improvised lasted even longer; they were employed against vampires well into the Eighteenth Century.

In 1974, a team of Italian archaeologists discovered a huge cache of artifacts in caves near the Tiber. Among the finds were armor and weapons bearing the broken cross symbol peculiar to Quadilla's army. A museum was built nearby to house the relics and honor the men who saved the seat of Christianity from a grisly fate.

The Stone City Vampires

The Jianwen Emperor
The Ming Dynasty (1368-1644) was a great age in Chinese history, highlighted by territorial expansion and a flowering of arts and culture. But the dynasty almost never got off the ground due to the pernicious influence of vampires.

The Mings arose in the 14th century behind the leadership of Zhu Biao, a onetime Buddhist monk who had risen through the ranks of the military during the turbulent times. After overthrowing the Yuans, Zhu Biao, also known as the Hongwu Emperor, established a dynastic capital in 1368 at the ancient city of Nanjing on the Yangtze River delta south of Beijing. The imperial complex, known as the Stone City, included 90 palaces and courtyards and was surrounded by a moat and a massive stone wall.

Like many leaders of the time, the Hongwu emperor was fascinated by vampires. He considered older vampires to be soothsayers who held the the keys to immortality and so he tolerated their nocturnal hunts, as long as they directed their bloodlust away from him and his family. The Hongwu emperor even assigned an eloquent, learned vampire named Fang Xiaoru to tutor his children and grandchildren. The aptly named Fang developed a close bond with the emperor's grandson, Zhu Yunwen.

When the Hongwu Emperor stepped aside in 1392, a struggle for power ensued among his family members. After a brief period of unrest, the emperor's grandson Zhu Yunwen assumed the throne in 1398 at the age of 22. Zhu became known as the Jianwen Emperor, meaning “Establishment of Civil Virtue,” but his reign was to belie those words.

As soon as he ascended to the throne, the Jianwen Emperor appointed Fang Xiaoru as second-in-command and head of his personal security staff. Fang and his coterie of vampiric assistants had their wing at the Imperial Palace.

The new emperor's fascination soon crossed over into obsession; he was turned during his first year of rule, and began leading his pack of vampire administrators on nightly forays into the neighborhoods outside of the Stone City. At first, they hunted far from the palace, in the neighborhoods where the commoners, merchants, artisans and laborers lived. Then, they turned their attention to the the high-ranking officials and wealthy merchants who lived to the east and west of the imperial palace. The Jianwen Emperor and the other vampires would scurry along narrow passageways lined with siheyuan, or courtyard dwellings, and hop over the garden walls to gain entry into the homes. Throughout the summer of 1398, the quiet nights were shattered by the screams of victims echoing off the carved roof beams and pillars of the large siheyuan, and peace only returned when the vampires retreated behind the heavily guarded walls of the Stone City to sleep, their bellies filled with blood.

A model of Imperial Nanjing with the Stone City to the right.

The situation in Nanjing quickly grew intolerable, and in 1399, a group of Nanjing aristocrats traveled north to Beijing to visit Zhu Di, the Jianwen Emperor's uncle and one of the men who been passed over for the job. They implored Zhu Di to help, telling him that his nephew had fallen victim to “evil counselors.” Zhu Di had acquired considerable military experience fighting with the Mongols in the north and saw in the aristocrats' tale an opportunity to seize the title that had eluded him just a year earlier. He quickly raised an army and marched toward Nanjing.

When the Jianwen Emperor learned of the move, he sent his own troops north to meet his uncle. Over the next two years, Zhu Di's troops fought their way south, kilometer by kilometer, and in 1402, they finally reached Nanjing. A huge battle took place outside the walls of the Stone City. For days, the sky above the city was dark with bolts from recently developed repeating crossbows, and the acrid smoke of hand cannons and bombs filled the air. Zhu Di's troops finally made it to the Stone City walls, where they were driven back by flamethrowers directed down at them from the watchtowers. Finally, they breached the walls and engaged a small army of vampires army led by Fang Xiaoru. The vampires fought fiercely, but had to retreat into the Imperial Palace as the sun came up on July 13, 1402. Zhu Di's troops set fire to the palace, and three main halls, including the throne room, burned down.

Several vampires who escaped the flames were captured, hooded and imprisoned. Among them was Fang Xiaoru, the emperor's trusted advisor. He was executed shortly thereafter, reportedly by being severed at the waist. Before he died, Fang managed to dip his finger in his own blood and write the Chinese word for “usurper” on the ground—a final insult to Zhu Di.

Unfortunately for Zhu Di, the Jianwen emperor was not among those captured. It was initially assumed that he had perished in the flames, until searchers found a network of tunnels under the imperial palace that led to the river outside of the Stone City.

The uncertain disposition of the Jianwen Emperor unnerved Zhu Di. He surrounded himself with bodyguards and had some of his top soldiers search the city for weeks on end looking for the vampire emperor. When the bodies of two of Zhu Di's trusted bodyguards turned up at the gates of the Stone City, drained of blood and dismembered, the word for “usurper” carved into their chests, Zhu Di decided it was time to relocate the capital to Beijing. There, he ordered construction of a massive compound called the Forbidden City. The complex, modeled after Nanjing's Stone City, was completed in 1420.

Four years later, Zhu Di died. The Ming Dynasty that he helped nurture would continue on for more than 200 years.

And the Jianwen Emperor? Some believe he followed Zhu Di to Beijing and still lives there, more than 500 years after he was ejected from the throne. They say he walks the streets in the guise of an old man stooped with age, and preys on the many peasant farmers and migrant workers who flood the city looking for work.

Simonetta and Giuliano

Simonetta and Giuliano served as models for Botticelli's Mars and Venus
Simonetta Vespucci was said to be the most beautiful woman in all of Renaissance Florence. Born in 1453, the niece of explorer Amerigo Vespucci seemed to cast a spell on the leading men of Florentine society. After meeting her, the great artist Botticelli painted no one else for the rest of his life (she served as a model for all of his Madonnas and Venuses). Brothers Lorenzo and Giuliano de Medici of the Florentine ruling family fell in love with her and tried to outdo each other in displays of affection. The more practical Lorenzo, occupied with affairs of state, eventually lost Simonetta to his more romantic brother. In celebration, Giuliano held a jousting tournament and dedicated it to his 23-year-old fiance.

her death from the tower of the Palazzo Vecchio Shortly thereafter, Simonetta became sick with consumption (tuberculosis) and the prognosis was grim. A distraught Giuliano, unwilling to lose his beloved, decided that keeping Simonetta alive as a vampire was better than letting her die. He summoned Dominic Salcedo, the city's foremost vampire hunter, and gave him a top secret mission: capture a vampire and bring it back to the palace. Salcedo, unwilling to disobey one of the city's most powerful men, complied and, the following night, an unfortunate vampire was brought to the room in the palace where Simonetta lay dying. The vampire bit her and was then destroyed. Within two days, Simonetta herself had turned.

done after their deaths
Though Giuliano must have been shocked when he first saw Simonetta, with her black eyes and ghastly color, he was pleased to discover that she recognized him and remembered their life together. Like many a hopeless romantic, Giuliano mistakenly decided that the love Simonetta had for him would trump any bloodlust she felt. And so when she beckoned him with kind words, he eagerly went to her, and was bitten. That night, Lorenzo de Medici discovered his brother in the throes of transformation, with telltale wounds on his neck. For a second time, Dominic Salcedo was summoned. Salcedo and his team searched the enormous palace for Simonetta, eventually finding her in the bell tower. Cornered, Simonetta jumped to her death on the plaza below; the same plaza where, only weeks earlier, hundreds had jousted in her honor. Per his request, Giuliano was buried at her feet.

A heartbroken Botticelli made one more painting of the ill-fated couple, using their death masks for models. In the picture, Giuliano faces the pale, shadowy Simonetta before an open window, a well-known symbol of death. The dove perched on the dead branch in the lower left of the painting is rich with symbolism. Doves mate for life and, according to Renaissance lore, will perch only on dead branches after their mates have died.

The Trial of Fatinelli
During the Middle Ages, the scientific study of vampirism was tangled up in religious notions of good versus evil. Vampires were the Devil's foot soldiers, and victims of vampirism were thought to have had some sort of moral failing which left them vulnerable to attack. The large number of prostitute-victims was held up as proof of this.

The church, at perhaps the zenith of its power, had a vested interest in keeping this notion afloat, as nervous worshipers tended to spend more time in church and give more money. But the dawn of the Renaissance gave rise to a number of visionary scientists who, at their own peril, began to question previous assumptions about vampirism. And one of them, an Italian named Ludovico Fatinelli, paid for it with his life.

Ludovico Fatinelli

Fatinelli was a native of Florence whose father was employed in the relatively new profession of making eyeglasses. The young Fatinelli took an interest in his father's trade and made his own magnifying glasses to study the world around him. As his lenses got more sophisticated, he was able to discern a world previously unknown to science. His notes from a look at a sample of water from the Arno River capture the excitement of discovery: "I then saw, with great wonder, that in the water were very many little animalcules, very prettily a-moving. The animalcules were in great number, and oft times spun around like a tail." Fatinelli had taken the first recorded look at bacteria.

The trial of Fatinelli

The young Florentine went on to study medicine at the University of Padua, where one of his teachers was the great scientist and philosopher Galileo Gallilei. While there, Fatinelli, through the use of increasingly more sophisticated microscopes, discovered that "animalcules" also appeared to live in human tissue. From these observations, the young scientist developed the radical theory that it was these microscopic entities, not moral failures, that were the real source of vampirism. Experiments on animals seemed to bolster his hypothesis, and he set to work on a treatise that would summarize his findings and, he hoped, establish his reputation as a great scientist.

Florence's Piazza
Signoria the morning of Fatinelli's execution

In Januay, 1616, Fatinelli published his findings under the title, Treatise on Vampires. Alas, his timing couldn't have been worse. Pope Paul V, worried about the rise of Protestantism, had been taking a hard line against any new interpretation of church dogma and decided to make Fatinelli an example. The young man was brought up for the Inquisition, and when he refused to recant the conclusions in his treatise, he was charged with heresy and brought to trial. Though a simple recantation probably could have gotten him off the hook, Fatinelli stood behind his findings. Judgment was swift: the verdict was guilty, the sentence, death.

On April 23, 1616, a huge crowd gathered in Florence's Piazza Signoria to witness the execution. Fatinelli was tied to a pole atop a pile of logs, which were then set ablaze. The fire ate through the rope securing Fatinelli to the pole, and his left arm flew up in the air. A shriek went through the crowd; many fainted, thinking that the Devil was passing a curse from Fatinelli's body onto them. But the man on the pyre was only flesh and blood.

Once the spectacle was over, one of the most important scientists of the time was ignominiously heaved into a pauper's grave, where the church hoped he would be forgotten forever.

It was not to be. Though Fatinelli was gone, his research lived on. For years after his death, illicit copies of his banned treatise made their way through Europe's scientific communities and helped pave the way for important work by scientists like the Englishman Edward Jenner, who created the first vaccine in 1795. Fatinelli had indeed been far ahead of his time: too far ahead, for the church's comfort.

Ascension

Ascension is the name given to the ceremony wherein a person is formally accepted into a vampire pack. The ceremony begins with the fledgling approaching an altar in the company of one or two pack members. There, the Alpha Vampire reads a series of vows in Latin, which the fledgling repeats. The ceremony culminates with the Alpha biting the fledgling, usually on the wrist, and drinking some blood. The fledgling is then taken to a private chamber, where transformation takes place over the next two days.

An Ascension altar in France

Ascension was set up as a way to formally reward fledglings, those humans who served a variety of functions to the pack. Fledglings paid bills, ran errands, provided shelter and procured victims for the pack. Most fledglings provided these services with the hopes of eventually being invited into the pack, and the Ascension ceremony was a way to formalize the process.

The classic Ascension texts were written in Latin and were taken from the Black Mass and the writings of Quadilla, the 9th Century vampire general who nearly overran Rome. The vows included declarations of fealty to the pack and Satan, along with some aspersions at Jesus. A typical passage (translated into English):

Unholy satan, bringer of enlightenment,
Lend us thy power, now and throughout our lives.
Endless glory shall be given.
Lord of hell, show us thy way.

In the old days, Ascension ceremonies took place in private churches or crypts on the estates of the wealthy. The Marquise de Carnavalet, a courtier to the French King Louis XIV, was turned in a ceremony at Versailles in 1680. However, most packs did not have palaces at their disposal and had to make do with decidedly less glamorous sites, such as sewers, caves and abandoned buildings.

In the modern era, the Ascension ceremony became a luxury many packs could not afford. Vampires looking to build a pack quickly had no time to train fledglings and preferred to transform civilians and force them to learn on the fly.

Still, the rite of Ascension persisted out of a sense of tradition and history. Elite vampire packs kept detailed records of those who had "ascended," and they considered any who hadn't to be second-class citizens.

The Ship of the Dead

Portsmouth in 1607

The voyage of the British merchant ship Cormorant from Portsmouth, England, to the Caribbean island of Nevis had special meaning for Andrew Oglethorpe. After ten years as a sailor, Oglethorpe had decided to call it quits and live out his days as a fisherman in the British West Indies. And so, on June 15, 1607, the night before his last voyage, Oglethorpe set up shop in a Portsmouth pub and drank to his good fortune.

Captain Horatio Wheeler

It wasn't to last. As Oglethorpe staggered toward the docks an hour or so before dawn, a prostitute called to him from the shadows. Inebriated, and facing three months at sea with no female companionship, Oglethorpe eagerly followed her into a dark alley, ignoring the old seafarer's maxim: harlot for hire, might be vampire. No sooner had they found a private spot than the prostitute sunk her fangs into him, and Andrew Oglethorpe's dream of a life of tropical ease was over before it started.

Like many victims of vampirism, Oglethorpe chose to deny what had happened. He boarded the Cormorant and assumed his duties as the ship left port under the direction of Captain Horatio Wheeler. By nightfall, Oglethorpe was in sick bay with a fever and chills. As Oglethorpe's wounds were not easily visible, the ship surgeon probably confused his symptoms with one of the more common ailments of the day. Eventually, Oglethorpe slipped into a vampiric coma; he was being prepared for burial at sea when he came back to life.

The Cormorant brought vampirism to the New World

The fate of the crew would have been left to the imagination had Captain Wheeler not been an assiduous journal-keeper. Entries in his log became increasingly ominous as the journey progressed.

August 24th: "For the past three days, we have been sailing through a storm, which has prevented us from continuing a sweep of the ship designed to root out any remaining vampires. Thus far, we have captured and thrown overboard three crew members who were showing signs of the dread disease."

September 14th: "The vampires have barricaded themselves in the hold and, despite my entreaties, none of my crew dares go down there to dispatch them. Our nerves are frayed, as none of us have slept for two weeks. Last night, a man leaped off the boat rather than face another night of this torment."

September 16th: "They are at my door now. There is no hope. I can only pray that God dash this accursed ship against the rocks, lest it deliver its hellish cargo upon some innocent shores."

The captain's wishes would not be met. On the night of September 20th, Cormorant cruised into the harbor of the small Caribbean island of Nevis with Captain Wheeler, now a vampire, at the helm. Native islanders paddled out on canoes to greet the ship, unaware of the awful surprise waiting on board.

From this one ship, the vampire virus would spread rapidly across the Caribbean and the New World. The disaster prompted an overhaul of shipping procedures. Henceforth, all sailors were given thorough physical examinations before boarding.

Yo-Ho-Ho and a Bucket of Blood

"I personally saw him...rip the heart from one man's chest..."
"The black ship appeared so suddenly beside us, it was as if the fog itself had given it form. Within moments, our deck was swarming with men of the most ghastly countenance. All were gifted swordsmen, impervious to our bullets. In the midst of this maelstrom came the largest man I have ever laid eyes on. I personally saw him cut down three men with one swing of his sword, then reach down, rip the heart from one man's chest and tear his fangs into it with a zeal I can only describe as religious."
So wrote Jacob Hensleigh, a sailor discovered by the British Navy clinging to a piece of driftwood in the Mediterranean Sea. As the only survivor of one of the last attacks by the legendary vampire-pirate Redbeard, Hensleigh was indeed a lucky man: between the years 1795 and 1797, Redbeard and his crew killed an estimated 500 sailors and paralyzed shipping on the Mediterranean.

Redbeard was born James Wyatt around 1778 in London, England. As a boy, he would spend hours hanging around the docks of east London and dreaming of the day when he would first set sail. That day came for him at age 15, when he joined the crew of a merchant vessel. Always a quick study, Wyatt rose swiftly through the ranks, and by age 25 he was the captain of his own ship, a beat-up sloop he sardonically called the Carcass. When England declared war on France in 1793, Wyatt had the Carcass retooled for battle and offered his services as a privateer for the Royal Navy. His job was to board and plunder any ships carrying supplies between France and her ally, Spain. The barrel-chested, six-foot-five-inch Wyatt proved to be a natural leader and his crew became such efficient plunderers that Napoleon himself put a bounty on their head. But Wyatt's days of service to the English crown came to an end in the summer of 1795, when he was bitten by a vampire outside a waterfront pub in Gibraltar. Wyatt quickly spread the virus to his crew and soon the Carcass was sailing under the direction of about 50 bloodthirsty vampires.

Redbeard sailed under a blood-red Jolly Roger

Although the transition from sailor to vampire-pirate presented real difficulties for most, James Wyatt was different. Besides possessing an unusually sharp learning curve, Wyatt knew the Mediterranean coast like an old friend. By the fall of 1795, he had set himself up in a ruined castle in the shoulders of a protected harbor along the Algerian coast in north Africa. It was there that he adopted the name Redbeard and set about building an empire of piracy and vampirism.

Each night, the Carcass would set sail from the castle flying a blood-red Jolly Roger from its mast. Exploiting their night vision, Redbeard and his crew would identify a ship, slip up alongside it and board while most of the sailors were still sleeping. The crew of a single ship could supply enough blood to feed Redbeard's vampires for a month. Those unfortunate crew members who weren't bitten right away would be taken back to the castle and imprisoned in the dungeon to await a grisly fate.

Nelson's ships besiege the pirate hideout

More than his skills as a sailor, it was Redbeard's appreciation for politics that explained his relative longevity. In return for their protection, Redbeard paid off local Algerian caliphs with the booty from the ships he raided. He gradually expanded his force, adding only the strongest, most capable sailors. Within a year, Redbeard's pirate empire had grown to include about 250 vampire-sailors and a fleet of five ships. Throughout 1796, his raids grew more and more devastating, and all of Europe started feeling the effects. Shortages in food were reported as cargo failed to meet its destination, or else arrived late because so many crews refused to sail at night.

An ignominious journey back to London

In early 1797, Redbeard and his men scored their biggest coup yet when they took control of a 74-gun frigate belonging to the British Navy. The firepower of the captured frigate made Redbeard even more dangerous, and King George III of England was forced to take action. He decided to send a fleet of warships to the Mediterranean under the direction of the young commodore Horatio Nelson with instructions to bring back the head of Redbeard.

In early June, a dozen warships under the command of Nelson sailed around the head of the Iberian peninsula and into the Mediterranean. For six weeks, the fleet searched in vain for Redbeard along the north African coast. Finally, on July 12, they plucked the terrified Jacob Hensleigh from the waters and knew they were close. A day later, the fleet boarded a ship and found it littered with bloodless, dismembered body parts. The next night, the fleet came across Redbeard's army in the midst of an attack on a fishing boat. They surrounded the vampire ships and a brutal battle ensued, during which Nelson took a bullet to the arm. The English lost three ships and scores of men in the battle, but they fought on, knowing that time was on their side.

With dawn starting to lighten the eastern horizon, Redbeard was forced to pull back and make for safe harbor. The English fleet followed him all the way to the castle and began several hours of relentless bombardment. That afternoon, 500 troops went ashore to finish the job. Redbeard and a few of his closest associates retreated to the dungeon, where, despite being vastly outnumbered, they put up a ferocious fight. In all, it took three days to secure the castle. The troops then freed several dozen prisoners and burned the vampire compound to the ground.

When Nelson's men returned with Redbeard's head, Nelson had them hang it from the bowsprit at the front of the ship for the journey back to England. As they triumphantly made their way up the Thames to London, huge crowds gathered along the riverbanks to watch. Nelson presented Redbeard's head to King George III, who had it placed on a stake on London Bridge, not far from where a boy named James Wyatt had first gazed west and dreamed of a life at sea.

The Mystery of Mungo Park

Mungo Park

As the Eighteenth Century drew to a close, European explorers turned their gaze toward one of the world's last great unexplored regions: the heart of Africa. Though colonizing Europeans had been visiting coastal villages and establishing forts in Africa for over 300 years, little was known of the interior of the Dark Continent. Prior exploration attempts had been undone by disease, hostile tribes and large swaths of dense, unmapped jungle. But these obstacles only whetted the appetites of European explorers hoping to become the first white men to ford the River Niger, look upon the legendary city of Timbuktu, or walk the streets of Tellem, a city on the Niger said to be built entirely of gold.

One such intrepid soul was Mungo Park, a Scottish physician who had been bitten by the exploring bug while in his twenties. In 1795, Park, with the support of England's Africa Society, set off in search of the Niger and the fabled city of Tellem. Park and his team of 30 men sailed down the east coast of Africa to the mouth of the River Gambia, where the English had established a fort. After a trip down the Gambia and an overland trek through dense jungle, the team reached the Niger. By then, however, Park had run out of money and was forced to return to England without finding Tellem.

A 1795 map shows
Park's route up the Gambia to the Niger

Park spent the next decade raising funds and organizing a team for a second expedition to Tellem. Finally, in 1805, the Scotsmen embarked from England, fully confident in his mission's success. Park and his team returned to the Niger, where they piled into canoes and paddled south in search of Tellem. None of them were ever heard from again.

in a 1930 photo

Park's disappearance was big news back in England, where the public had developed a fascination with explorations in Africa. A rescue mission was quickly put together under the direction of Africa Society director Joseph Langley. Langley and his team traced Park's route, sailing up the Gambia and crossing the jungle to get to the Niger. At the end of the second day on the river, the team paddled around a bend and laid eyes on the legendary city of Tellem. In his 1808 account of the mission, Dark River, Langley recalls his team's disappointment upon finding that, far from being a city of gold, Tellem was a small village constructed of mud. As the team drifted closer, they saw dozens of Africans emerging from their homes and walking towards them with a peculiar, stiff-legged gait. In his account of the trip, Langley remembers being initially heartened by the sight of the villagers: "They wore brightly-colored garments and the broadest of smiles."

Sir Joseph Langley
But as he got closer, Langley realized that what he had mistaken for smiles were actually the grimaces of flesh-hungry zombies: the entire village had been transformed. Langley ordered an immediate retreat, but the canoes became swamped in the rapids. As the voracious zombies waded into the river, Langley was swept into the current and carried several miles downriver. He eventually reached a friendly village; the villagers took him to the mouth of the Niger, where he was picked up by a British ship.

Though Langley had gone further into Africa than any white man before him, he found himself the subject of scorn upon his return to London, where his zombie story was derided as a self-serving excuse for a failure in leadership. However, later accounts from the Asante tribes of East Africa lent support to Langley's account. Denkyira, the Asante king, informed the English garrison in Gambia that he had led a raid on Tellem and destroyed many zombies, including several white men. The king presented the garrison commander with the clothes and personal effects of these men. Among the items was Park's diary, with its ominous last entry: "Tomorrow, we should reach Tellem, a city that has haunted my dreams since I was a child. I cannot sleep for the excitement."

Haussman's Children

Baron Haussman

"What Vampire Problem?"
In this sardonic 1913 French illustration, a lone vampire prowls the sewers of Paris, unbeknownst to the passersby above
The first half of the Nineteenth Century saw a population explosion in European cities. The rural poor and dispossessed flooded urban centers looking for work, and in the process created overcrowded slums rife with disease, crime...and vampirism. All across Europe, vampires found good hunting and ample hiding places in medieval-era neighborhoods, with their tumbledown dwellings, narrow streets and alleyways. Every major European city had a concentration of vampires: the East End of London, Lisbon's Alfama, Warsaw's Old Town. In Paris, so many vampires haunted the neighborhood north of the Louvre that it became known as the Vampire Quarter.

European leaders tried a variety of measures to try and control vampire numbers, including hiring more vampire-fighters and instituting strict curfews. But the number of attacks continued to climb. In 1850, Baron Georges Haussman, Paris' top city planner, offered a radical suggestion: instead of trying to kill the vampires, why not eliminate their habitat? Haussman envisioned a radical reconstruction of Paris, with broad boulevards, spacious squares and a modern sewer system (it was still common belief that poor sanitation contributed to vampirism).

Haussman's plan won approval from French Emperor (and Napoleon grandson) Louis Napoleon and, in 1853, work crews began tearing down the Vampire Quarter, building by building. As crowds of onlookers watched, vampires scurried from collapsing buildings, shrieking and shielding their eyes from the sun, only to be methodically destroyed by special legions of the French Army. In one church, more than 50 vampires were flushed from the crypt. While some French, like writer Emile Zola, protested the widespread destruction of architectural treasures and the lack of interim housing for the homeless, the project did seem to be succeeding in slowing the rate of vampire attacks.

In Paris, aging tenements were torn down (l) to make room for the Paris Opera (r)
Within 20 years, Haussman had transformed the the old rabbit warrens of the Vampire Quarter into posh neighborhoods with grand boulevards radiating from large squares like the Place de l'Opera. Haussman was celebrated as a genius and European cities raced to follow his lead. From Lisbon to Prague, broad boulevards and wide squares become de rigueur.

However, the canonization of Haussman proved to be premature. After dropping for a short time, vampire attacks in Paris rose to their highest levels ever. To make matters worse, the attacks were no longer confined to Paris' slums. Vampires attacked the well-heeled of the Tuileries, they preyed on students across the river in the Latin Quarter. The great irony of Haussman's work was that, while he had driven vampires from their old haunts, in building Paris' extensive sewer system he had provided them with the perfect place to hide.

For the next 50 years, these vampires, known in Paris as "Haussman's Children," made their home in the sewers, emerging at night for hunting. For a short time, the French stationed troops there, but had to pull out due to high rates of desertion. During World War II, French resistance fighters hiding from the Nazis in the sewers encountered vampires in 19th-Century dress. The development of the vampire vaccine, along with more sophisticated vampire-fighting technology, eradicated vampires in Europe by the mid-1960s. However, in 1971, a rash of vampire attacks along the river Seine paralyzed

Paris. French authorities, working with the assistance of the FVZA, tracked a lone vampire into the sewers. The vampire was cornered near the Place des Vosges, and perhaps the last of "Haussman's children" was destroyed.

The Vampire Investigative Bureau

Crowd apprehends a vampire in 18th Century London
England's Vampire Investigative Bureau, the world's first and longest serving undead abatement force, was the model for the FVZA and many other organizations across the globe.
The seeds for the VIB were planted in London during the 18th Century, when the city's steep rise in vampirism forced civic leaders to offer substantial rewards for slaying vampires. Mercenary vampire hunters patrolled the streets from sunset to sunrise, collecting five to ten pounds for each vampire they destroyed. Unfortunately, the system was rife with corruption, as many slayers developed too close a relationship with the vampire underworld of London and took bribes for looking the other way or for putting the squeeze on a rival vampire pack.

In 1842, Prime Minister Robert Peel formally established the Vampire Investigation Bureau. Requirements for investigators were minimal at first:

To be over 21 and under 27 years of age.
To stand clear 5ft 9ins without shoes or stockings.
To be able to read well, write legibly and have a fair knowledge of spelling.
To be generally intelligent and free from any bodily complaint.
Investigators walked beats during the night, armed only with a cutlass. As newer divisions were established in the outer suburbs, the beats became longer and the danger increased, since much of the territory was open fields between residential areas, leaving lone investigators easy prey for roving vampire packs.

Letter to police from Jack the Ripper
Like the FVZA, the VIB in its early incarnation was hardly a model force. Drunkenness and desertion were high. The VIB also was limited by a rivalry with the Metropolitan Police. In the late 1880s, several women were brutally murdered in the Whitechapel area of city. Even though the attacks bore evidence of the work of vampires, the Metropolitan Police refused to hand the case over to the VIB, insisting that the perpetrator was a man. Finally, after a dozen known murders (and probably many more that were undiscovered), the VIB took over the case. VIB officers conducted several raids in the Whitechapel area and destroyed a number of vampires, including Wentworth Smith, a suspicious lodger given to "nocturnal wanderings." While most people believe to this day that the Whitechapel killings were the work of Jack the Ripper, evidence is overwhelming that the murders were in fact the work of a vampire.

Consider the following:

The murders all took place in the evening.
Most of the victims were known prostitutes, a favorite vampire target.
There was a surprising lack of blood around the bodies of several victims.
Police found body parts in the areas of the murders, including a torso under a railway arch and another torso in the cellar of a new police building under construction.
Vampires often will tear victims apart after feeding.
The murderer sent police half of a human kidney in the mail, along with a note stating that he had eaten the other half. The body of another victim was missing a heart.
Vampires have a fondness for gnawing on human internal organs, especially the kidneys, spleen and heart.
Several eyewitnesses described the killer as "shabby genteel," suggesting a vampire who's been wearing the same clothes for some time.

VIB badge
Lastly, and perhaps most tellingly, the murders stopped after the VIB operation. My personal belief is that the vampire Wentworth Smith was the real Jack the Ripper.

English imperial might stretched the VIB to the breaking point and beyond at the turn of the century. The VIB snuffed out vampire packs everywhere from the mines of South Wales to the slums of Calcutta. The Bureau suffered high rates of suicide and attrition as the vampire population hit its peak worldwide. However, the VIB was able to turn the tide in the 20th Century, thanks to a number of innovations:

1908: officers begin working with dogs.
1921: zombie division formed, based across the river in Southwark.
1934: the VIB Academy founded.
1940: first women officers.
As England's overseas possessions shrank, the VIB turned its focus to controlling the undead on the homefront. The U.K.'s small size and relatively isolated geography made the job easier, and the VIB swiftly had vampires and zombies under control. By the early 1960s, the VIB was gone but not forgotten, as they received a roll of honour at Westminster Abbey.

Fort Blood

The North-West Mounted Police, Special Division, a.k.a. the Specials

At about the same time that the FVZA was being organized here in the United States, our neighbors to the north were coming to grips with their own vampire problems. For about 200 years, the huge swath of land in the western half of Canada was controlled by the fur-trading Hudson's Bay Company. The powerful Company was able to keep any vampire outbreaks in check with their own security force. But when the Canadian Confederation Act of 1867 brought the western lands under Canada's control, the Hudson's Bay Company pulled out, leaving the region in a state of disorder. A motley crew of outlaws began moving into the region, and in those days, whenever outlaws congregated, vampirism was sure to follow.

The opportunistic outlaws were mostly Americans who saw money to be made setting up illegal whiskey-trading camps in the region. These scofflaws would trade whiskey with Indians in return for buffalo furs and horses, and the success of their operations sometimes enabled their crude encampments to grow into rowdy towns rife with gunfights and prostitution. Vampirism inevitably took hold, driving out the transients and leaving the Indians to deal with the problem.

Inside Fort Blood

There was one whiskey-trading camp that eclipsed all others in debauchery and lawlessness. The camp, which would come to be known as Fort Blood, was the provenance of the Gallatin Gang, a group of low-lifes who had escaped from a Montana prison before making their way to the Great White North and establishing a successful whiskey business. Even by the standards of whiskey camps, Fort Blood was a den of iniquity. With all the prostitutes and transients, it was inevitable that a vampire plague arrived, and when it did, the Gallatin Gang hit upon a novel solution to the problem. Rather than leave town, the Gang struck up an agreement with the vampires in which they would lure Indians to the camp with the promise of whiskey, and then set the vampires on them. In return for providing blood for the vampires, the Fort Blood outlaws were able to keep and sell whatever buffalo hides and horses they took from the Indians. By the early 1870s, Fort Blood had grown into a formidable problem, paralyzing regional trade and settlement and poisoning sensitive relations between the local Indian tribes and the new Canadian government. Now that Canada was responsible for this land, it was clear that Fort Blood had to go.

In 1873, a freshly-minted force of 250 Canadian Mounted Police, or Mounties, traveled west with orders to destroy Fort Blood. But the Gallatin Gang received word of the impending attack and was ready when the Mounties arrived. The Gang repulsed the attack and then, as night fell, unleashed the vampires. All 250 Mounties were killed. The defeat was a stinging rebuke to the newly formed government, and proof that Canada needed a specialized force to fight vampirism in the west.

In 1874, a bill was passed creating the the North-West Mounted Police, Special Division, or the "Specials," for short. 400 men were recruited and trained in vampire combat, and in July of 1874, they left their compound at Fort Manitoba for the long trek west. With 300 horses, 73 wagons and 142 heads of cattle in tow, the Specials followed the Boundary Trail west and made camp at a bend in the Milk River not far from Fort Blood.

The Specials in control

Rather than conduct a frontal assault on the fort, the Specials took a more stealthy approach. A small battalion slipped into the fort posing as Indians and, once inside, killed the Gallatin Gang. They then let the rest of the Specials in to finish off the sleeping vampires. By the next morning, Fort Blood was nothing more than a smoldering pile of ash.

For the next several years, the Specials marched from outpost to outpost, slaying vampires and restoring order to the region. Trade and settlement gradually returned to normal, and relations with the Indians improved. However, the frontier nature of the west ensured that the Specials remained busy, especially during the periods from 1882 to 1885, when the railroad was under construction, and 1896 to 1899, during the Klondike Gold Rush. Like the FVZA, the Specials were often pulled away to fight wars on foreign soil, but they still managed to keep a lid on any vampire or zombie outbreaks in their homeland. In 1973, the Specials celebrated their centennial with a ceremony during which they received medals from Queen Elizabeth II. Shortly thereafter, they were disbanded.

Paris' eerie
catacombs

In the summer of 1891, young painter Lucien Steketee arrived in Paris from a small village in Brittany to find a city energized by bold artists breaking free of the confines of Impressionism. Even in a place crowded with painters, the young Breton quickly stood out. Tall and handsome, student of Monet's, friend to Pissaro and Cezanne, he cut a dashing figure in the City of Light.

Like fellow painter Toulouse-Lautrec, Steketee's preferred subject was the nightlife around his atelier in Montmartre. He painted prostitutes, dancing girls, beggars...and vampires. While other artists had painted vampires from memory, Steketee was the first to have them sit for portraits. Despite the danger, Steketee painted over a dozen vampire portraits, and with each one his sense of ease grew. In July of 1892, a vampire suggested to him that Paris' underground catacombs, with their stacks of skulls and bones, would be a more atmospheric backdrop for the portrait; Steketee foolishly followed him there and was set upon by a hunting pack.

Moulin Rouge
Two days later, a local vampire patrol discovered Steketee about to sink his teeth into a young woman. He fled to the nearby Moulin Rouge nightclub and barricaded himself on the third floor. A mob formed outside and began chanting for the vampire's head. In desperation, Steketee stepped out onto the balcony and made an impassioned plea for his life. So persuasive was he that the mob spared him and allowed the gendarmes to take him away to jail.

Steketee in an 1890 self-portrait
Steketee had found his calling. Writing feverishly in his dim prison cell, he advanced the radical notion that vampires should be treated like the sick people they were, and hospitalized rather than destroyed. Steketee's broadsides were distributed by his artist friends and created a sensation in Paris. Key to his growing support was his claim that he could live without blood. "Controlling bloodlust," he wrote, "is a matter of discipline and faith." He held himself up as proof, and the public bought it.

With public sentiment on his side, Steketee was released into the care of Madame Mauriello, a wealthy widower and devoted follower. She set him up in her Tuileries mansion, where he continued his crusade, speaking to huge crowds and winning support from politicians and religious leaders.

Mme. Mauriello's mansion the day after the fire
But away from the spotlight, Steketee was hunting, with the help of Madame Mauriello. Each night, she would prowl the streets of Paris looking for young women to lure back to her mansion under the auspices of posing for a famous artist. Once there, the women would be plied with wine until Steketee emerged, fangs flashing. He kept the "newly converted" in his service as a sort of harem.

The arrangement was shortlived. Early on the morning of December 12th, 1892, a terrified girl arrived in the police station claiming that she had narrowly escaped the clutches of a vampire. Police officers followed her back to the Mauriello mansion and discovered the pack. Word spread, and for the second time in his life, Lucien Steketee found himself hiding out from an angry mob. But this time, there was no escape: the mob burned the mansion to the ground, with Steketee, Mme. Mauriello and the young vampires inside.

Steketee's body was never found, leading to speculation that he had escaped; a suspicion strengthened during World War II, when several members of the French Resistance reported seeing a man resembling Steketee prowling the sewers. To this day, he is said to emerge from underground on the anniversary of his death to claim a victim. Which is why, before nightfall on December 12th, suspicious Parisians hang garlic and crosses over their doorways.

Vampire Population Hits 1 Million

Public Health Notice,
Chicago 1908

London's Battersea Station, the end of the line for thousands of vampires

At the turn of the Nineteenth Century, a growing, increasingly urban population, along with rising immigration, contributed to a spike in vampire numbers. In a widely-published 1905 vampire study, FVZA scientists estimated the worldwide vampire population at one million.

The vampire population boom forced world leaders to take drastic measures to try and slow the spread of the plague. U.S. President Theodore Roosevelt ordered a curfew in every city and town in the country. At dusk across the land, curfew sirens rang out as children ran in from their play and cities fell dark. The curfew was economically devastating for restaurants, theaters, bars and nightclubs, and led to a mini-Depression. President Roosevelt also authorized an emergency vampire relief fund, with most of the money going to the FVZA to hire more people and upgrade their equipment. In addition, every branch of the Armed Forces was called into service to help the Agency.

Large cities were hardest hit by the vampire explosion. Early each morning in London, boatmen would make their way west along the fog-shrouded Thames, stopping at various wharfs to pick up vampires that had been destroyed the night before. The sight of a withered old boatman slipping silently through the fog, his boat heaped with vampire corpses, was one of the indelible impressions of the day. Eventually, the vampire corpses would be brought to the Battersea power station for incineration. At its peak, Battersea station was burning more than 100 vampires a day.

NY Times
Headline, 1905
Other cities took more dramatic steps to combat the rise in vampirism. In Bombay, India, the city's old quarter, with its narrow streets and numerous homeless people, had become a a breeding ground for vampires. When extermination efforts by British troops did little to stem the problem, the Viceroy ordered the area burned to the ground. Thousands were displaced, and a precious historical neighborhood was gone forever. Not surprisingly, vampire fighting became a valued trade: mercenary vampire fighters roamed the globe, demanding top fees for their services.

FVZA Agents take down
a "curfew-buster"
While vampires took thousands of victims between 1900 and 1910, their psychological toll on the public may have been even worse. Innocent people were gunned down as panic and paranoia reigned. Some enterprising Americans tried to leaven the stress by opening illegal bars and clubs known as "Curfew-Busters." The locations of these establishments changed often to keep away from the prying eyes of the FVZA.

In general, attempts to skirt the law were the exception and not the rule. Most people in the U.S. honored the curfew, forcing blood-starved vampires to become more brazen, and in the process, more vulnerable. After reaching a peak in 1905, the vampire population stabilized somewhat, before growing again through the Great Depression and the war, until science trotted out its greatest weapon: the vampire vaccine.

Dr. Kristof Goessman
Much of what we know about vampires and zombies today owes itself to the work of Swiss scientist Kristof Goessman. Dr. Goessman was an inventor who made a fortune patenting a process for freeze-drying coffee. But the undead were his real obsession, and in 1930 he established the Goessman Institute for Vampire and Zombie Studies in a castle he had purchased high above the Swiss village of Greifensee.
Over the next seven years, Dr. Goessman acquired a steady supply of vampires and zombies from European bounty hunters and spent countless hours observing them. Oblivious to danger, he measured their strength and endurance and tested their tolerance to sunlight, noise and poisons. Though some would consider his research cruel, Dr. Goessman amassed a wealth of data and published much of it in the 1935 book Among Vampires and Zombies. The book created a sensation worldwide and did much to debunk stereotypes and superstitions associated with the undead.

Goessman Castle
as it appears today

Dr. Goessman's neighbors in the village of Greifensee got used to the trucks, carriages and horse carts arriving at the castle at all hours of the night, and they even grew to accept the inhuman groans and cries coming from the dungeon laboratory. But their tolerance had a limit. One summer night in 1937, an escaped vampire broke into a home and fed on a young woman. After chasing the vampire away with torches, the enraged villagers marched up to Goessman's castle and set fire to it. The fire spread quickly and, by the first light of dawn, everyone inside was dead. Goessman's remains were found in the lab. A cursory autopsy indicated he had been mauled by a vampire and was probably dead before he was immolated.

Once they captured the wayward vampire, criminal investigators were able to piece together the incident. Apparently, this particularly articulate vampire tricked one of Goessman's assistants into letting it go by promising him untold riches. Once freed, the vampire killed the assistant and attacked Goessman before heading down to the village.

Fortunately, many of Goessman's notebooks were rescued from the fire, including one that laid the groundwork for the vaccine research done at the Santa Rosa Institute in the 1940s and 50s. Among Goessman's important discoveries was that, in the absence of food, both vampires and zombies were capable of entering a dormant phase during which their pulse rate and metabolism would slow. This allowed them to survive without food for weeks longer than previously thought. Goessman also discovered that aggression was an essential part of the makeup of vampires, and that simply feeding them blood was not enough to keep them healthy. Perhaps because of his unusual methods and macabre demise, Dr. Kristof Goessman has never received the respect accorded to scientists like Jonas Salk and Louis Pasteur. But the fact remains, the good doctor saved untold lives by hastening the discovery of the vaccine.

FDR signs the Emergency
Relief Act, as FVZA Directors Louis Huffman (r) and Anton Bowers look on.

In the early days of its existence, the FVZA's mode of operation was not unlike that of the police force. FVZA Agents were a visible presence in the community, and FVZA offices were open to anyone wishing to report an attack, sighting or missing person. When agents destroyed vampires and zombies, they did their best to identify the victims and return their remains to the family for a proper burial. People generally accepted this with stoicism. But in the first half of the 20th Century, attitudes began to change, perhaps reflecting a growing distrust of the federal government. More and more people who lost loved ones to vampirism or zombieism refused to accept that extermination was the only option. The sensational Ray LeDoux trial of 1923 was only one of a growing number of lawsuits challenging the FVZA Powers of Termination, also known as the Right to Kill.

Central to the dilemma facing lawmakers was the question, what exactly were vampires and zombies? Were they merely human beings with diseases? And if so, didn't they deserve hospitalization and rehabilitation? After refusing to rule on the issue for a number of years, the Supreme Court finally agreed in 1935 to hear the case of a New Jersey couple whose son had turned into a vampire and was destroyed by FVZA agents. In a 5-4 vote, the Court deemed that vampirism was a disease and that vampires were entitled to the same rights as any U.S. citizen. Shortly thereafter, the Court issued a similar ruling on the issue of zombieism. An avalanche of lawsuits followed, crippling the FVZA.

Fortunately, recently-elected President Franklin Delano Roosevelt understood the importance of the FVZA. The President was dealing with a depression at home and a world on the brink of war and knew he could not afford to have vampire and zombie outbreaks added to the mix. In December of 1936, Roosevelt brought FVZA leaders to Warm Springs, Arkansas, to hammer out an arrangement by which the Agency could continue to function. The resultant plan, known as the Emergency Relief Act, brought major changes to the FVZA. The Agency would henceforth operate undercover so as not to attract public attention. A new communication pipeline was set up that allowed law enforcement agencies to pass reports of vampire and zombie activity on to Agents. The FVZA moved its operations into nondescript buildings and discontinued its policy of notifying the families of exterminated vampires and zombies. Those exterminated simply joined the rolls of the missing. To facilitate the FVZA's shift to deep cover, the government began a systematic removal of the Agency from public records.

The new system was very much a work in progress and didn't always function perfectly, but over time the FVZA adapted so well to its undercover role that, for many, the Agency became nothing more than an "urban legend."

The irony of the Emergency Relief Act is that the U.S. government ultimately exploited it in order to conduct research on vampire and zombie DNA in secret. To this day, many in the government deny such research is taking place. How can there be such research, they ask, if there never were vampires or zombies to begin with? When asked once about whether he supported construction of an FVZA memorial in Washington, Senator Trent Lott scoffed, "sure, we can put it right next to the one for Santa Claus!" (Editor's note: Mr. Lott represents Mississippi, a state where over 100 FVZA Agents lost their lives fighting the undead).

The Order of the Broken Cross

Broken cross brand on forearm of dead vampire

Initiation into the Order took place behind an oversized broken cross

In 1935, an FVZA Assault Team encountered fierce resistance while conducting an attack on a warehouse on the outskirts of Dallas. The vampires they encountered were unusually well organized and seemed to know the assault team's every move before it was made. It took the team two full days to finish off the vampires, after which they made a chilling discovery: each of the dead vampires had a brand burned onto its forearm. While the chicken scratch might have meant little to the average person, it was bad news for the FVZA. The three-pronged symbol represented the broken cross, symbol of a paramilitary vampire organization that was to have devastating effects on the FVZA for the next several decades.

The Order of the Broken Cross considered themselves descendants of Quadilla, the great vampire general who besieged Rome in the Ninth Century. A vampire named Logan Mulvey resurrected the Order in 1935, at a time when the FVZA was making serious inroads into the U.S. vampire population. Mulvey and his associates knew their days were numbered unless they organized an effective counterattack against the Agency.

Ironically, the Order coopted FVZA techniques and philosophies in their own training regimen. They practiced martial arts diligently and acquired expertise in a vast array of weapons. New members were indoctrinated in a solemn ceremony, at which time they were branded on the forearm. Members of the Order maintained a sort of "Underground Railroad" consisting of hideouts across the country, so that they were never far from shelter come sunrise.

Striking back at the FVZA was a major part of the Order's agenda. They acquired names and personal information on agents and conducted a campaign of intimidation that knew no bounds. On one occasion, they impaled the severed head of an agent onto a traffic pole outside the Boston office. And if they couldn't get to the agents, then they attacked family members. The strategy proved to be brutally effective, as a number of agents left the force rather than endanger their families. The Second World War, which siphoned away a number of experienced agents, further emboldened the Order.

The Order reached its zenith around 1946, with an estimated 50,000 members worldwide, then began a slow decline. Increased FVZA enrollment was the biggest factor in turning the tide. It took the Agency several more years and many more lives to finish the job, but by the beginning of the 1960s the Order had returned to the halls of infamy, where it remains today.

The Lazo Disaster

Lazo, Soviet Union

After the development of the vampire vaccine, the United States and the Soviet Union began pouring enormous resources into vampire research. The stakes were great, as it was thought that the keys to immortality lay in vampire DNA. The Soviets based their research at a secret lab outside the small village of Lazo in Siberia. Unbeknownst to the Americans, they made significant progress in the lab and in 1967, under a veil of utmost secrecy, they began animal trials, using chimpanzees as the test subjects.

Premier Brezhnev explains the disaster to the Politburo

Sometime in mid-February, disaster struck at the lab when an infected chimpanzee bit a technician. The unfortunate man was vaccinated, but the experimentally-altered virus he was infected with proved to be immune to the vaccine. As a blizzard descended on the village, cutting off communication with the outside world, the technician came to life and ran amok, biting everyone in the lab. The scientific team, transformed into vampires, left the lab and went to the village to hunt. By the time the storm cleared, the entire town of Lazo was infected.

Lazo after the blast

Faced with an uncontrollable vampire plague, Russian President Leonid Brezhnev was forced to take extreme measures. So, on a bright winter day, a transport rolled into Lazo and left a nuclear weapon in the middle of the town square, while the vampires slept.

Once the team was safely out of range, they detonated the bomb.

American officials detected the explosion via satellite and launched an inquiry. The Russians claimed accidental detonation, but American intelligence knew that there were no nuclear installations in that part of the country. The mystery ended in the Summer of '68, when one of the soldiers who had planted the bomb defected to West Germany and told the whole story. The 750 people of Lazo were among the last casualties of the war on vampires.

The mishap created a backlash against vampire research in the United States and thoughout the world. On October 14th, 1970, President Nixon signed into law the Muskie-Fineman Act, halting research on vampire blood. It would be 16 years before the ban was overturned, and vampire blood research began anew, with rigorous safety provisions in place to avoid a repeat of the Lazo Disaster.

Vampires in the Vietnam War by Luke Costagliola, with additional contributions from Hugo Pecos.
The difficulties of American troops during the Vietnam War often are attributed to the skillful tactics of its opponent and the lack of support on the homefront. But U.S. forces were hampered by another stealthy enemy in southeast Asia: vampires.

From the beginning, combat in Vietnam's jungles presented new challenges for American troops. The army in particular was trained and equipped for a conventional, mechanized war such as what they had faced in Europe, and Vietnam, with its jungle fighting, was a new game. The Viet Cong were masters of guerilla warfare, during which they would hit troops with surprise attacks and then recede back into the jungle. They also effectively used small villages as bases and ammunition stores.

In an attempt to turn the tables, the U.S. Marine Corps developed a Civil Operations and Revolutionary Development Support, or CORDS, program, which assigned small units to patrol the villages. The Marines sought to recruit members of indigenous tribes in the mountainous region of west Vietnam to help them. But the Marines quickly discovered that the tribes were fearful of venturing into certain areas because of the presence of "ma," or phantoms. One tribe in particular—the Montagnard—spoke of reanimated corpses that haunted the jungle, drinking the blood and consuming the internal organs of people unlucky enough to cross their paths. U.S. commanders were quick to dismiss the claims as local superstition.

Alas, it wasn't superstition at all. Reports of troop encounters with ghouls in the jungle began trickling in to U.S. command around 1965. At first, the stories involved troops catching glimpses of ghostly figures moving through the jungle. Soldiers who saw these creatures described them as having fangs and black eyes. And then, soldiers began to disappear from their platoons. In one incident, two American soldiers rescued one of their comrades from a creature that appeared to be impervious to their bullets.

U.S. commanders initially suspected vampires, as Vietnam, home to 41 known species of bats, had a history of outbreaks. One person infected in an isolated jungle villages with no access to vaccine could quickly spread the affliction through an entire community.

Flamethrowers were key to vampire "mop up" efforts during the Vietnam War.
Strangely though, the undead creatures often appeared in the daylight hours, a feat thought impossible for vampires. One platoon of American troops found the entire village of Son Hao occupied by these creatures. Despite the daylight hour, the embattled creatures managed to flee into the surrounding jungle.

With troop morale plummeting and the Viet Cong making gains, top Army brass brought several high-ranking FVZA agents to Saigon in the fall of 1966 for a consultation. The Army helicoptered the agents out to the village at Son Hao, scene of the daytime battle between U.S. troops and the ghouls. Once there, the agents noticed that the triple canopy jungle was filtering almost all of the sunlight before it reached the ground. They speculated that this filtering was enabling the vampires to operate in daytime.

In a report to President Lyndon B. Johnson, the FVZA concluded that eliminating the vampires would be virtually impossible in Vietnam's jungle settings.

When Johnson read the conclusion, he famously said, "if the jungle's the problem, then let's get rid of the damn jungle."

Thus began the infamous Vietnam Herbicial Warfare program. The military chose a defoliant known as Agent Orange and sprayed 20 million gallons of it over 6 million acres of jungle. Once the canopy was denuded, troops went into suspect villages with flamethrowers to exterminate any remaining vampires.

The program was successful in clearing several large packs of vampires from the mountainous regions of Vietnam. However, many American soldiers and their Montagnard allies remained unwilling to go into the jungle villages.

As a result, the Marine Corps abandoned the CORDS program in 1968 and returned to a policy almost indistinguishable from the army's. And Vietnam's jungles were left to the Viet Cong, the indigenous tribes...and the vampires.

The Vampires of Studio 54

Although vampire hoaxes have probably been around as long as vampires, incidences exploded after the FVZA was disbanded in 1975. Pranksters seeking fame, attention, or just a few laughs took advantage of the lack of official oversight to frighten and terrorize the populace. While there were many convincing hoaxes in the latter half of the Seventies, none had as big an audience as that for the vampires of Studio 54.

Cutting the rug
at Studio 54

New York in the summer of 1977 was a city on edge. The Son of Sam killer was gunning people down in their cars, and a blackout on July 13th had paralyzed the city and sent looters running amok in the streets. Amid this atmosphere of fear and paranoia arose reports that a pack of vampires were preying on the young and the hip at Studio 54, the city's most popular discotheque. The rumor was that "54" owner Steve Rubell kept the vampires in a basement crypt and allowed them access to the clubgoers in exchange for a promise of immortality for himself. Though a couple of young men had disappeared after a night at Studio 54, most people discounted the rumors as the stuff of urban legend, and the disco remained popular.

One Studio 54 regular was not so quick to dismiss the story: Geraldo Rivera, a brash young reporter for ABC-TV. Rivera was looking to make a name for himself and thought that breaking the vampire story would be a sure way to put him on the map. His sources for the story were a group of disgruntled former Studio 54 employees. All claimed they were fired by Rubell when they refused to keep quiet about the vampires. One Sunday afternoon, former 54 bartender Francisco Birney snuck Rivera through a back entrance into the Studio 54 basement and showed him a mysterious locked vault where he claimed that the vampires slept during the day.

Rivera pitched the story to his superiors at ABC; they were wary and suggested he find an expert who could give the story credibility. Damien Gould fit the bill. Gould was a respected, thirty-year FVZA vet who had fallen on hard times and needed the cash promised by Rivera and ABC.

Rivera talked his bosses into making the crypt-opening a one-hour live special. The show was hyped as the first assault on vampires ever carried on live television, although the location of the assault was kept undisclosed so as not to tip off Rubell and Studio 54 management. The cryptic marketing campaign intrigued the nation, and on the night of September 4, 1977, approximately 40 million Americans sat down in front of their TV sets to watch host David Hartman introduce the special with the words "we're about to do something that has never been done before."

Rivera prepares to enter the crypt
After a taped introduction featuring interviews from the former Studio 54 employees, the show went to a live shot of Rivera in a van parked behind the disco. The cameras followed him, Gould and Francisco Birney into the basement, where Birney unlocked the vault. Inside the dark, cramped space lay two dusty coffins. The television audience held its collective breath as Rivera pried open one of the coffins and the camera captured the image of a what appeared to be a male vampire at rest. Suddenly, the vampire's eyes snapped open and, as the camera rolled, he leaped out of the coffin and attacked Rivera. A melee ensued.

Rivera a day after battling the "vampires"
When the dust settled, Rivera had a broken nose and Damien Gould had his burly arms wrapped around the alleged vampire: former 54 doorman Robert Mendez, complete with blue makeup and plastic fangs. Rivera promised "to get to the bottom of this" as the live shot cut back to the studio and a flummoxed David Hartman.

In all, five former Studio 54 employees were involved in the hoax. They admitted that they had hatched the scheme in the hopes of bringing bad publicity to Rubell and Studio 54. It was only after they got Rivera involved did they begin to see an opportunity to get what 54 patron Andy Warhol might have called "their 15 minutes of fame."

Studio 54 was eventually brought down, but it was the tax man, not vampires, who did the job. As for Rivera, although his reputation took a hit and he became something of a laughingstock, he survived the embarrassment and continued his career in television. Agent Gould was not so lucky: humiliated, he sank into a pit of drinking and despair and died in a rooming house far from the bright lights of Studio 54.

Dogs

With their prodigious strength and advanced senses, vampires and zombies had distinct advantages over the humans. Fortunately, we humans always had an ace up our sleeve: dogs.

A dog drags a dead zombie out of the brush

It would be difficult to overstate the importance of dogs in controlling vampires and zombies. Their acute sense of smell not only allowed them to sniff out vampire and zombie hiding places, but also enabled them to give people plenty of advance warning of an attack.

Dogs were used in vampire control as far back as 2000 BC, when rulers of the Hittite Empire in Asia Minor were said to keep vampire-fighting dogs "as large and fierce as lions." Although many dog breeders attempted to create a dog that was effective against both vampires and zombies, most breeders found it best to breed different dogs for different nemeses. Thus, large, powerful dogs were bred for zombie control, while vampire-fighting dogs tended to be from faster and more agile varieties. Many of these breeds developed by different countries for undead control are still popular today, such as the Tosa-Inu of Japan and the Tibetan Mastiff from China. German Shepherds were one of the few dogs often used against both vampires and zombies.

The Doberman Pinscher, vampire hunter supreme

In 1863, German authorities, dissatisfied with existing breeds of vampire-hunting dogs, contracted with dog breeder Louis Doberman to create a breed of dog expressly for fighting vampires. Doberman's initial attempts to breed Rottweilers with terriers and shepherd dogs were unsatisfactory, but when he added greyhound blood into the mix for speed, the Doberman Pinscher was born. With its unique blend of speed, ferocity and intelligence, the Doberman became the gold standard in vampire control.

Vampires and zombies reacted differently to dogs. Vampires generally tried to flee, using their athleticism and leaping ability to outpace the dogs. Zombies, on the other hand, would stand and fight. While zombies had no answer for dogs, vampires took to fighting fire with fire by breeding their own dogs for protection. Several well-known breeds of today were actually created by vampires. An example of this is the Rhodesian Ridgeback, which a South African vampire pack created by breeding a native shepherd dog with Mastiffs imported by white settlers.

In the United States, the FVZA used dogs on an informal basis for decades before the official establishment of the K-9 division in 1925. The Agency's vampire-fighting breed of choice was the Doberman, while Rottweilers and Mastiffs were used against zombies. At the training facility in Kentucky, trainers used clothing taken off vampires and zombies to acclimate the dogs to the smell of the undead. Doberman training focused on pursuit and capture, while Mastiffs and Rottweilers training focused on in-close fighting.

The Jocko memorial in Chicago
Dogs selected for FVZA K-9 training would be sent home as puppies to live with the agent assigned to them. This allowed a bond to develop. Training commenced when the dog reached 10 months of age and lasted two months. In zombie raids, larger packs of dogs were used to surround and hem in the zombies. Vampire-fighting dogs were trained to flush vampires into areas where they could be destroyed by agents. The job had its obvious dangers. Dogs bitten by zombies or vampires had to be put down. Otherwise, the viruses would turn them rabid (contrary to popular myth, there is no such thing as a vampire-dog).

One of the most heralded dogs in FVZA history was Jocko, a mutt who served in the Chicago Bureau. Jocko was adopted as a stray pup by agent Paul McDermott. Though not of a vampire-fighting breed, Jocko showed such a natural facility for vampire-hunting that he was put on the force. The dog went on to serve with distinction for eight years. On January 23, 1934, just a few days before his retirement, Jocko chased down a vampire trying to flee with a child. The brave animal locked on to the vampire's lower leg, forcing the vampire to release the child unharmed. But when other vampire pack members rushed him, Jocko sustained a bite and had to be put down. Over a million people braved frigid weather to attend the dog's funeral.

The Top Five Vampire and Zombie Hunters in History
Before organized forces like the FVZA came to be, undead control was left to freelancers, and there were some great ones over the course of history. Here are five of the best.
James Godfrey, a.k.a., Machete Jim, Australia

Machete Jim in jail
Australia's most renowned zombie hunter-James Godfrey, a.k.a., Machete Jim-actually was born in Manchester, England, in 1823. After being orphaned as a child, Godfrey turned to petty crime to survive and wound up in jail as a teenager. Like many British convicts of the day, Godfrey was shipped off to Australia to work in a labor camp. He wound up in Botany Bay, an area of present-day Sydney that was home to one of Australia's largest penal colonies. Godfrey and the others inmates worked all day building roads under the unrelenting sun and the pitiless gaze of the camp guards. Despite the squalid conditions, the strapping Godfrey quickly distinguished himself for his ability to hack quickly through the underbrush using only a crude machete.

The combination of crowded conditions and infected rats in Australian penal colonies made zombie outbreaks quite common there. On occasion, entire work camps were wiped out by fast-spreading outbreaks. Many camps took to burning the corpses of the recently deceased to insure that they didn't "reawaken" as zombies.

No such precautions were in place at Godfrey's Botany Bay camp on the night of September 14, 1846, when a guard took ill and passed away. The other guards carelessly buried the body near the camp, and one night later, their erstwhile associate awoke as a zombie. The zombie-guard dug his way out of the grave and immediately attacked one of the guards. The other guards fled in terror, leaving the chained prisoners virtually helpless against the rampaging zombie. Only Godfrey remained calm; he managed to get the keys from the dead guard and unlock his chains. He then picked up his machete and hacked the raging zombie into a dozen pieces.

The boss of the work detail was so impressed with Godfrey's courage that he offered him a chance at early release if he agreed to work in zombie extermination. Godfrey seized the opportunity and, over the next few years, displayed a remarkable capacity for zombie killing throughout the local work camps. He could lop off a zombie's arms and head with three whistling swipes from his machete. His skill with the bladed weapons was so great that his cohorts took to calling him "Machete Jim."

After his release, Machete Jim accepted a position with Australia's fledgling Commonwealth Special Investigation Branch, where he eventually rose to commander. He was a man of few words and preferred to lead by example, charging fearlessly into zombie hordes all across New South Wales and Tasmania. He continually refined the undead fighting arts and was one of the first to bring shotguns into common use against zombies.

Machete Jim wiped out an estimated 4,000 zombies during his career. The Duke and Duchess of Cornwall honored the former convict with the Order of Merit during their 1901 visit to Australia. Ten years later, Machete Jim died of natural causes in Sydney, at the age of 88 years.

Toshihiko Kamiyama, Japan

Toshihiko Kamiyama

Japan's ancient capital of Kyoto was in a state of turmoil during the 15th century as various samurai groups battled for control of the city. Amid the chaos arose a formidable vampire samurai named Hosokawa Katsumoto. Katsumoto turned many of the best samurai and set up a seemingly impregnable fortress along the Kamo River east of the city. During the day, samurai loyal to Katsumoto guarded his palace. At night, Katsumoto led a vampire army out of the fortress searching for blood.

The panicked nobles, in danger of losing their city to the undead, turned to to the only person capable of stopping the vampires: Toshihiko Kamiyama, the greatest samurai of his time. Kamiyama was a legend in Kyoto for his bravery, honor and skill with the sword. At the height of his powers, he had abruptly retired to live a life of monastic devotion at a Shinto temple in the mountains.

Representatives of the nobles journeyed to the temple and pleaded with Kamiyama to help. At first, Kamiyama was reluctant, but he finally agreed on the condition that he be allowed to train his own recruits at the temple without any outside interference. Kamiyama reasoned that fresh recruits would be more teachable than veteran samurai. After selecting 20 of the most promising young martial artists, Kamiyama spent countless hours tutoring the men among the maple and ash tress and the bird songs of the mountain temple. Kamiyama worked his charges on swordfighting arts and conditioning, and he often had them spar with blindfolds on to get accustomed to the art of night fighting.

After a year of training, Kamiyama and his team were ready. They journeyed out of the mountains to Kyoto, established quarters in the mansion of a noble, and prepared their assault. They boldy slipped into Katsumoto's compound at night, when the vampires were out hunting. After killing the civilian guards, Kamiyama and his men changed into the dead guards' armor and waited for the vampires return. When Katsumoto and the vampires returned, full from a night of feeding, Kamiyama and his men set upon them. They slashed and destroyed scores of vampires, and took a few casualties as well. During the fighting, a fire broke out in the compound when a candle ignited some textiles. Katsumoto escaped through a network of secret tunnels. Kamiyama chased him down and they had an epic sword battle as the compound burned around them that is still considered the greatest sword fight ever staged. The fight ended only when Katsumoto fell through a burning floor. No body was ever found, and rumors persist that he is still alive to this day.

Over the next several years, Kamiyama and his men systematically eradicated vampires from Kyoto. The wars that had devastated Kyoto came to an end, and people slowly returned to the city.

With the conflict was over, Kamiyama returned to the mountains and the ascetic lifestyle of a Buddhist monk. Sightings of him were rare. He reportedly died in 1533, at age 100.

Kamiyama destroyed an estimated 1,200 vampires in Kyoto.

John "Red Jack" Averill, United States

Red Jack
Red Jack Averill was born to John and Helen Averill in Tennessee in 1811. John was a hunter and trapper and Red Jack—so named for his red hair—often accompanied him on expeditions into the wilderness of the Shenandoah Mountains. As a teen, Red Jack befriended the local Chickasaw Indians and learned from them how to track and hunt vampires.

Red Jack grew increasingly restless in his small Tennessee community and in 1936 traveled to Texas to aid in the revolution, a popular cause among many Americans. He later enlisted in the U.S. army and fought in the Mexican-American war. One night, the troops in Red Jack's platoon were sleeping in the desert north of Mexico City when they were attacked by a pack of vampires. After morning broke, Red Jack discovered a silver mine nearby, went inside with nothing but a sword, and came out holding the heads of several vampires.

Red Jack took his vampire-fighting skills west after the war and hired himself out to clear gold and silver mines of vampires. He was well rewarded for his expertise and, after a few years, was able to open a saloon in the rowdy Barbary Coast area of San Francisco. But vampire slaying was never far from Jack's mind. In 1858, he left San Francisco for Washington D.C. to help the U.S. government with the creation of the Vanguard, the precursor of the FVZA.

Red Jack's work was interrupted when the Civil War broke out in 1861. From 1861 to 1865, he served in the Union and helped troops wipe out packs of vampires from the woods of Virginia to the plantations of Georgia.

Red Jack struggled with a host of demons throughout his life, including alcohol and gambling. In fact, it was Jack's gambling debts that caused him to turn down an offer to join the newly-minted FVZA after the war and instead take a lucrative job with a touring Wild West show, where he performed choreographed battles with actors disguised as vampires.

Red Jack's drinking worsened during the show's 1870 tour of Europe. That winter, he was stumbling back to his hotel in Vienna, Austria, after a night of drinking when a pack of vampires ambushed and killed him. It's doubtful the vampires knew that their victim had killed over 4,000 of their kind during his lifetime.

King Zumbi, Brazil

King Zumbi
Portugal colonized Brazil in the sixteenth century and brought scores of African slaves over to work the sugar plantations. Over time, runaway slaves and army deserters formed isolated communities called mocambos in the jungles outside of large settlements. Some of the mocambos grew into sizeable communities, with churches and businesses. The largest mocambo was Palmares, which was home to about 20,000 inhabitants.

The man who would one day be known as King Zumbi was born in Palmares in 1635 to an African mother and a deserter from the Portugese army. Zumbi's father trained him in swordfighting and the martial art called capoeira. The boy put his skills to good use during the many zombie outbreaks that afflicted the mocambos. According to local legend, Zumbi killed his first zombie at age 12.

Zumbi grew into a towering, muscular man equally comfortable in hand-to-hand combat and swordfighting. But Zumbi was more than just a brute. He possessed political ambitions as well, and it was his dream to unite the mocambos into one independent nation. His fame spread after he helped other local mocamboes put down zombie outbreaks, and, in 1660, he was selected king of the mocambos. Zumbi proclaimed independence for the mocambos and began carrying out raids against the Portugese. Though militarily disadvantaged, Zumbi and his men knew the jungle and exacted significant losses on the Portugese.

In the summer of 1664, a major zombie outbreak hit the important Portugese settlement of Sao Paolo. The plague spread quickly, and groaning zombies of all sizes and shapes shambled about the city's cobblestone streets. Many Portugese soliders deserted rather than stand up to the terrifying hordes.

Facing the potential loss of a strategically important city, the Portugese reached out to Zumbi and offered him a deal. They would grant independence to the mocambos in return for Zumbi's assistance in putting down the zombie plaque.

For Zumbi, it was a difficult decision. He bore a great deal of hostility toward the Portugese for their legacy of slavery and oppression, but he knew that the mocambos were unlikely to achieve independence without some help. So, after much agonizing, he decided to travel to Sao Paolo.

Zumbi and his most trusted officers arrived in Sao Paolo in September 1664. He trained the Portugese army in different zombie-fighting formations and introduced modified melee weapons for easier decapitation. Zumbi's leadership was inspirational and, slowly but surely, the zombie plague abated. In just six months, order returned to Sao Paolo.

Unfortunately, the Portugese had no intention of letting Zumbi return to Palmares in triumph. During Zumbi's "Going Away" party at the royal palace, the Portugese drugged him and his top officers and locked them in a dungeon with dozens of hungry zombies. The unarmed, groggy men fought courageously, but they were greatly outnumbered and the zombies eventually tore them apart.

The killing enraged the mocambos, and for the next 25 years they waged an almost constant war against the Portugese. But without Zumbi's leadership, they were ineffectual, and the Portugese burned Palmares to the ground.

Estimates put Zumbi's kill count at more than 5,000 zombies. A bust of him adorns the esplanade in Brazil's capital of Brasilia.

Twelve String Digby, England

Twelve String Digby
As London grew rapidly in the 17th century, packs of vampires became a major problem along the wooded roads radiating from the city. Vampires on horseback would burst from well-hidden bases near the roads and attack stagecoaches and lone riders. The vampires typically chose lonely areas of woodland like Hounslow Heath, where the roads to Bath and Exeter crossed. They targeted stagecoaches and the post-boys who carried the mail. Sometimes the vampires drank the blood of their victims; sometimes they turned them.

English efforts to fight the vampires mostly met with failure. The vampires changed bases feqeuntly and fought a kind of guerilla warfare for which the English troops were ill-prepared. Stagecoaches and post-boys took to avoiding nighttime travel altogether, a move that severely crimped commerce and communication between London and other cities.

In desperation, the English decided to fight fire with fire and enlist the help of a notorious convict named Digby Wolfe. Wolfe was a flamboyant character who earned his nickname for the habit of decorating his breeches with 12 lengths of colored string. He had spent most of his adult life as a highwayman, or coach robber. His skills on horseback were unmatched, and he eluded the law for many years until his arrest in 1681.

English offiicals reasoned that an experienced highwayman like Digby would be the ideal foil against these roving vampire packs, so they offered him a choice: 20 years at London's notorious Newgate Prison, or service as a vampire slayer for His Majesty Charles II.

As with the legendary Australian Machete Jim, Twelve String Digby chose freedom, and over the next seven years, he led a group of English troops against the vampires. On occasion, Digby and his men hid among the trees, lying in wait for the vampires to attack a passing coach. At other times, he would go undercover as a passenger on a well-appointed stagecoach. When the vampires attacked, he laid waste to them with stunning speed.

Digby cleared vampires from the Hounslow Heath area, and then the Great Dover Road.

Nighttime travel around London became (relatively) safe again.

Charles II feted Digby at Whitehall Palace in London, and he became a fixture in social circles, where he developed an affection for married women. Even a bout of venereal disease didn't stop him from pursuing the wives of prominent Brits. Unfortunately for him, one of his conquests was married to a notably jealous lieutenant-colonel who discovered the affair and challenged Digby to a duel at Hogsden Fields. Normally, Digby was an accurate shot with a pistol, but he was weakened with VD and missed his first shot. The lieutenant colonel was not so inaccurate, and Digby fell, mortally wounded with a gunshot to the chest. He bled to death in the snow, and England had lost its greatest vampire hunter, a man who killed more than 1,000 bloodsuckers in his time.

Women in the FVZA
Women played a vital and often unsung role in the development and success of the FVZA. In fact, the agency was more progressive with respect to women's roles than were other areas of law enforcement and the military, primarily because of the pressing need for qualified personnel stateside during wartime.

Early nursing class at Fort McNair.
Women served mostly in clerical roles at FVZA offices in the early days of the agency. In 1894, a nursing institute was founded at Fort McNair in Washington, D.C., to provide specialized training for women in zombie and vampire medicine. At that time there was no vaccine for either condition, so treatment was mostly palliative. The nurses learned to recognize and distinguish between the signs of vampire and zombie infections and how to restrain bite victims and make them more comfortable. They were also tasked with the very difficult work of euthanizing bite victims.

After the zombie vaccine was developed, nurses took on a more prominent role in the agency. They raced about in specially outfitted Model T automobiles trying to get injections to victims within the short window of time when the vaccine would work. It was a dangerous job, complicated by poor roads and primitive communications technology. All too often, nurses would arrive at a location to find that the bite victim had already transformed. Dozens gave their lives in service during the years before World War II.

Despite their accomplishments, women were forbidden from service as FVZA agents for the first half of the twentieth century. Agency leaders figured the public would have little appetite for hearing about females being killed in the line of duty. Still, some women were brought in to assist with investigations, as experienced investigators found that female prostitutes, a major target for vampires, tended to be more forthcoming when speaking with other females.

Marion Southwick in Saipan, 1945.
The prohibition against women agents ended largely as a result of World War II, when FVZA leaders created the Vanguard Women's Auxiliary Corps (V-WACS) to assist soldiers in Europe and the Pacific. One of the first volunteers was Marion Southwick, a native of Maine who served in the Pacific theater, where zombie outbreaks were not unusual. While on duty on the Pacific island of Saipan in 1945, she reportedly gunned down four zombified Japanese soldiers who had burst out of a cave when an army unit was passing by. While some may have been scarred for life by the encounter, Southwick was exhilarated. When she returned home, she lobbied for a position as an agent, biding her time by authoring a training manual especially for the V-WACS.

Southwick finally got the call in 1949. Married and with one child at the time, she trained in New York City, where she faced an entrenched "Old Boys" network and some outmoded ways of thinking. The Special Agent in Charge said of her, “This lady is perhaps too refined to work on investigations.” He advised that she should only be assigned to open cases that “weren’t too rough.”

Southwick persevered through training and was appointed to an investigative unit by FVZA Director William Burns on October 11, 1950. She was assigned to the Washington D.C. office, where she made $7.50 a day for service in “the Investigation of Vampires and Zombies.” This was some 20 years before the Federal Bureau of Investigation accepted its first woman.

Inspired by Southwick's example, many women served with distinction in the final decades of the Agency's existence. Several female scientists played important roles on the Zozobra Project, the effort to find a vaccine to the virus that causes vampirism, and were involved on investigative units, assault teams and as as Shadows. Southwick herself rose to the position of Assistant Director in 1970, five years before the FVZA was disbanded.

Famous Cases

In a typical year, the FVZA would receive thousands of tips on vampire and zombie activity. But seeing as how many of them turned out to be hoaxes, the initial investigation was usually carried out by phone. If the testimony was compelling enough, a team would be dispatched to gather evidence and interview witnesses. In some cases, the trail died; in others, it led to frightening encounters.

Under the Freedom of Information Act, we are making these reports available to the public for the first time. However, the reports have been edited down to contain only the most pertinent information. Still, they represent a fair cross-section of the types of reports we compiled at the Agency—some humorous, others chilling, many maddeningly inconclusive. At the bottom of each report, Dr. Pecos has included his own comments (long after the fact).

Famous Cases: Terror in the Factory

Report Number: 8369
Date: June 3, 1967
Location: New York City

Misguided romanticization of vampires began in earnest in the 1960s. Many artists and writers saw vampires as misunderstood, tortured kindred spirits, the ultimate outsiders. But as one renowned New York artist was to discover, the truth about vampires was far different from the myth.

Andy Warhol
Background: Andy Warhol moved to New York City from Pittsburgh in 1949 and quickly established himself as a successful commercial artist. But it was when he began applying the techniques and subject matter of commercial art to paintings and sculpture that his career really took off. Warhol's interest in the visual arts eventually led him to try his hand at filmmaking. He made a string of experimental, often tedious works like "Empire," a six-hour static shot of the Empire State Building.

As Warhol grew more famous and successful, his New York apartment became a magnet for an oddball assortment of sycophants, dilettantes and hangers on. He dubbed his loft "the Factory" and transformed it into a combination studio and social club. Those who earned his favor became celebrities in their own right, with starring roles in his films. It was a competitive environment, as Factory denizens clamored for Warhol's attention, all anxious to be chosen as his next superstar.

Emergency workers rush Warhol to the hospital
Incident: At 6:00 on the morning of June 3, a police dispatcher received a desperate phone call from an unidentified man asking to send an ambulance to 33 Union Square West. Paramedics arrived and rushed to the building's sixth floor to find Andy Warhol on the floor bleeding from wounds to his neck and wrists, the apparent victim of a vampire attack. Warhol was rushed to the hospital, where he actually died twice on the operating table before being revived. He received massive transfusions of blood and was treated with vampire vaccine.

By the end of the day, Warhol was stabilized. The many members of the press swarming around the hospital were told that the artist had been stabbed by an unidentified, deranged woman.

Investigation: Meanwhile, FVZA agents descended on Warhol's apartment to conduct interviews with witnesses. Agents learned that Warhol had been bitten by a female vampire known in the Factory as "Vox Superstar." Vox was actually a mentally disturbed young woman named Olga Kulbis who had developed an unhealthy obsession with Warhol while hanging around the Factory. When Warhol, who was fascinated with vampires (he made two fiction films about them), expressed a desire to make a film starring a real vampire, Vox saw an opportunity to enter his inner circle. She began taking nightly strolls around the Port Authority, an area of the city haunted by vampires, and was eventually bitten.

A few nights after transformation, Vox visited the Factory, where her appearance scared Warhol so much that he locked himself in the bathroom. Vox eventually convinced him she meant no harm, and Warhol set up his camera and began filming. Warhol had Vox sit on a couch and speak to the camera about her state. After several hours of filming, the other Factory regulars had drifted away or fallen asleep, leaving Warhol alone with Vox. The young woman seized the opportunity and attacked Warhol, pinning him to the floor. The artist's screams roused the Factory faithful and they chased Vox onto the roof, where she leaped thirty feet across an alley to the neighboring building and fled into the night.

Warhol would remember the attack as the worst pain he had had ever felt. He later told friends, "it hurt so much, I wished I was dead."

Over the course of the day, FVZA agents were able to trace Vox Superstar to the apartment she shared with Troy Boy, another Factory upstart. Surveillance revealed that both Vox and Troy had turned. Rather the wait for clearance to conduct a raid, FVZA officers set up a stakeout that night. When Vox and Troy emerged from the apartment, the agents struck, destroying the two vampires with precise shots from their "Migraine Mollys." The operation was carried out with the highest degree of secrecy, and the next day's newspapers attributed Warhol's injuries to a shooting.

"Count Dracula," a
1980 Warhol Polaroid
Post-Mortems: The vampire attack had a profound affect on Warhol. He ceased to produce important works of art, and for the rest of his life (he died in 1987), he took to wearing turtlenecks in public to hide the scars on his neck. Still, Warhol continued to be fascinated with vampires, and they appeared over and over again in his art. As for his unfinished vampire film, police confiscated the negatives as evidence the day Warhol was bitten. A week later, the negatives disappeared from the evidence room, never to be seen again. Although rumors of bootleg copies of the film have emerged, thus far Andy Warhol's vampire opus appears to be lost to history.

Comments from Dr. Pecos: Andy Warhol was not the first person to make the mistake of letting his guard down around a vampire. Vampires can be exceedingly charming when they need to be. They will joke, cajole and flatter, and just when you think, "vampires aren't so bad," you've got a pair of fangs buried in your neck.

The Opium Vampires

Report Number: 322
Date: March, 1880
Location:San Francisco, California

An early view of San Francisco's Chinatown

Background: The California Gold Rush that kicked off in 1849 brought a flood of fortune seekers to the state, including many from faraway China. Lured by unscrupulous speculators, the Chinese made the long journey to California only to discover that the hills of gold they had been promised were tapped out. By 1876, over 100,000 Chinese had emigrated to the Golden State, with most settling in San Francisco. Absent any gold to hang their hopes on, the Chinese found work in the railroad and garment industries. Their resourcefulness made them the target of resentment from unemployed locals. Embattled, subject to unfair taxes and inequitable laws, the Chinese did what so many other immigrant groups had done before them: they turned inward. San Francisco's Chinatown became an insular community with its own language and customs and a deep suspicion of outsiders.

Incident: On December 15, 1879, a policeman happened upon a vampire feeding on a prostitute along San Francisco's waterfront. The cop chased the vampire off, but it was too late for the woman. Before expiring, she told the cop that her attacker was Chinese. In the next two months, attacks occurred in several neighborhoods bordering Chinatown, including Jackson Square, Fisherman's Wharf and Nob Hill. Each time, witnesses reported that the vampires appeared to be Chinese. Word of the attacks spread and fueled an already strong anti-Chinese sentiment in the city. Among the outrageous rumors circulating was a story that the Chinese were harboring vampires in Chinatown as part of a plot to destroy the white population. On February 20, an angry, torch-wielding mob marched on Chinatown. Only quick action by the San Francisco police prevented a catastrophe.

FVZA Agent
Jim Belmore

Investigation: The hysteria put tremendous pressure on Jim Belmore, head of the FVZA's San Francisco office. Belmore, a Civil War veteran, had moved west to open the San Francisco office only two years earlier, and now found himself caught in between an angry public and an impenetrable society. Belmore suspected that the origin of the plague rested somewhere in one of Chinatown's many opium dens. Opium dens were secret establishments where men would gather to smoke black opium paste and fall into a blissful stupor. Belmore's attempts to conduct sweeps and stakeouts of the dens were hampered by Chinese organized crime gangs known as Tongs. The Tongs operated the opium dens, along with brothels and gambling parlors, and they didn't want any law enforcement snooping around their domain. Belmore needed someone who could help him gain access to the Byzantine world of Chinatown. He needed someone on the inside.

Up to that point, San Francisco city leadership had been hesitant to hire Chinese for federal jobs. But when Belmore threatened to quit, the mayor allocated money for him to hire one new agent, and Jin Don Song became the first Asian-American member of the FVZA. Jin Don was an ambitious young man who had made Belmore's acquaintance while serving as a runner/errand boy at the FVZA office. He grew up in Chinatown and knew its geography and people. After an abbreviated training program, Jin Don was inducted into the agency, and he quickly was able to discern that the vampire plague was probably originating from the vast network of underground opium dens off of Stout's Alley near Washington Street.

A Chinese vampire prepares to prey on two opium smokers

Several nights of stakeouts confirmed Jin Don's theory, and on the morning of March 16, an FVZA battalion headed by Belmore and Jin Don walked down a flight of stairs hidden behind a laundromat and entered the underground opium den complex. There, they found a baffling maze of dimly lit passageways and small rooms. In one of those rooms, the FVZA team came upon what appeared to be three opium addicts in a state of sedation. But when the team moved closer, the opium smokers began hissing and flashing their fangs. The team destroyed the vampires with surprising ease. And so it was, in room after room: drug-addled vampires serving as easy pickings for the FVZA team. But the clamor and noise gave the less narcotized vampires fair warning, and they were able to ambush the team inside one of the larger rooms. Jin Don Song was bitten but still managed to lead his comrades to one of the street exits. As there was not yet a vaccine, he had to be euthanized.

Although Agent Belmore was devastated by the loss of his friend, he didn't let his emotions cause him to make hasty decisions. Over the course of the afternoon, Belmore had the underground complex sealed off and the surrounding neighborhood evacuated. With the help of the fire and police departments, his team pumped smoke into the complex. Within minutes, scores of vampires staggered out into Stout's Alley and were destroyed. Once the smoke had cleared, Belmore led his team on another underground sweep. In all, almost 100 vampires were wiped out. The team stayed in the area for another week, during which they destroyed another 50 vampires. By the time they left, Chinatown was secure and the grateful residents presented Belmore with a valuable jade scepter.

Post Mortems: On April 3, 1880, Jin Don Song was given a burial with full military honors. Although discrimination and persecution against the Chinese continued in San Francisco, Jin Don Song's heroism went a long way to improving relations and making whites recognize the Chinese as part of the community. Jim Belmore went on to serve as San Francisco director until his retirement in 1900. By then, there were 25 Chinese-American agents in the San Francisco office.

Comments from Dr. Pecos: In the opium dens of Chinatown, vampires found an almost ideal situation. They were out of the sunlight, had a steady supply of fresh blood and plenty of places to hide. However, the opium-laced blood they were drinking caused them to become lethargic and dulled their sharp senses. Normal vampires would never allow agents to enter their lair with such ease.

This early case had a number of unusual aspects, not the least of which was the discovery that vampires, like humans, can develop a taste for drugs. Modern vampire hunters witnessed this phenomenon many times; urban vampires often displayed a preference for the blood of alcoholics or drug addicts. This case is also a good example of how the fight against vampirism often led to social reform. Here, the plague resulted in a crackdown on opium dens. Finally, the case of the opium vampires should be remembered for the courage of Jin Don Song and the principled stand taken by Jim Belmore.

Famous Cases: Rescue in Panama

"Your tax dollars at work"
A 1901 editorial cartoon reflects public opinion of the FVZA

Report Number: 1197
Date: June, 1907
Location:Panama

As the Twentieth Century dawned, the reputation of the FVZA was lodged somewhere between those of gangsters and communists. The Agency had become a dumping ground for cronies and hacks and had done little to stem the growth of the undead in America. In 1903, President Theodore Roosevelt installed Hilton Dickerson as Director of the FVZA, and the energetic young man began working against all odds to clean up the Agency. But ultimately, it was the heroism of one FVZA unit operating in a foreign land that changed the Agency's reputation and made it a place where honorable young men and women were proud to go to work.

Background: From the time Spanish explorer Balboa crossed the narrow isthmus of Panama and spotted the Pacific Ocean, men had envisioned building a canal there to join the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and save ships from having to make the treacherous 12,000-mile journey around South America. The first legitimate attempt was launched in 1850 by the great French engineer Ferdinand de Lesseps. The Frenchman had a solid plan and plenty of investors, but his attempt was ultimately undone when much of his work force of Caribbean islanders abandoned the project, claiming that the jungles around the work zone were haunted by zombies.

Canal workers, 1907

Almost a half-century later, U.S. President Theodore Roosevelt started up his own canal project with an eye on making the United States a great naval power. In 1903, the United States took Panama from Colombia by force, then declared it an independent country and got the go-ahead to begin canal construction.

Work on the canal was slow and complicated by brutal heat, landslides and voracious insects. The bulk of the work was done by laborers shipped in from the Caribbean island of Barbados. The men worked 14-hour days and slept in makeshift villages in the jungle. Despite the harsh conditions, the work moved forward, inch by inch.

Incident: Sometime in June of 1907, canal workers started disappearing. The losses were initially chalked up to desertion, until one morning when a terrified man stumbled onto the work site with a large chunk of his shoulder missing. The man claimed his camp had been set upon by a pack of zombies. Shortly thereafter, the man took ill; by nightfall, he had turned into a zombie and had to be destroyed.

Word of the attack quickly spread among the laborers. These men, steeped in the voodoo traditions of their homelands, were in no mood to meet the undead, so they dropped their shovels and pickaxes and headed back to the Atlantic coast city of Colon. It appeared Teddy Roosevelt had been beaten by Panamanian zombies, just like Ferdinand de Lesseps fifty years earlier. But Roosevelt had one thing de Lesseps did not: the FVZA.

Investigation: On June 22, 1907, an FVZA team from Texas under the command of the great Sam "Stump" Austin left Galveston for Panama. Stump Austin was a powerful 57-year-old who claimed to have personally killed 10,000 zombies, mostly by lopping off their heads with one swing of his machete. He earned his nickname after an encounter with a zombie near Laredo. When the zombie bit off one of his fingers, Austin took his machete and amputated the lower half of his arm before the infection could spread.

"Stump" Austin

Austin and his trusted team of 20 arrived in the Panamanian port of Colon and were taken down the Chagres River to the aptly-named town of Diablo, near where the zombie attack had taken place. They spent the night in Diablo, and at first light the next morning followed an Indian guide deep into the jungle toward the Embera Indian village that was thought to be the base of the outbreak.

Zombies laid seige to the team in a Panamanian village much like this one
It wasn't long before Austin's team encountered their first zombies: former canal laborers who had recently turned. While those zombies were easily dispatched, the village was a different story. After several hours of hiking through oppressively-hot jungle, the team arrived in a clearing of apparently deserted huts. But they soon realized they were not alone. The jungle came alive, as dozens of zombified Embera Indians staggered out of the brush. The sight of decomposing zombies in native garb caused the less experienced team members to panic. But then Austin let out a war cry, charged the nearest zombies and beheaded them with his machete, and the battle was joined. The team killed almost 100 zombies before nightfall and amazingly suffered only one casualty (their Indian guide). By the time the battle was won, darkness had closed in; the exhausted team settled in one of the huts to wait out the night.

Unbeknownst to the men, zombies from surrounding villages had picked up their scent. Sometime during the night, the zombies arrived and closed in on the hut. They came through the walls, the roof; they came up from under the floors. Somehow, against all odds, the FVZA team held off the onslaught, using torches, knives and anything else they could grab.

The team may have made it through the night had not a lamp overturned and caused the hut to catch fire. This bad turn of events forced the brave men out into the open. Stumbling around in the darkness, beseiged by zombies on all sides, each man fought fiercely and unrelentingly until the last.

The Army rescue team that reached the village at dawn was greeted by a stunning tableaux of carnage. Hundreds of zombie bodies were strewn about the village. And in the middle of it all was a knot of FVZA soldiers, each one bitten many times by zombies, but all dead from self-inflicted gunshot wounds. The team members, including Stump Austin, had shot themselves rather than risk transformation. Only one team member had survived: a young man who had apparently intended to shoot himself but lost nerve at the last second. The man was coherent enough to tell the story of the battle before lapsing into a coma. The Army team heaped the zombies into a pile and burned them, then returned to Diablo with the bodies of the dead soldiers.

Memorial to the FVZA
in Diablo, Panama
Post-Mortems: All told, 311 zombies were killed by only 21 FVZA soldiers. Stump Austin and his team were given burial with full military honors in Arlington National Cemetery.

For the remainder of the construction, President Roosevelt stationed an FVZA team in Panama. The team served with distinction, squelching several small zombie outbreaks and calming the canal workers considerably. With the zombie threat effectively removed, construction continued apace and the great canal was finished in 1914.

In 1911, the French discovered the zombie vaccine, four years too late for Stump Austin and his colleagues.

Comments from Dr. Pecos: Just as Congress was considering disbanding the FVZA, news of the courageous exploits of Stump Austin and his team reached Washington. Thankfully, Congress reconsidered, well aware that the FVZA team had saved the canal project. And though the canal was recently handed over to Panama, a memorial to the FVZA still stands in the small town of Diablo. On it are the names of 16 brave men, headed by the great Stump Austin.

Famous Cases: Who Killed Warren Harding?

Report Number: 2381*

*As the actual file is missing, this case has been pieced together from interviews, memoirs and assorted public records.

Date: August 2, 1923
Location: San Francisco, California
Of all the American presidents who died in office, none has more questions surrounding his demise than the 29th President, Warren Harding. After Harding expired in San Francisco on August 2, 1923, the cause of death was ascribed to food poisoning, a determination later changed to stroke. However, many people suspected murder, as Harding had his share of enemies. But the true story behind Harding's death may have gone to the grave with one dogged FVZA Agent.

President Harding
Background: Warren Harding came out of nowhere to seize the 1920 Republican Presidential nomination and go on to win the election. Almost from the outset, his administration was plagued with scandal. Harding installed several of his old Ohio friends in important positions within his Cabinet, and his White House was known more for its poker games and evening burlesques than for any actual legislation. The mid-term congressional elections of 1922, in which Republican candidates got hammered, were a wake-up call for Harding, who said of his friends, “they're the ones that keep me walking the floors at night.” In a June 1923 speech, Harding vowed to rid his administration of corruption. But before doing so, the President had to make a long-promised trip west with his wife Florence and his good friend Jess Smith, assistant to the U.S. Attorney General.

Shortly before he left, the President received information that someone in the Justice Department was receiving kickbacks from Chicago gangster Al Capone's organization in order to protect Capone's monopoly on bootlegging (the United States had been "dry" since Prohibition began in 1919). Harding discussed the matter with Jess Smith, and both men endeavored to launch a full investigation when they returned to Washington.

Harding's historic trip west was beset by problems. A ship taking the President up the Alaska coast ran aground, then the President became sick with food poisoning after dining on some local crabs. On July 30, 1923, as the ship set sail from Alaska to San Francisco for the last leg of the trip, President Harding was eager to get back to Washington and commence a new, corruption-free chapter in his presidency.

Franklin Prevost

Incident: On the night of August 1, Franklin Prevost, Director of the FVZA office in San Francisco, received an urgent call from Jess Smith asking him to meet the Presidential boat as it steamed into the harbor. Prevost, an ambitious, idealistic young man who had risen to become the youngest regional director in the Agency's history, boarded the boat on a typically foggy San Francisco evening and was informed by Smith that President Harding had been bitten by a vampire some time the previous evening. Smith told Prevost that one of the ship's hands, a Norwegian named Olaf Johans, had done it, and that he had leaped overboard after the attack. Prevost entered the Presidential Suite and found Harding in a vampiric coma, the telltale puncture wounds on his neck, his wife Florence at his bedside. A brief discussion arrived at the only reasonable course of action, and the President was put out of his misery with a dose of cyanide.

Both Smith and Florence Harding wanted to keep the true means of the President's demise a secret. Prevost was hesitant, but eventually agreed to keep quiet and so, on August 2, 1923, it was announced that President Harding had died of food poisoning while on his way to San Francisco. No further investigation was ever conducted, as Florence Harding would not allow an autopsy on her husband. The body was returned to Washington for burial, and for the first and only time in American history, an FVZA report was suppressed.

President Harding's Funeral

The official version of death by poisoning did little to quell rumors flying around

Washington and the rest of the country. Why hadn't Mrs. Harding permitted an autopsy, and why was there such a hasty burial? If Warren Harding had been murdered, then there was no shortage of suspects. Harding's promise to wipe out corruption would likely mean jail time for some of his pals. Even Harding's wife, Florence, came under suspicion, as the President's many affairs had caused her great personal anguish and embarrassment.

Investigation: The rumors and suspicions eventually died down as Vermonter Calvin Coolidge assumed the reins of government. But across the country in San Francisco, several unanswered questions continued to nag at FVZA Director Prevost. How had a man bitten by a vampire been able to board a ship carrying the President? And how had that vampire gotten to Harding, who was under full Secret Service protection?

Capone hit men
Scalise and Anselmi
Prevost quietly began his own investigation, interviewing everyone who had been on or around the ship in the days leading up to Harding's death. He learned that the Norwegian shiphand had disappeared two days before the ship's departure from Alaska. A big break came when a witness identified John Scalise and Albert Anselmi, two thugs from the Al Capone crime organization, as leaving the ship the night before Harding was bitten. Prevost began to consider the possibility that Capone had put a hit on the President to preserve his bootlegging operation. But the means of the hit-murder by vampire-didn't match gangster modus operandi. And it still didn't explain how the vampire had gotten to the President.

Then came a stunning announcement from Washington: former Assistant Attorney General Jess Smith had been indicted for accepting bribes from Al Capone. For Prevost, Smith's link to Capone seemed to solve the puzzle of Harding's death. During the trip west, Smith had enjoyed unfettered access to the President, and stood to lose much in Harding's promised purge of corruption. In addition, as assistant head of the Justice Department, Smith had access to the FVZA lab, from which several vials of vampire blood had gone missing shortly before President Harding's trip west. Prevost told FVZA Director Hilton Dickerson of his findings; Dickerson summoned him to Washington, and told to bring along his report.

Prevost left San Francisco for Washington on September 12, 1924, but he never reached his destination. As he stepped off the train in St. Louis, two men with tommy guns burst into the station and opened fire. Prevost was shot 12 times, and died a short time later at a nearby hospital. His report was never recovered.

Jess Smith: Assassin?
Eyewitness accounts of Prevost's murderers matched descriptions of Capone hit men Scalise and Anselmi. But before police could question the two men, they turned up dead, riddled with shotgun blasts in a Chicago barbershop.

Post-Mortems: Although Prevost's file was gone, he left behind enough information in his San Francisco office to build a case against Jess Smith in the death of Harding. FVZA Director Hilton Dickerson had every intention of pursuing the case, until Smith himself wound up dead from an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound (the gun was found in his right hand, but the bullet wound was in his left temple). Smith's death meant that, only two years after Harding's death, virtually everyone involved in the event was gone (Florence Harding died November 21, 1924). Only Al Capone remained, and he wasn't talking. The Harding assassination case was dropped, and Capone continued to prosper until he was jailed for tax evasion in 1931. Afflicted with syphilis, he died in Florida in 1947.

Comments from Dr. Pecos: Is it possible that Warren Harding's close friend and Assistant Attorney General Jess Smith arranged and helped carry out the murder of the President? The evidence is certainly compelling. Unfortunately, we will never know the truth, and Harding's cause of death is still officially listed as a stroke. For Franklin Prevost, a man accustomed to battling the undead, the fight against organized crime was played out under a different set of rules. Though he paid for it with his life, Franklin Prevost's courage stands as a proud chapter in FVZA history.

Famous Cases: LeDoux Versus the FVZA

Report Number: 2640
Date: Summer, 1923
Location:Akron, Ohio

On its surface, the case of Ray LeDoux was typical of the Depression era. A young man, out in the world alone, gets bitten by vampires and has to be destroyed by FVZA agents. But the Ray LeDoux case would prove to have a life of its own, a life that almost brought about the end of the FVZA.

A hobo camp near Chicago
Background: Ray LeDoux grew up in a prosperous middle-class Ohio home, the son of an insurance company owner and a homemaker. Like many teenagers at that time, Ray was taken by the romance of the rails. During the summer of 1923, Ray and a friend embarked on one last adventure before college. They hopped a train in Akron and set off westward, overnighting in hobo camps along the way. The postcards Ray sent back home chronicle his journey: Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska. And then, late in June of 1923, the postcards abruptly stopped.

Incident:On the night of July 1, 1923, a hobo camp in the shadow of a trestle bridge along the Mississippi River was attacked by a pack of vampires. Six hobos were bitten; three escaped harm. By the time the FVZA Saint Louis team arrived, the vampires had vanished. One night later, another hobo camp was hit, this one 200 miles to the east near Indianapolis. A third attack took place one night later near Columbus, Ohio.

FVZA agents inspect the train that carried the vampires
Investigation: An FVZA team from Cleveland, Ohio, deduced that the vampire pack was using the railroad to flee from their crime scenes. A quick study of railroad timetables led the team to a railyard in Dayton, Ohio, on the afternoon of July 5, 1923. The team conducted a search of all the trains in the yard, using dogs. The dogs quickly ran to one vacant boxcar and began barking excitedly. The team surrounded the car and flushed out seven vampires, who were then destroyed. Among them was a teenage boy with identification bearing the name "Ray LeDoux."

Clarence Darrow
Post-Mortems: On July 6, 1923, two FVZA agents arrived at the home of Ray LeDoux' parents in Akron to give them the bad news. LeDoux was buried shortly thereafter, and the matter seemed to be closed. But a week after the funeral, the LeDoux family announced that they had hired the great lawyer Clarence Darrow to pursue a wrongful death lawsuit against the FVZA. At a press conference, Darrow told the assembled reporters, "the FVZA operates as judge, jury and executioner. They are like a closed, secret society within the confines of the United States Government, and it is high time we open them up for inspection."

The nation's newspapers followed the trial closely Throughout August of 1923, the LeDoux trial captivated the nation. The trial, held in Akron, turned into a showdown between the nation's two most prominent lawyers: Clarence Darrow for the LeDoux family, and William Jennings Bryan for the FVZA. Darrow's central point was that a person bitten by a vampire had committed no crime and thus had the same rights as any American citizen, including the right to trial by jury. William Jennings Bryan countered that capturing vampires and holding them for trial was absurdly dangerous and impractical. "What if the vampire is found innocent," Bryan asked. "Do we release it on its own recognizance?"

The Akron courtroom
as it looks today
In his closing argument, Darrow played on the jury's emotions. Rather than dwell on vampirism, he spoke of Ray LeDoux, the honor student, paperboy and fishing enthusiast. He even read some of the postcards Ray had sent back from his railway adventures. The jury was moved, and came in with a verdict against the FVZA. Trial judge Gavin Conley went a step further: he slapped a moratorium on the killing of vampires in Ohio. Despite vehement protests from many quarters, the Ohio State Supreme Court upheld the verdict.

Fortunately, by the time the case got to the Supreme Court, the folly of the Ohio decision had become clear. Numerous FVZA agents quit and, when ill-trained army troops were thrown into the fray, vampire attacks exploded. Finally, on November 3, 1923, the Supreme Court reversed the ruling of the Ohio judge and restored the Agency's right to destroy vampires. In the majority decision, Chief Justice and former President William Howard Taft wrote, "the FVZA provides a great service to our country, and the Court should not do anything to prevent them from the fulfillment of that service."

Comments from Dr. Pecos: Sadly, Chief Justice Taft's words were not heeded by future court justices. In 1935, the Supreme Court declared that vampires have the same rights as all citizens. The ruling essentially stripped away the FVZA's Powers of Termination, also known as the Right to Kill. In response, President Franklin Roosevelt signed the Emergency Relief Act of 1936, which turned the Agency into an undercover operation. For the next 39 years, the Agency did its brave work in the shadows, far from the prying eyes of the legal system.

Famous Cases: Vampires On Ice

Report Number: 4329
Date: June 16, 1942
Location: Caribou, Alaska

Caribou, Alaska, 1900
Background: Gold was discovered in Caribou, Alaska, in 1899 and, within two years, over 30,000 people had made the trip up the Yukon River to this small town to seek their fortune. But when the gold ran out in 1901, the fortune-seekers moved on, and Caribou became a ghost town.
Forty-one years later, an advance team of ten Army Engineers arrived in Caribou as part of one of the great road-building feats in history: the Alcan Highway, the passage that would finally connect Alaska with the lower 48 United States. The Army engineers were experts in demolition: they had come to Caribou to blast a passage through a mountain pass and clear the way for the road builders, who were to arrive a few days later. On June 11th, 1942, the team erected tents just outside of the ghost town and set to work with renewed vigor, as the highway project was in its final stages.

Incident: At 11:43 pm on the night of June 13th, 1942, Project Headquarters in Whitehorse, Canada, received an urgent radio message from the Caribou camp. In the brief message, a terrified-sounding man claimed that the camp was under siege from a pack of vampires. The message was cut short, and Headquarters was unable to raise the camp on the radio over the next twenty-four hours. The FVZA office in Seattle was notified.

Construction along the Alcan Highway, 1942

Investigation: An FVZA assault team flew into Whitehorse on June 15, and immediately set out for Caribou in a convoy of trucks. They arrived at first light the following morning.

The assault team found the ten Army engineers sleeping in their tents; all had recently been transformed into vampires. After the engineers were trapped, examined and destroyed, the assault team's dogs picked up a scent and led the team to an abandoned mine near the camp. Five vampires were flushed from the mine, examined and destroyed.

An examination of the clothing and personal effects of the vampires found in the abandoned mine revealed that the five must have been infected and transformed during the Caribou Gold Rush of 1899-1901. Somehow, the vampires had come back to life after an unprecedented forty-year dormancy.

Post-Mortems: A check of past FVZA records failed to turn up any reported vampire encounters in Caribou. Further research led to a story in "Young Klondike," a popular magazine of the period. Each issue of "Young Klondike" was filled with often fanciful stories of the characters and events of the Alaska Gold Rush. The April, 1902, edition contained a story entitled, "My Encounter With Vampires," a first-person account by prospector Josiah Franklin concerning events that transpired in Caribou in the winter of 1901:

"People started going missing. Every morning, one, two folks was gone. At first we didn't think nothing of it, that's how things was in Caribou. People left. Then one night, Pete Dawson, the owner of the saloon, came running down the street hollering, waking everyone up. He said he'd been attacked by vampires, said he barely got away, and from the looks of him, with his clothes all torn up, he wasn't lying. So about twenty of us got together, waited till the sun came up, then we went looking for them. We checked all over, every building, every miner's camp. Found nothing.

Young Klondike
Magazine
That night, we drank us some coffee, hid in an alleyway and waited for them. Must have been after midnight when they came in. First there was this one man, a feller I recognized who had a claim out on Spring Creek. He came creeping through, like he was the scout or something. Then the rest of them came out of the shadows without even making a sound. There was five in all. We lit our torches and tried to surround them, but they turned tail and disappeared. Good thing we had dogs, because we would have never been able to catch up with them ourselves.

We found the dogs outside one of the abandoned mines and from the way they was barking we knew the vampires was in there. Problem was, none of us wanted to go in and finish the job. So we decided to blow up the entrance to the mine and trap them for good. We rigged up some dynamite and blew it up and a whole big bunch of rocks came crashing down around the entrance. I don't reckon a team of elephants could have cleared those rocks away. After that, we went back to the saloon and celebrated. And we never saw no vampires again."

If Mr. Franklin's account is true, then it might explain what happened to the Army engineers. Trapped in the chill depths of the mine on that night in 1901, the vampires likely were frozen solid. And they probably would have remained that way forever, had the Army engineers not arrived forty years later. In the course of blasting their way through the mountain pass, the engineers apparently opened up the entrance to the mine. As it was summer, the vampires must have been thawed out, after which they awoke, and eventually found their way to the camp.
Comments from Dr. Pecos: With their often remote locations and reputation for lawlessness, mining towns were notorious breeding grounds for vampires. Residents of these towns often had no choice but to take matters into their own hands, and this case was no different. The locals thought the problem was over when they sealed the vampires in the mine. Subsequent events proved how wrong they were.

This case underscores the importance of retrieving vampire bodies, no matter how unlikely their survival. History has proven that vampires can survive fires, shootings, explosions...and being frozen alive.

Famous Cases: Terror on the Interstate

Report Number: 7498
Date: Spring, 1967
Location: Interstate 95, eastern United States

Background: Although the vaccine finally gave society the upper hand in the struggle with vampires, containment and capture became more difficult with the creation of a national interstate system. Case in point: the I-95 killings of 1967.

The Oasis, Burlington,
New Jersey
Incident: On March 3, 1967, trucker E.G. Robinson failed to show for a scheduled delivery in Florida. As Robinson was carrying a valuable cargo of stereo equipment, the trucking company put out an All Points Bulletin for him. A day later, Robinson's truck turned up in an industrial park in Burlington, New Jersey. The stereo equipment was still there, but Robinson was gone, leaving behind only a small trace of blood in the cab of his truck.

That same day, Darlene King of Sebago Lake, Maine, reported her truck-driver husband Jake missing. Jake King's truck was also found in Burlington, this time in an alley behind a shopping center. In the ensuing days, three more trucks (two with traces of blood in the cab) were found, and local police started to fear there was a serial killer on the loose. Witness testimony, along with receipts found in the trucks, indicated that all of the truckers had been at The Oasis, an enormous truck stop on the New Jersey Turnpike in Burlington, shortly before their disappearance. Police increased their presence at the truck stop, and the disappearances stopped.

A week later, two college students on their way to Florida for Spring Break disappeared from a rest stop in Maryland. Their car was found in the parking lot. The disappearances continued over the next several days: two students in Virginia, a trucker in North Carolina. The FBI was brought in on the case.

The Flying J,
Summerton, South Carolina
Investigation: Investigators got their first break on March 17, when a night watchman at a South Carolina lumber yard spotted a man leaving an eighteen-wheeler at the truck depot across the street, then getting in a pickup truck driven by a woman. The next day, police traced the abandoned eighteen-wheeler to Lou Gaudette, a Canadian trucker who had last been seen at the Flying J truck stop in Summerton, South Carolina.

One of the Burlington victims

While these developments were unfolding in South Carolina, FVZA agents from the New York office had been summoned to a grisly scene in Burlington, New Jersey. The bodies of two men had been found in a swamp not far from the Oasis truck stop. Both bodies had been drained of blood, then dismembered. Thinking that the bodies were those of the missing truck drivers, the FVZA asked to take over the I-95 investigation, but the FBI already had plans of its own.

That night, several FBI agents posing as truckers went to the Flying J in South Carolina. Sometime after midnight, they spotted the suspect pickup truck cruising among the big rigs in the parking lot. There was a middle-aged man at the wheel, and a woman alongside him. The Feds moved into position, blocked the pickup and drew their weapons. When the driver tried to ram them, the Feds opened fire, but the pickup truck managed to get away. The investigation was then turned over to the FVZA.

Police inspect the suspect truck

An FVZA team from Atlanta took control of the case about the same time that a convenience store clerk near Jacksonville, Florida, reported seeing what appeared to be a male and female vampire abduct a man and drive off in his car. Police responding to the call found a bullet-riddled, abandoned pickup truck in the store parking lot registered to George Muzischenko, a truck driver from New Hampshire. The next day, a dismembered, bloodless body was found in the trunk of the stolen car about five miles from the store. A large search operation was conducted in the nearby swamp, but the conditions made tracking difficult, and night fell with no capture. However, with the net closing around them, the two vampires became more desperate. On the night of March 23, the vampires abducted a driver and stole an oil truck in front of several witnesses at a gas station. The driver was later heaved from the truck and died from his injuries. The Florida Highway Patrol spotted the stolen truck heading south toward Miami and gave chase. On I-95 just north of Miami, the truck careened off the road, crashed and exploded. Both vampires were incinerated.

A fiery end for George and Tina

Post Mortems: The vampires were identified as George Muzischenko and his sometime-girlfriend Tina Piro, a waitress from Greenfield, Massachusetts. Based on witness testimony, FVZA officials were able to piece together the following scenario. Muzischenko, who lived alone in a cabin in the New Hampshire woods, was likely a victim of the Kancamangus Pack, an elusive vampire group that had been terrorizing hikers and residents in the White Mountains for much of the previous year. After Muzischenko awakened as a vampire, he apparently drove his pickup truck south to Greenfield and waited outside the greasy spoon where Tina worked.

Once Piro turned, she and Muzischenko concocted an insidious hunting scheme. Muzischenko would drive his pickup truck around the parking lot of truck stops, while Piro, posing as a hooker, solicited the truckers via CB. Once a "john" was found, Piro would be left off at his truck. She would disable the trucker, then Muzischenko would join her for a feeding. After they finished, Muzischenko would dispose of the body and drop the truck in a secluded location. The couple avoided detection by scrupulously disposing of the bodies, and never staying too long in one place. They easily found new victims in rest stops and motels as they moved down the east coast. There is speculation that their ultimate destination was a lakeside cabin Muzischenko owned in central Florida.

It is difficult to estimate the number of victims that Muzischenko and Piro killed during their interstate spree. A dozen bodies were eventually recovered, but a number of other unsolved disappearances may be attributable to the two vampires.

Comments from Dr. Pecos: Successful vampires learn to cover their tracks, and move along when they fear detection. An efficient highway system made them more elusive than ever. This case also underscores the importance of communication between various law enforcement agencies and the FVZA. Had the FBI handed the investigation over to the FVZA right away, the lives of at least two people might have been saved.

Famous Cases: The Zombie Boatlift

Report Number: 8861
Date: March-April, 1970
Location: southern Florida

Zombie scourges generally arose in the wake of natural disasters. Almost every significant outbreak in the United States came on the heels of a hurricane, flood or blizzard. But the outbreak that terrorized south Florida in 1970 had its roots not in an act of nature but in the diabolical mind of one evil dictator.

Background: With its tropical climate, Florida was always a hotbed of zombie activity. The worst outbreak in U.S. history took place in Key West after a hurricane in 1935. The Miami office of the FVZA handled an average of 200 zombie cases a year, the most in the continental United States. However, as the Sixties came to a close, zombie attacks were dwindling, and many FVZA zombie specialists found themselves forced into early retirement.

The first zombies made landfall near the

Cape Florida lighthouse
Incident: On March 20, 1970, 62-year-old Newt Washburn, keeper of the Cape Florida lighthouse in Key Biscayne, was reported missing by a friend. Police entered the lighthouse and climbed to the top, whereupon they encountered a zombie matching Mr. Washburn's description. The cops fled the scene, but not before one was bitten by the zombie. The FVZA team in Miami was notified.

Investigation: By the time the FVZA team arrived in Key Biscayne, zombie attacks had been reported at Mangrove Acres, a retirement community two miles from the lighthouse. The team exterminated the lighthouse zombie (later confirmed to be Mr. Washburn), then coordinated an evacuation of Mangrove Acres. A total of 11 zombies were exterminated in the operation. The FVZA team later discovered a large boat beached in a snarl of mangroves near the lighthouse. Much of the boat's woodwork had been gnawed away.

More attacks were reported across south Florida over the next week. In Key West, the traditional sunset festivities at Mallory Square were disrupted by a pack of waterlogged zombies. In Fort Lauderdale, four people were trampled to death on the beach by a crush of Spring Breakers fleeing a pack of zombies emerging from the surf. In each case, abandoned boats were found nearby.

South Florida Sun-Sentinel
March 27, 1970
The so-called "water zombies" paralyzed the region in fear. Beaches were abandoned, shops shuttered. On March 28, a Coast Guard cutter patrolling off the Miami coast reported spotting a boat packed to the gunwhales with what appeared to be Cuban refugees. A short time later, the cutter radioed in a frantic, unintelligible message about zombies. The message was abruptly cut off.

When an FVZA team was taken out to the Coast Guard vessel, they found it swarming with zombies. Agent Frank Vinciguerra remembers the sight: "the zombies had picked up our scent and were all crowded on one side of the boat. They seemed to be trying to decide whether or not to jump in the water after us. The way they were waving their arms and grimacing, it looked like they were happy to see us." The boat was scuttled.

Over the next week, five more boats packed with zombies were destroyed in the waters off south Florida. The wave of incidents had authorities puzzled. Where were the zombies coming from? Signs pointed to Cuba, just 90 miles from Key West. Cuba had suffered a major zombie outbreak late in 1969, during which Cuban dictator Fidel Castro repeatedly refused FVZA offers for help. Could the Cuban zombies have commandeered boats and steered them to the United States? Top brass at the FVZA maintained that zombies lacked the intelligence to concoct such a plan.

A boatload of zombies, courtesy of Fidel Castro
The major break in the case came in April when Teofilo Salinas, a high-ranking Cuban official, defected to the United States. Salinas told U.S. authorities that Castro was responsible for the zombies washing ashore in Florida. Salinas claimed that Cuban hospitals had been unable to handle the large numbers of zombie-bite victims, so Castro ordered Cuban soldiers to herd the recently-bitten onto boats and push them out to sea. "Make them America's problem," Salinas quoted Castro as saying.

Post-Mortems: After numerous denials, Castro grudgingly admitted to casting the zombies onto the high seas. In typical fashion, Castro blamed America, claiming that the U.S. trade embargo had led to a shortage of zombie vaccine in Cuba. While some American politicians wanted a military reprisal, cooler heads prevailed: in the end, Washington opted for a stronger trade embargo and a ban on Cuban immigration.

For much of 1970, isolated zombies continued to turn up in south Florida. In one case, an Everglades tour boat full of Germans received a surprise when they eased past a thicket of swamp grass and found themselves face-to-face with a zombie standing waist-high in the muck. The alert tour guide pulled away before the zombie could get to the boat. All told, approximately 100 Cuban zombies made it to the shores of Florida during what's now known as the "zombie boatlift." It's estimated that another hundred zombies were on the boats destroyed offshore. Of the 57 Americans bitten by the zombies, 22 died.

Comments from Dr. Pecos: Cuba has produced many fine exports, including music, cigars and baseball players. But zombies were one export they should have kept to themselves. Of the many dark deeds perpetrated by the Castro regime, the zombie boatlift stands among the worse.

Famous Cases: The Wheeler Commission

Report Number: 8931
Date: Summer, 1968
Location: Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Washington, D.C.
The 1960s were a turbulent time in America. The country was divided over issues such as the Viet Nam War and civil rights, and even the FVZA was pulled into the vortex. This was never more evident than in 1968, when a tragic mishap in Philadelphia forever changed the FVZA's mode of operation.

Background: The great irony for FVZA Agents working in the 1960s was that, even as vampire numbers were at their lowest levels in Agency history, the job was more dangerous than ever. In a kind of Darwinian survival of the fittest, the remaining vampire packs proved to be resilient, smart and adaptive. To make matters worse, the rise of urban blight gave vampires an ample selection of abandoned buildings within which to hide. As these buildings were often side-by-side with inhabited structures, FVZA actions there carried with them a greater risk of civilian casualties Incident: On June 23, 1968, a vampire pack infiltrated a street festival in the Italian neighborhood of South Philadelphia and killed three young women. Two nights later, the vampires mingled with a crowd leaving a rock concert at the Spectrum: the dismembered remains of five concertgoers were found in a dumpster the next day. The FVZA Philadelphia office dubbed the vampires the Chameleon Pack because of their knack for using disguises to blend into the crowd. Even by vampire standards, the Chameleon Pack was clever and ruthless. They always tore their victims apart so as to not leave witnesses, and they stayed one step ahead of the FVZA by constantly changing their hideouts. But their habit of hiding in plain sight at large outdoor events gave Philly investigators an idea.

gutted by fire
Investigation: On the Fourth of July, a team of 25 FVZA investigators set up a stakeout at Penn's Landing, the riverside site of the city's Independence Day celebration. Using heat-sensitive goggles, the team spotted vampires from the Chameleon Pack walking through the crowd shortly after midnight. The team moved in, and the vampires fled in a stolen Cadillac. A car chase led to a black neighborhood in North Philadelphia and an abandoned building where the vampires had apparently stashed an arsenal of weapons. A ferocious gunfight ensued, during which two FVZA agents were killed. When the FVZA team lobbed tear gas into the building, an old couch caught fire and the building was quickly involved. The Chameleon Pack members were methodically picked off as they fled the building. Unfortunately, by the time the vampires were destroyed, the fire had spread to the neighboring Barkley Arms, a housing development for low-income families. The fire gutted the building and 10 people died.

The tragedy led to protests throughout the city
Post-Mortems: The Barkley Arms tragedy did nothing to improve the reputation of the FVZA in a black community already on edge from the assassination of Martin Luther King. Ever since the days of Reconstruction, when the Ku Klux Klan carried out attacks under the cover of the FVZA in the South, blacks had been deeply mistrustful of the Agency. It was a common, if inaccurate, suspicion among them that the FVZA devoted more resources to vampire and zombie outbreaks in white neighborhoods. The Agency had taken a major step toward improving relations by appointing its first black Director in 1964, but the Barkley Arms fire brought back all the old animosity. Despite repeated FVZA apologies and the promise of a full-scale investigation, the political pressure in an election year was too great for Washington to ignore. In September, 1968, Congress launched a probe into FVZA procedure and protocol.

For five days, the Wheeler Commission
grilled the FVZA

During the weeklong hearings chaired by Wisconsin Democrat George Wheeler, FVZA leadership found itself on the defensive. FVZA leaders were hammered over their hiring policies, use of force and civilian casualties. The Wheeler Commission eventually came up with a series of burdensome new guidelines that deeply complicated the job of hunting vampires and zombies. The FVZA was told to submit detailed plans to local and state government agencies, plans that had to be rubber-stamped before any assault took place. The Agency was also required to clear a large radius around a vampire hideout in advance of any assault. FVZA leaders chafed at the new regulations, pointing out that fast response and the element of surprise were key to combating vampires. But the complaints fell on deaf ears, and the Wheeler recommendations were made into law in the fall of 1968.

Comments from Dr. Pecos: While I agree that mistakes were made in the assault on the Chameleon Pack, I still believe that the Wheeler Commission overreacted. We always ran into problems any time politicians tried to apply normal rules of law enforcement to exterminating the undead. Killing them is and always has been a messy business.

Was the FVZA a racist institution? Perhaps at one time, but during my years with the Agency, I never saw any evidence of racism. We identified threats, investigated, and carried out assaults without any regard to the skin color of those affected. If anyone was worthy of scorn, it was the media for devoting more attention to vampire outbreaks in upscale white communities.

Despite the awful tragedy at the Barkley Arms, this story has a happy ending thanks to a paragraph in the Wheeler legislation that gave the FVZA the right to use deadly force with impunity if they happened upon an attack in progress. Taking a cue from this wording, the Agency changed its focus to night-time surveillance and extermination. While this was considerably more dangerous than the traditional daytime assaults, it enabled the Agency to make an "end run" around the Wheeler requirements. And though each remaining vampire pack put up a ferocious battle, and the percentage of Agent casualties was higher than ever, the FVZA succeeded in making America vampire-free within the next ten years.

Famous Cases:
The Deadstock Festival

Report Number: 8810
Date: July, 1970
Location:Woodstock, Vermont

A crowd of over 200,000
attended Woodstock II
Background: In the summer of 1970, promoters Lew Workman and Brian Wilkie hatched a scheme for a four-day outdoor concert on a farm outside the small town of Woodstock, Vermont. The promoters hoped to recapture the spirit of the original Woodstock Festival, which had taken place a year earlier in upstate New York. They also hoped that their concert, dubbed Woodstock II, would helped erase bad memories left over from the December, 1969, Altamont Concert in California, where a fan had been stabbed to death while the Rolling Stones were playing onstage. Workman and Wilkie were able to lure a number of big acts to the event, including King Crimson, Iron Butterfly and Mountain.

Incident: On the second night of the concert, Teddy Desilets, a member of the Hell's Angels motorcycle gang, arrived at the Emergency Room of the Woodstock Hospital with a badly-mangled right hand. Desilets had been attending Woodstock II and was apparently attacked by a crazed man while relieving himself in the woods. The twenty-six-year-old Desilets, who had lost his thumb and parts of two fingers in the attack, underwent surgery and was admitted to intensive care.

The following night, police were summoned to the hospital with reports of a deranged man terrorizing the patients and staff. When police arrived, they found Desilets in a catatonic state, blood streaming from his mouth. Desilets attacked the police and, despite being shot numerous times, escaped into the night. All told, eleven patients and two cops were bitten; the most serious of the injured had almost his entire shoulder chewed off.

At first, police and doctors believed that Desilets' state was due to a reaction to hallucinogenic drugs. But after several more people arrived at the hospital from the concert with bite injuries, the FVZA was notified. The Agency instructed hospital staff to vaccinate and quarantine any victims until they arrived. Unfortunately, hospital staff discovered that it had no vaccine on hand, and with several of the patients bitten by Desilets turning into zombies, they were soon overwhelmed. The panicked staff moved as many of the sick out of the hospital as they could, and then abandoned the building.

State Police shoo away stragglers the morning after the cancellation
Investigation: Within two hours of being notified, an FVZA team from Boston arrived in Vermont, took stock of the situation and quickly called for reinforcements from the New York office. With the help of the Vermont National Guard, the Boston team secured the hospital, administered vaccine to the recently wounded, and destroyed a total of 22 zombies inside the building. The search-and-destroy mission was particularly hazardous, as one of the zombies had chewed through an electrical cable, cutting power to the building and leaving it mostly dark.

The New York team arrived at the concert via a police escort just as Crosby, Still, Nash and Young were about to go on. The Agency apprised concert organizers of the situation and asked them to call off the show. When the huge crowd was told of the concert's cancellation, they rioted, turning over police cars and lighting the stage on fire. Several of the bands, including CSN&Y, had to be helicoptered out of the area. Fortunately, a large contingent of National Guard troops arrived from Massachusetts and restored order.

National Guard and state police under the supervision of FVZA agents organized the evacuation of the area, during which 17 zombies were encountered and destroyed. Over the course of the next day, another 23 zombies were destroyed in the woods surrounding the farm. Among the dead zombies: Teddy Desilets, who had managed to stagger back to the concert despite having 15 bullets in him; and John Robie, owner of a neighboring farm.

John Robie's farm
Post Mortems: The zombie outbreak that started at Woodstock II took many weeks to fully contain. Several zombies managed to stray into neighboring towns, and one infected motorcycle gang went on a rampage across several states before they were trapped in an abandoned barn in Indiana and destroyed.

The source of the zombie attacks was traced back to the farmer John Robie. Robie had been cleaning the henhouse at his farm when he was apparently bitten by an infected rat. After his transformation was complete, he made his way to the concert site and a veritable zombie smorgasbord.

Macabre souvenir: a ticket from the festival
Comments from Dr. Pecos: By the mid-Twentieth Century, zombie attacks were very rare. For the rest of the summer, Vermont was a state under quarantine. An atmosphere of fear and paranoia reigned: most Vermonters stayed in their homes, and several innocent people were shot and killed when they were mistaken for zombies. Thousands of livestock had to be destroyed after several cows were discovered to be carrying the virus. By the time the outbreak was fully contained, 137 people had been bitten; of those, 79 were transformed and eventually destroyed. Concert promoters Workman and Wilkie were ruined.

Many hospitals stopped carrying the vaccine, and few if any doctors had any experience dealing with victims. This ignorance, coupled with the large crowd at Woodstock II, combined to create the worst single wave of zombie attacks in U.S. history. Woodstock II, which had been organized to promote peace and love, would forever be known as "Deadstock."

Famous Cases:
The Magic Wanda

By the early 1970s, memories of the horrors of vampirism were fading, and in their place came a misguided admiration among young people for bloodsuckers. The older generation, who grew up with vampires and in many cases lost loved ones to them, tried to disabuse the younger generation of the notion that vampirism was alluring. But the warnings where drowned out in an unhealthy convergence of heavy metal music, black magic, and vampire cults. Some vampire enthusiasts went so far as to try and acquire stolen vampire blood. By the summer of '71, a single vial of blood was fetching $10,000 on the street. This prurient interest was to have devastating ramifications, such as the events in Los Angeles in December, 1971.

Report Number: 9336
Date: December, 1971
Location: Los Angeles, California

Background: Wanda Schiffler's journey to ignominy began in the leafy New York City suburb of Scarsdale. The rebellious Wanda never felt at home among the country club set, so in 1967, at the ripe age of 17, she ran away to Los Angeles and became a fixture in the burgeoning rock and roll scene.

Cedars, where
held court

She was, at various times, groupie, rock star girlfriend, drug addict and dealer. Eventually, the lovely Wanda settled down with Samir Sheeshia, a 65-year-old Lebanese immigrant who had made a fortune in the dry cleaning business before becoming a producer of B-movie schlock. Wanda set herself up at Cedars, Sheeshia's lavish Tudor mansion in the Hollywood Hills, and transformed it into a rock star hospitality house chock full of drugs, booze, and willing groupies. By 1970, Wanda Schiffler was known as "Magic Wanda" because, like a magician with a magic wand, she seemed capable of making any fantasy possible. Fledgling rock stars knew they had made it when they received an invite from her.

Like many heavy metal devotees, Wanda expressed a strong interest in vampirism, though her friends passed it off as a fad she would outgrow. However, late in 1971, those same friends noticed a change in Wanda. While never a morning lark, she stopped going out during the day completely, and when she emerged at night, it was underneath sunglasses and a thick layer of kabuki-like makeup.

Ian Allen of
Mr. Crowley

Meanwhile, far from the sunshine and palm trees of L.A., Welshman Ian Allen was preparing for his first trip to America. Growing up in the grim Welsh capital of Cardiff, Ian taught himself guitar by playing along with scratchy Blues records by the likes of Muddy Waters and Robert Johnson. He also developed a fascination with the occult. At age 19, he moved to London and formed the band Mr. Crowley, named for the English black magic and occult writer Alistair Crowley. In 1971, Mr. Crowley became the first band signed to Led Zeppelin's new Swan Song label. The dark, menacing tracks of their self-titled first album, featuring Ian's gravelly voice and growling guitar, failed to sell in England, but found a loyal following among disaffected American suburban teenagers.

Late in 1971, Led Zeppelin manager Peter Grant sent Mr. Crowley to America to play smaller venues in an attempt to galvanize their fan base. The tour started with a week of shows at the Whiskey, the famous rock club on the Sunset Strip in Los Angeles. When those shows created a sensation, the band was held over for a second week. Local papers described Ian as "mesmerizing" and "a star of the future." A critic for L.A.'s Rock Paper wrote, "get down to the Whiskey now, because this may be your last chance to see Mr. Crowley in a smaller venue." From her mansion high above the Strip, Wanda Schiffler took notice.

Incident: On the night of December 11, 1971, Ian Allen looked past the hordes of groupies and sycophants in his dressing room and saw a statuesque, ghostly-pale woman in black standing by the door, smiling enigmatically. It's likely Ian Allen had heard of the Magic Wanda, but the sight of her knocked him for a loop. He quickly ejected the teenage girl sitting in his lap and went over to introduce himself. A short time later, the two fast friends left the Whiskey together, and when Ian didn't return to his bungalow at the Chateau Marmont the following day, a panicked Zeppelin manager Peter Grant went looking for him at Cedars. The butler who answered the door told Grant that Wanda was not home and that Ian had never been to the house. When the 300-pound ex-wrestler Grant bulled his way into the house, he was viciously beaten and driven off by what he described as "three amazons." After Ian failed to turn up for that night's show, foul play was suspected.

The Whiskey, site of Ian and Wanda's meeting

Police were preparing an investigation when, out of the blue, Ian Allen showed up at the Whiskey, wearing sunglasses and looking ghastly. He claimed that he had been ill, but was vague with regard to his whereabouts over the past 24 hours. The band went out and ripped through a set, after which Ian left with Wanda Schiffler and several young women, including 15-year-old Cassie Burke. A day later, Burke's parents filed a Missing Persons report after she failed to return to her San Fernando Valley home.

Police wanted to question Ian and Wanda about Cassie Burke's disappearance, but the band had left L.A. for the Pacific Northwest and a week of shows in Seattle and Portland. Between gigs, Ian and Wanda would disappear and not be seen until the next night's show. Ian's band mates thought that Wanda had gotten him hooked on heroin.

The day after the band returned to L.A. for more shows at the Whiskey, drug dealer Colin Lamb was arrested in possession of dozens of vials of frozen vampire blood. The vials were part of a lot stolen from Washington D.C.'s Walter Reed Hospital the previous summer. As part of a plea bargain, Lamb gave FVZA officials the names of people to whom he had sold some of the stolen vials. Among those names was none other than Wanda Schiffler. The FVZA was called in.

Investigation: On the morning of December 21, the FVZA Los Angeles team set up a surveillance post at the guest house of a property adjacent to Cedars. Aside from visits by a pool cleaner and a landscape crew, the team observed no activity at the house during the day. That night, Ian Allen and Wanda Schiffler were observed leaving the house about 9:30 p.m. Accounts put them at the Whiskey for the next several hours, after which they returned with a caravan of cars in tow. The group, made up mostly of young women who had been at the show, adjourned to the back yard, where they were joined by several others from the house.

Once they had confirmed the presence of vampires with infrared scopes, the FVZA team surrounded the house and conducted an assault. The rescue was greatly complicated when one of the vampires released a pack of vicious dobermans. Nevertheless, the FVZA team managed to eliminate a dozen vampires in the back yard; the terrified young women who had followed Wanda and Ian home from the show were escorted to safety.

With the outside secure, the FVZA advance team conducted a sweep of the house, with disastrous results. The team was overwhelmed by attacks from all sides. Vampires emerged from hidden rooms beneath staircases, false bookcases and trap doors in the floor. Agent Frank Vallejo, a 15-year veteran, was killed; two other agents were bitten but managed to escape. The team was forced to withdraw.

As night turned to morning, the team, with the help of the L.A. Police Department, cordoned off the street to the mansion and set up a perimeter. Demolition of the house was considered and rejected in the event there were innocent people being help captive inside. The team, augmented by agents from San Diego and San Francisco, went inside and conducted a room-to-room sweep, encountering fierce resistance along the way. It was nightfall before the house was fully secured. Over 30 vampires were destroyed and 12 agents injured. Among the macabre items found in the house were a subterranean torture chamber and Samir Sheeshia's decapitated head.

Officials were unable to find the bodies of Wanda Schiffler and Ian Allen among the dead vampires. A thorough search of the area led to the discovery of a secret tunnel leading from the basement of the house to an exit spot opening up on the hills. An All Points Bulletin was issued for Ian and Wanda.

LA Times headline
December 23, 1971
Once the media picked up the story, much of L.A. flew into a panic. Movie stars left their posh estates as helicopters scoured the hills with spotlights. The search was made especially difficult by a driving rainstorm. Police were inundated with calls, and a drifter was shot to death by an armed guard behind one estate. One of the calls came from the caretaker of an estate who reported seeing a man and a woman breaking into the unoccupied main house at about 2:30 a.m. Two police officers went to check on the call and entered the house; when dispatch was unable to raise them on the radio, an FVZA team went to the house and surrounded it. At dawn, the FVZA was preparing to move in when smoke was observed seeping out of one of the front windows. The team entered the house and found two dead cops in the front hall and the still-smoldering bodies of Wanda Schiffler and Ian Allen in the study. They had apparently doused each other with brandy and set themselves on fire. All of L.A. breathed a sigh of relief.

Post Mortems: The toll from the battle at Cedars was considerable: 34 vampires destroyed, two police officers and one FVZA agent dead and 12 agents injured. Among the dead vampires were a number of young women who had apparently been lured to Cedars by ads in local trades seeking actresses for movie work. In addition, 12 people were treated for vampires bites in Seattle and Portland, where Mr. Crowley had played for one week.

Ian Allen's grave in Wales, England

Wanda Schiffler's journal, found in her bedroom at Cedars, offers a blow-by-blow account of her reign of terror. In a series of increasingly bizarre, rambling entries, Wanda wrote of her lifelong desire to become a vampire: "I've always felt that I was a vampire. I never liked the day. The sun hurts my head." She also describes procuring the vampire blood and the nervous moments before she first injected it into her veins. According to her journal, she killed her sugar daddy, Mr. Sheeshia, then went about assembling a sort of vampiric court made up of local rock and roll groupies. "These girls are invisible," she wrote. "No one will even notice them missing." But Wanda was a practical girl, and knew she needed a surefire way to recruit fresh blood. Ian Allen was the solution. In her last entry, Wanda wrote, "Ian and I have something that transcends love. Together, we will rule this city and we will never die." Like every other self-inflicted vampire, she was to find out what a foolish notion that was.

The years since Ian Allen's death have seen a growth in his popularity. In 1976, a local artist painted a large mural of him on the side of a building in Venice beach, where it remained for a number of years until community activists managed to have it removed. Ian's grave in England has become a pilgrimage site for both rock fans and vampire cultists, and Mr. Crowley's debut album ended up spending over 100 weeks on the charts.

Comments from Dr. Pecos: While the case files are full of stories of male vampires using females to lure victims, this is one of the few cases where the tables were turned. As a result, L.A. was for one long night paralyzed with fear, and a town that had churned out so many phony vampires found out the real thing was a whole lot scarier.

THE INTERNET BOOK OF SHADOWS — Fragmented Grimoires of the Digital Age

Before modern platforms centralized everything into feeds, algorithms, and sanitized knowledge streams, there was a strange and chaotic era of the internet where occult material moved freely through forums, email chains, GeoCities pages, FTP dumps, obscure websites, and early digital communities that treated information less like content and more like something to be passed hand-to-hand before it disappeared. What became known as the “Internet Book of Shadows” was never a single book, never a finalized system, and never owned by one tradition; it was a living archive, a constantly mutating compilation of rituals, correspondences, invocations, herbal knowledge, moon phase work, sigil construction, psychic exercises, protection rites, curse warnings, dream practices, energy manipulation techniques, and personal notes from practitioners who often remained anonymous. Different versions circulated with different page counts, different sections, different levels of quality, and different intentions—some clearly rooted in traditions like Wicca and ceremonial magick, others blending folk practices, chaos magick, Eastern philosophy, and raw personal experimentation into something that didn’t fit any formal label. What makes these compilations invaluable is not that every entry is correct or safe or even coherent, but that they capture a moment in time when knowledge was still being shared horizontally, before it was filtered, optimized, or reduced to “content.”

Merging multiple versions of the Internet Book of Shadows is not just an act of organization—it is an act of recovery against fragmentation. Each version carries pieces the others do not: one might contain a full planetary correspondence system, another might include obscure banishing rituals, another might preserve early chaos magick exercises that later disappeared from public circulation, another might hold warnings, disclaimers, or personal annotations that reveal how people were actually using the material rather than how it was supposed to be used. When these are combined, patterns begin to surface—repeated symbols, recurring methods, shared structures that appear across independent sources, suggesting that even in a chaotic, decentralized environment, certain ideas persist because they work for the people using them, or at the very least because they resonate strongly enough to be copied, modified, and passed along. The inconsistencies themselves become data: contradictions between versions highlight where traditions diverge, where experimentation replaced doctrine, and where the line between structured magick and intuitive practice begins to blur.

At its core, the Book of Shadows concept predates the internet entirely; traditionally, it was a personal grimoire, a private record of a practitioner’s rituals, experiences, and evolving understanding of magick. The internet transformed that idea into something collective, turning thousands of personal grimoires into a shared pool of knowledge that anyone could access, remix, and redistribute. This created a unique phenomenon: a decentralized, crowd-sourced occult archive where beginners and experienced practitioners alike contributed to the same evolving document, often without ever knowing each other. The result is messy, contradictory, sometimes naive, sometimes profound—but it is alive in a way that polished, institution-approved texts often are not. It reflects real use, real curiosity, real mistakes, and real attempts to interact with forces that are not easily explained or controlled.

Preserving these merged versions in full, without stripping them down into “acceptable” fragments, matters because once this kind of material is lost, it rarely returns in its original form. Modern internet structures favor visibility, engagement, and safety over depth, risk, and raw exploration, meaning that much of what once circulated freely now either disappears or gets repackaged into something more digestible and less potent. By holding onto these full compilations—every variation, every repeated section, every contradiction—this book ensures that the original signal remains intact, even if it is noisy. The goal is not to present a perfect system but to preserve the ecosystem itself: a snapshot of digital-era magick before it was streamlined, a layered grimoire where the reader can trace ideas across versions, test what resonates, discard what does not, and engage with the material in the same exploratory spirit that created it. In that sense, the Internet Book of Shadows is less a book and more a living archive encoded in fragments—one that only fully reveals itself when nothing is prematurely removed.

KARL SCHAPPER

Karl Schapper (December 30, 1812 – April 28, 1870) was a German socialist and communist. He was one of the pioneers of Communism in Germany, and a close associate of Karl Marx. In 1832, Schapper participated in a failed insurrection in Frankfurt, Germany and was imprisoned. He managed to escape after three months, and made his way to Switzerland, where he became a follower of the utopian communist Wilhelm Weitling. Schapper subsequently joined Young Germany, a radical socialist think tank of writers which existed from about 1830 to 1850. Young Germany was modelled on, and affiliated with, Giuseppe Mazzini's Young Italy. Young Germany was regarded as dangerous by many politicians due to its progressive viewpoint, and in December 1835 many of its publications were banned in Germany by the Frankfurt parliament, which claimed that its members were attempting to "attack the Christian religion," and "destroy all morality" through their writings. In 1834, Schapper participated in Giuseppe Mazzini's unsuccessful attempt at an armed invasion of Savoy from Switzerland, and was once again imprisoned.

Deposition taken before MICHELLE PAYNE, Court Reporter and Notary Public in and for the State of Florida at Large, in the above cause.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: This is a continuation of the deposition of Alfredo Rodriguez. Today is Friday, August the 7th, the year 2009, starting time approximately 1:15 p.m. Will the court reporter please swear in the witness?

Thereupon,

ALFREDO RODRIGUEZ,

having been first duly sworn or affirmed, was examined and testified as follows:

MR. CRITTON: Before we get started just with regard to Ms. Ezell represents Jane Doe 101 and 102, the alleged time of her incidents as of least have been plead in the complaint for 101 is '99 -- I'm sorry, '98 through 2002, with Jane Doe 102 the Spring of -- Spring/Summer of 2003. Mr. Rodriguez never even began employment until '04 and '05. I think her questioning I think -- I can't say she doesn't have standing based on the court order, but I would say it's completely irrelevant and immaterial and has no probative value with regard to this particular witness based upon the two clients at least that are in suit at this point in time.

MS. EZELL: As Mr. Critton well knows I represent a number of other clients whose cases have not been filed and I believe we do have standing to ask questions, and I do intend to do that today.

EXAMINATION

BY MS. EZELL:

Q. Mr. Rodriguez, you stated last time that there were guests at the house, frequent guests, friends from Harvard.

Do you remember that testimony?

The Great Pyramid is a 1:43,200 scale model of Earth in space and time

The distance the Earth spins at the equator in two seconds is equal to the perimeter of the Great Pyramid of Giza. Since there are 86,400 seconds in a day, two seconds is 1/43,200th of a day. Multiplying the height of the Great Pyramid by 43,200 equals the polar radius of Earth. Multiplying the perimeter of the Great Pyramid by 43,000 equals the equatorial circumference of Earth.

The Great Pyramid is a 1:43,200 scale model of the northern hemisphere of Earth and represents a 1:43,200 ratio of time in a day.

① The microorganism must be found in abundance in all organisms suffering from the disease, but should not be found in healthy organisms.

② The microorganism must be isolated from a diseased organism and grown in pure culture.

③ The cultured microorganism should cause disease when introduced into a healthy organism.

④ The microorganism must be reisolated from the inoculated, diseased experimental host and identified as being identical to the original specific causative agent.

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

On August 2, 1934, Hitler merged the offices of party leader, head of state, and chief of government into one, taking the title of Führer und Reichskanzler (Leader and Reich Chancellor), blurring the distinction between structures of party and state even further. Under Hitler's direct authority, the SS increasingly exerted police functions and the Sicherheitsdienst (SD) became the de-facto intelligence agency of Nazi Germany.

Why Jets Don't Make "Contrails"

Today, all large military and commercial jets use "High-Bypass Turbofan" engines. This engine is simply a prop (the "fan") within a metal can (the "duct"), so the engine is called a "ducted turbofan". Just like conventional prop engines, a spinning fan does not produce condensation trails. The engine used to turn the fan is a called a turbine, the same engine used in helicopters.

Turbines burn kerosene which does not produce sufficient water to create a vapor trail, not even close. This is why we don't see plumes at the airport, and we don't see plumes coming from helicopters. Altitude and temperature make no difference because there is not nearly enough water to make visible trails, even if the temperature is below freezing.

High-bypass turbofan engines simply do not produce contrails:

ENIGMATIC WORLD

THE MINDSET STILL REMAINS

While the political regimes of Nazism and Soviet Communism were either militarily dismantled or collapsed from their own failures, it is critically important to recognize that the most important component of these oppressive regimes continues largely unchallenged today – their mindset. The underlying ideologies of both of these religious cults, including Collectivism, Moral Relativism, Secularism, Materialism, Socialism and Authoritarianism, still dominate both the political landscape and the psychology of the overwhelming majority of human beings in our world TODAY. This is especially true in the psychology of young people, who, sadly, lack the proper historical and philosophical education to place the evils of these ideologies into an accurate moral framework.

And have not principled Jews like Norman Finkelstein suffered much at the hands of our elite oppressors, seeking to conceal the truth from us?
And is not Israel the creation of the Cecil Rhodes and Alfred Milner plot to control the world via an Anglo-American Empire?
Yea, tis true that Jews are involved in the conspiracy, but to say it is a Jewish conspiracy is naught but folly.

Rosenberg introduced Adolf Hitler to the document The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion in the early 1920s. Hitler referred to The Protocols in some of his early political speeches, and the document played an important part in the Nazis' propaganda campaign against Jews. Some schools in Nazi Germany used The Protocols as a tool to indoctrinate students into anti-Semitism. Rosenberg was also known for his rejection of and hatred for traditional Christianity, and played an important role in the development of the distorted Nazi version of Christianity. After World War II, Rosenberg was convicted of war crimes and crimes against humanity at the Nuremberg Trials in 1946. He was sentenced to death by hanging and executed on October 16, 1946.

The aim of the group was to coordinate the activities of the many small anti-Semitic organizations active at the time and to bring as many of these as possible under its banner. Martha's Vineyard

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

For other uses, see Martha's Vineyard (disambiguation).

Martha's Vineyard (Wampanoag: Noepe) is an island located south of Cape Cod in Massachusetts, known for being an affluent summer colony. It includes the smaller Chappaquiddick Island, which is usually connected to the larger island, though storms and hurricanes have been known to separate the two islands. The last such separation of the islands was in 2007, and as of April 2, 2015, the two islands are again connected.[1][2]

Often called just "The Vineyard",[3] the island has a land area of 100 square miles (260 km^2). It is the 58th largest island in the United States and the third largest on the East Coast of the United States, after Long Island and Mount Desert Island.

The island constitutes the bulk of Dukes County, Massachusetts. The county also includes the Elizabeth Islands as well as the island of Nomans Land.

The Vineyard was home to one of the earliest known deaf communities in the United States; consequently, a special sign language, Martha's Vineyard Sign Language (MVSL), developed on the island.[4]

The 2010 census reported a year-round population of 16,535 residents,[5] although the summer population can swell to more than

NAZI EUGENICS

At the center of Nazi ideology was their view of Eugenics, which sought the biological improvement of the German people through the policy of selective breeding of "Nordic" or "Aryan" genetic traits. These policies were used to justify the involuntary sterilization and mass-murder of those deemed "undesirable." In Germany, the concept of eugenics was mostly known under the term of Rassenhygiene or "racial hygiene." Racial competition, a significant concept of Social Darwinism, was one of the foundational ideologies that inspired the rise of Nazi eugenics.

ORDER OF THE BLACK SUN

A room called Die Gruft ("The Tomb" or "The Crypt") is located directly below the Obergruppenführersaal. Its shape resembles a Mycenaean dome grave. The Gruft was probably used as an SS occult ritual chamber. At its center was the incomplete construction of the housing of an "eternal flame," which would have represented the Nazi's so-called "Thousand Year Reich." In 1935, Heinrich Himmler formed the SS-Schule Haus Wewelsburg (SS School of the House of Wewelsberg) which would offer ideological training courses for SS leaders (Reichsführerschule SS). SS leaders would gather at Wewelsburg three to four times a year for planning meetings and SS initiation ceremonies arranged by Himmler. Toward the end of World War II, Himmler ordered that Wewelsburg should become the "Reichshaus of the SS-Gruppenführer" ("Reich House of the Highest SS Leaders"). Wewelsburg was planned by Himmler and Wiligut to be the future "Center of the World," the capital of the Nazi's "New Order," and to become a planning space and ritual center for the Order of the Black Sun, the occult elite within the Nazi SS.

THE TAVISTOCK INSTITUTE
& LENIN'S JOURNEY THROUGH EUROPE

Lenin and his compatriots were provided with a private rail car by high ranking members of the German government, which was always kept locked by agreements with stations along the line. Fritz Platten was in charge of the voyage and laid down the rules for the trip: Lenin's carriage was to remain locked for the entire trip. No one could board the carriage without Platten's permission. The train would have extra-territorial status. None of the car passengers were to be asked for their passports at national borders. All tickets would be bought at regular prices. And no "security issues" were to be raised by the military or police of any country en-route. Countries in complicity with the sealed-train affair were Great Britain, Germany, Finland (then part of the Russian Empire), Switzerland and Sweden.

Although the terms communist and socialist did not yet exist in Babeuf's time, they have both been used by later scholars to describe his ideas. He has been called "The First Revolutionary Communist." In his book Manifesto of Equals, Babeuf wrote: "The French Revolution was nothing but a precursor of another revolution, one that will be bigger, more solemn, and which will be the last."

THE GUN IS CIVILIZATION

"When I carry a gun, I don't do so because I am looking for a fight, but because I'm looking to be left alone. The gun at my side means that I cannot be forced, only persuaded. It doesn't limit the actions of those who would interact with me through reason, only the actions of those who would do so by force. It removes force from the equation – and that's why carrying a gun is a civilized act."

VÖLKISCH MOVEMENT

The common belief of all Völkisch Movement adherents was the idea of a "national rebirth," inspired by the traditions of the ancient Germans, which had been reconstructed on a romantic basis by the guiding occultists of the movement. The adjective völkisch is derived from the German word "volk," meaning "nation, race, tribe." While völkisch has no direct English equivalent, it could be loosely translated as "ethno-nationalist," or closer to its original meaning, as "bio-mystical racialist," emphasizing its occult foundations. According to historian Nicholas Goodrick-Clarke, the Völkisch Movement was not unified, but rather "a cauldron of beliefs, fears and hopes that found expression in various movements and were often articulated in an emotional tone."

WARNING

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS!

Tips to remember when dealing with police:

1. RECORD YOUR INTERACTION.

Cameras are your best defense against the police. If they know they are being recorded, they will be less tempted to violate your rights.

2. DO NOT TALK TO THE POLICE OR ANSWER QUESTIONS.

You are never required to talk to police. Anything you say to an officer can only be used to hurt you, never help you.

3. ASK "AM I BEING DETAINED?" IF YOU ARE NOT, LEAVE.

If you are not being detained, just walk away.

4. NEVER CONSENT TO SEARCHES.

An officer is never allowed to search you, or your property, without your consent unless he has a warrant or a "reasonable suspicion" of a crime. Even if the officer searches you, always be sure to make them aware you do not consent to the search.

5. BE POLITE, BUT FIRM.

These are your public servants. They are paid with your money to protect you. If you feel intimidated by the police, they are not doing their job correctly. But be polite, as police can often act irrationally if offended.

Police and federal agents are not your friends. When they talk with you, everything you say is being committed to their memory to be used against you in court, should they decide to arrest you for some arbitrary reason. Lying to them can also get you in significant trouble. This is why I frequently advise people that when they interact with government agents that the best thing they can do is always remain silent.

three years old when she met Epstein, anything that happened was between two consenting adults. I explained to her that she was not in any trouble however as part of this investigation, I needed to ask certain questions. Sjoberg stated that there were times that Epstein would ask her to perform during the massage. He would instruct her to rub his nipples as he masturbated himself. Sjoberg stated she felt "grossed" about the behavior but as she was getting paid, she just continued. Sjoberg also advised she would on occasion perform the massages naked. Epstein would on occasion, utilize the vibrator/massager on her vagina area when she performed the massages. Sjoberg explained that Epstein never exposed himself to her as he maintained himself covered under the towel he would be wearing. When Epstein would masturbate he would be covered.

I asked if Sjoberg ever received any gifts, or any gratuities from Epstein. Sjoberg advised aside from being paid well, she advised Epstein took care of her tuition from Palm Beach Atlantic College. She received a rental car for a week when her scooter broke down.

Additionally she received other gifts from Epstein. Epstein also recommended her to another client who resides at Breakers Row in Palm Beach. The client she was referred to was "Glenn" unknown last name, and his wife, who she provided a massages to. The statement was concluded and placed into evidence upon our return to the Palm Beach Police Department.

A review of the video disks which was extracted at the Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office Computer Crime Unit revealed that only one hidden camera was functional at the time. Several images of Epstein working at his office were seen. Additional footage of Sarah Kellen and Nadia Marcinkova was seen. There was other footage of females seen. The identity of the females is unknown at this time, until such time as I meet with certain females to show the video footage to confirm if, in fact, it is them on the video. At this time it appears that [redacted] and Haley Robson are seen sitting with Epstein beside his desk in the evening hours. Due to poor lighting, a direct confirmation cannot be made at this time.

THE KAISER WILHELM INSTITUTE

Josef Mengele

During World War II, the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute regularly received human body parts from Josef Mengele, the "Angel of Death" of the Auschwitz concentration camp, to use in studies intended to prove Nazi racial theories and justify race-related policies. After World War II, most of the thousands of files and lab material of the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute were moved to an unknown location or destroyed, and never obtained by the Allies to use as evidence in war crimes trials, and to prove that Nazi racial ideology had motivated mass genocide in Europe. Most of the staff of the Kaiser Wilhelm were able to escape trial, most notably Mengele, who escaped to Brazil, and died there in 1979.

In his most famous feat of alleged clairvoyance, Hanussen "predicted" the Reichstag Fire, the event that allowed Hitler to seize absolute power in 1933. This was most likely a very miscalculated use of inside information. Some researchers have claimed that Hanussen may have been directly involved in the Reichstag Fire by hypnotizing the convicted arsonist Marinus van der Lubbe to commit the act. Hanussen was subsequently assassinated by members of the SA on March 25, 1933. His body was found a month later, buried in a field on the outskirts of Berlin.

KARL SCHAPPER

In 1836, Schapper was deported from Switzerland for his political activities and went to Paris, where he joined the League of the Just. As a member of the League of the Just, Schapper helped forge links between German socialists and radical French communist groups of the 1830s and 1840s. In 1839, Schapper became involved in an unsuccessful insurrection in Paris by the revolutionary secret society, the Society of the Seasons, and was again imprisoned. In 1840, Schapper was expelled from France and went to London, where he established the Communist League in 1847. In the Communist League, Schapper helped pave the way from the utopian communism of Weitling to the materialist socialism of Marx and Engels. He was responsible for organizing the publication of Marx and Engels' Communist Manifesto in 1848. In 1864, Schapper was involved in founding of Karl Marx's communist organization First International in London, and was elected to its first governing body, the General Council, in 1865. Schapper died from tuberculosis in London on April 28, 1870.

LIGHT OCCULTISM VS. DARK OCCULTISM:
OCCULT KNOWLEDGE IS A DOUBLE-EDGED SWORD

The knowledge contained within the occult sciences can be used for good (the uplift of human consciousness) or evil (manipulation, control, slavery). To clearly distinguish between the different uses of this knowledge, I refer to occult knowledge that is employed toward the expansion of human consciousness and morality as "Light Occultism," and that which is used for manipulation, control, and the suppression of consciousness as "Dark Occultism." Practitioners of Light Occultism could be referred to as Light Occultists, Magicians, Light-Workers or De-Occultists, because they reveal and disseminate the hidden knowledge which must be known in order for human freedom to be manifested. Practitioners of Dark Occultism could be referred to as Dark Occultists, Sorcerers or Dark-Workers.

FORMER NASA CONTRACTOR PLEADS GUILTY TO USING HIS WORK COMPUTER TO POSSESS CHILD PORNOGRAPHY

Greenbelt, Maryland - Cecil M. Graham, age 67, of Laurel, Maryland, pleaded guilty today to possession of child pornography, announced United States Attorney for the District of Maryland Rod J. Rosenstein.

According to Graham's plea agreement, he worked as a contractor assigned to NASA, most recently as a Hubble Space Telescope Planning and Scheduling Manager. Investigation revealed that from May 2009 through at least January 2010, Graham used a NASA computer in his office to connect to websites depicting child pornography and to conduct internet searches for terms associated with child pornography. On April 15, 2010, search warrants were issued for Graham's office and his residence. Analysis of the computer material obtained from Graham's office revealed that he had been downloading child pornography and child erotica since at least August 5, 2000. Deleted images of child pornography were recovered from the computers in Graham's office as well as from a thumb drive and disks seized from Graham's home. Agents also recovered approximately 21 pages of printed digital images of minor females engaged in sexually explicit conduct. Graham possessed between 10 and 150 images of child pornography.

Graham faces a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison, followed by supervised release of at least five years and up to life. Chief U.S. District Judge Deborah K. Chasanow has scheduled sentencing for November 29, 2010 at 9:00 a.m.

This case was brought as part of Project Safe Childhood, a nationwide initiative to combat the growing epidemic of child sexual exploitation and abuse launched in May 2006 by the Department of Justice. Led by United States Attorneys' Offices and the Criminal Division's Child Exploitation and Obscenity Section (CEOS), Project Safe Childhood marshals federal, state and local resources to better locate, apprehend and prosecute individuals who exploit children via the internet, as well as to identify and rescue victims. For more information about Project Safe Childhood, please visit www.projectsafechildhood.gov. Details about Maryland's program are available at www.justice.gov/usao/md/Safe-Childhood/index.html.

United States Attorney Rod J. Rosenstein commended the NASA Office of Inspector General, Computer Crimes Division for their investigative work and thanked Assistant U.S. Attorneys Gina L. Simms and Arun Rao, who are prosecuting the case.

Arun Rao prosecuted the case of this Nasa Contractor from MD. There was no conviction. Additionally, he is nowhere to be found in the MD sex offender registry.

ANTONIO GRAMSCI

CULTURAL MARXISM & THE FRANKFURT SCHOOL

Classical Marxism had predicted that Socialist revolution was inevitable in capitalist societies. By the early 20th century, no such revolution had occurred in the most advanced nations. As capitalism seemed more entrenched than ever, Gramsci suggested that capitalism maintained control not just through violence and political and economic coercion, but also through ideology. Gramsci argued that the bourgeoisie had developed a hegemonic culture, which propagated its own values and norms so that they became the common values of the every-day person. People in the working class had come to identify their own good with the good of the bourgeoisie, and would even help to maintain the status quo rather than revolting against it.

Example: Communication

- Import anonymous sim cards (or download e-sims) from countries that don't require ID & use roaming.
- Setup a city-wide public wifi network like Freifunk or offer public wifi in your store.
- Run a Tor node to help people to access websites anonymously.
- Use Matrix and PGP for encrypted messaging and Tor for privacy.
- Proxy merchants: Register sim cards under a shell company & sell them anonymously.

THEOSOPHY & THE TEACHINGS OF HELENA PETROVNA BLAVATSKY

The concept of "Root Races" was meant to be understood in alignment with the Hermetic Principle of Rhythm, which explains that there is a cyclical quality or wave-like progression to time, which imparts lessons and influences consciousness to produce certain outcomes. Blavatsky taught that if humanity is unable to raise their aggregate consciousness to a high enough level of awareness during the recurrence of such wave cycles, they may experience "setbacks" in their evolutionary progression as a species in the form of semi-extinction-level events, or cataclysms, which necessitate a "reset" of humanity from a subsequent "Root Race."

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

In effect, the Enabling Act gave Hitler dictatorial powers. Now possessing virtually absolute power, the Nazis abolished labor unions, banned all other political parties, and began imprisoning their political opponents, first at improvised camps, then in concentration camps. The Law Against the Formation of Parties of July 14, 1933 legally established the Nazi Party's political monopoly in Germany.

"I Tried to Warn You about Sleazy Billionaire Jeffrey Epstein in 2003," Vicky Ward, January 6, 2015, Daily Beast Article (Emphasis added). Defendant would not answer many questions concerning her role with in the molestation of these girls while she was sharing a house with Maria Farmer and Jeffrey Epstein:

> Q. Do you know whether or not Maria Farmer was ever at Mr. Wexner's property in Ohio?
>
> Mr. PAGLIUCA: Can you tell me how that relates to this order, counselor?
>
> MR. BOIES: Yes, I think it goes directly to the sexual activity related to Maria Farmer and what Mr. Epstein was doing with Maria Farmer. Again, you can instruct not to answer.
>
> MR. PAGLIUCA: I'm trying to understand why you are asking these questions before I -
>
> MR. BOIES: I'm asking these questions because these are people who not only have been publicly written about in terms of the sexual activity that they were put into in connection with Mr. Epstein, but the person who wrote about them is someone who talked to the witness about it, and I think that this is more than easily understood cross-examination.
>
> MR. PAGLIUCA: Your question was, do you know whether or not Maria Farmer was ever at Mr. Wexner's property in Ohio.
>
> MR. BOIES: Yes. And if you let her answer, you will see where it leads. If you won't let her answer, the judge is going to determine it. And I just suggest to you that you stop these speeches and stop debating, because you are not going to convince me not to follow-up on these questions. If you can convince the court to truncate the deposition, that's your right, but all you're doing is dragging this deposition out.
>
> MR. PAGLIUCA: You have the opportunity to give me a good faith basis why you are asking these questions.
>
> MR. BOIES: I have given you a good faith basis.
>
> MR. PAGLIUCA: You haven't.

Found out what walnut sauce is. 2006 entry in urban slang dictionary online says walnut describes a female infants genitals, walnut sauce as excretions.

Same as with cheese, colloquially only used as homo slang for male smegma.

Chicken is only used as slang for young boys.

I took screens hots in case you look it up and it be gone.

By the way, honey fucking is only used to describe pederasty. Remember the Alefantis picture with him naked and pizza on his crotch? Wonder why the honey was there?

Oh wait. Pizza seems to be a code word to denote illicit merchandise. Code word used by stratfor. Online pizza orders as fronts for guns, kids, whatever.

Walnut

A term for an immature vulva, before the labia have developed. Term derives from the similar appearance of a little girl's pussy to an uncracked walnut.

"I'm a virgin! Don't split my little walnut!" "Too late. You're the main ingredient of this Waldorf salad I'm making."

PIZZA

After spending the afternoon enjoying any of the above activities with your YF, finish off your day together by taking him to a pizza restaurant. If there's a single thing we all know about boys, it's that every boy loves pizza.

No matter where you go with your YF, remember that just having him by your side is all that matters, since as every boylover knows, nothing is more enjoyable than spending time with the boy you love.

An even crazier theory for walnuts and walnut sauce is that they are linked to the Adrenal glands, because they look a lot like walnuts.
The victim is tortured so that they produce more adrenochrome in the adrenal glands, which are then harvested and consumed to create an intense high.
Also may be linked to blood consumption because the stress of torture would mean increased adrenaline in the blood, such that drinking fresh torture victim blood would also create a physiological response.
Still only a theory though, hard to know what it means.

Halley's Comet is slang for blowing a kidney stone with your load.

Ping Pong is queerspeak for giving it to someone, boy or girl, at both ends. You time your thrusts back and forth so you are playing ping pong with your victim.

Then you blow your load all over the victim (who is wearing a hankerchief as a jizzbib).

Afterwards, the victim is pretty much dead, so they have a spirit cooking party.

If you accidentally leave the wayward jizzbib on the kitchen island, no worries, your realtor scout cleaner will email you about it. She's got your back.

As for bones and whatnot, a bucket and some strong acid will get rid of that in like 48 hours. This is what "Making Risotto" refers to. Assange and Posesta got into it over twitter.

Podesta: "Still standing, making Risotto (as in, havent caught me yet, I'm still cooking them)

Assange: "elites eat better than their peasants" (as in that's because you're eating them)

MAIN TENETS OF SATANISM

4. EUGENICS

The word eugenics is derived from the Greek adjective εὐγενής, meaning "well-born," (from the Greek adjective εὖ, meaning "good," and the Greek noun γένος, meaning "race, stock"). Eugenics is a social ideology that promotes higher rates of sexual reproduction for people with traits and characteristics desired by its proponents, and reduced rates of sexual reproduction or sterilization for those with undesired traits and characteristics. This tenet describes the ideology of Satanism taken to its ultimate conclusion: "Since Mankind is God, and gets to make up what Right and Wrong are, and since it is simply the 'Natural Order' for the most ruthless of humans, whose genes are the 'fittest,' to rule the rest of the human herd, then that 'elite class' of human beings has every right to decide who is allowed to live and procreate, and who must die."

It's not "left vs. right."
It's the State vs. you.

ALFRED ROSENBERG

Rosenberg introduced Adolf Hitler to the document The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion in the early 1920s. Hitler referred to The Protocols in some of his early political speeches, and the document played an important part in the Nazis' propaganda campaign against Jews. Some schools in Nazi Germany used The Protocols as a tool to indoctrinate students into anti-Semitism. Rosenberg was also known for his rejection of and hatred for traditional Christianity, and played an important role in the development of the distorted Nazi version of Christianity. After World War II, Rosenberg was convicted of war crimes and crimes against humanity at the Nuremberg Trials in 1946. He was sentenced to death by hanging and executed on October 16, 1946.

On 1-19-96 at 1030 hours, Detectives HARRIS and KENNELL attended the autopsy of Mr. SCHNEIDER at the State Medical Examiner's Office. The autopsy was performed by Deputy State Medical Examiner, KAREN GUNSON. Also present at the autopsy were Clackamas County Deputy Medical Examiner, JEFF MCLENNAN and Deputy CREBS of the Clackamas County Sheriff's Office Identification Section.

Attached around Mr. SCHNEIDER's neck was a piece of surgical tubing. The tubing was wrapped around his neck two times, then tied in the front. The knot was directly under Mr. SCHNEIDER's chin. It was what appeared to be a half knot. One end of the tubing was wrapped around the continuing tube one time in order to secure it in place. Deputy CREBS photographed the tubing prior to its removal.

Dr. GUNSON pointed out that there were no injuries on the exterior of the neck that would have been commonly associated

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

In 1770, Weishaupt was chosen by international banker Meyer Amschel Rothschild to develop an organization that could be used for political revolution to weaken Great Britain. In 1773, Weishaupt began focusing on establishing this revolutionary organization.
To confuse his detractors, he based the organizational structure on the one used by the Jesuits. However, his intention was to have a secret coalition of liberalism. Additionally, Weishaupt wanted to use the Illuminati to replace Christianity with what he called "a religion of reason," to strive for the "perfection of morals," and "make of the human race, one good and happy family." Prior to its official founding on May 1, 1776, the original name of the Order was Bund der Perfektibilisten (League of Perfectibilists, League of Perfectionists). Their original symbol was a shield similar to the Jesuit shield, but they replaced the Jesuit phrase "Extension of the Kingdom of God" with the words "Perfection of Man." Weishaupt soon changed the name to Illuminatenorden (Order of the Illuminati). The symbol of the Order became the primordial archetype and Freemasonic Symbol of the Sun, a circle with a dot in the center, a rudimentary representation of the "All-Seeing Eye" which eventually became associated with the Illuminati.

RUDOLF VON SEBOTTENDORF & THE THULE SOCIETY

In January 1933, Sebottendorf published Before Hitler Came: Documents from the Early Days of the National Socialist Movement, a collection of writings dealing with the Thule Society and the early days of the German Workers' Party. Hitler disliked this book, which was subsequently banned under the Nazi regime. Sebottendorf was arrested by the Nazis, but somehow was able to escape Germany and flee to Turkey, presumably due to a friendship from his days in Munich. It is believed by some researchers that Sebottendorf committed suicide by jumping into the Bosphorus Strait near Istanbul, Turkey on May 8, 1945.

A. The [redacted] Account

Ms. Giuffre has knowledge of the [redacted] account because it was listed as part of Defendant's contact information (including phone number) on documents gathered by the police from Epstein's home, and turned over to the Palm Beach County State Attorney as part of the investigation and prosecution of Epstein.

Ms. Ghislaine Maxwell Email [redacted]

See (DE 280-2), Palm Beach County State Attorney's Office, Public Records Request No.: 16-268, Disc 7 at p. 2305 (GIUFFRE007843). Despite the fact that this account was listed as her contact information in the home she shared with Epstein, and despite the fact that the username bears her initials, Defendant claims she does not recognize the account, and has no access to it.

B. The [redacted] Account

The mindspring account is also listed as part of Defendant's contact information gathered by the police. In her filing with this Court, Defendant represented that this was merely a "spam" account "to use when registering for retail sales notifications and the like," and that it contains no relevant documents. (DE 345 at pg. 8). However, it appears that Jeffrey Epstein created the mindspring.org accounts to communicate with his household and with his employees, and did, in fact, communicate with them this way.

As previously recounted, Jeffrey Epstein's house manager, Juan Alessi testified that MindSpring account was in daily use by the Epstein household to send and receive messages, a household to which Defendant belonged:

> Q. So when there would be a message from one of them while they were out of town, they would call you, call you on the telephone?
> A. I haven't spoken to Ghislaine in 12 years.

To stand as a lawful rebuttal of any and all presumptions that attempt to alienate, abridge, impair, and violate the intrinsic rights of the mother, father, and daughter that constitute family order and reserve all their rights respectively.

COMMUNISTS BECOMING "GOD":

THE SOCIALIST "NEW ORDER" OF MASTERS AND SLAVES

The Soviet Union kept complete control over their people. Even the very thoughts of the populace were kept tightly in check. Soviet laws were unimaginably strict. Soviet psychologists literally classified people who were unhappy living under the Soviet regime as insane. Anyone who was expressing desires for "freedom" or "justice" were diagnosed as having "sluggish schizophrenia." Symptoms listed in Soviet psychology books included "reform delusions," or "struggling for truth." Thousands of people were sent to mental hospitals for suggesting that Soviet society could be better, and hundreds of psychologists worked on teams dedicated to diagnosing dissidents with schizophrenia. The Soviets created a policy of militant atheism and wanted to systematically stamp out religion wherever it could be found. Atheism was promoted as "scientific truth," and churches were torn down. In their place, the Soviets built Museums of Atheism.

Violent crime prosecution priorities in Greenbelt include using federal racketeering, conspiracy and firearms statutes to disrupt violent gangs and reduce gang activity. The scope of these gang prosecutions ranges from local to national and international. In Prince George's County, the Greenbelt office works with federal agencies, local prosecutors, and state and local police to implement Maryland EXILE. The office also prosecutes violent crime offenses, including homicides, arising on exclusive federal enclaves.

Southern Division narcotics cases frequently involve multiple federal and local law enforcement agencies and task forces. Using undercover agents, confidential informants, consensual and Title III wiretaps, multiple-location searches and a host of other law enforcement techniques, narcotics investigations in Greenbelt have resulted in the successful prosecutions of high-level cocaine traffickers from Columbia and Guatemala, heroin traffickers from Nigeria and Pakistan, marijuana traffickers from Jamaica, and individuals throughout the United States who participated in conspiracies involving these drugs, ecstacy, methamphetamine, and other controlled substances, or facilitated conspiracies by laundering drug proceeds. In narcotics and violent crime investigations and prosecutions, the Southern Division coordinates with the United States Attorney's Offices for the District of Columbia and the Eastern District of Virginia in cases where criminal conduct crosses jurisdictional lines.

Greenbelt prosecutors also investigate and prosecute significant public corruption and fraud cases. Public corruption cases involve state and local government officials and employees of the many federal agencies located in the Southern Division. Fraud cases range from complex corporate fraud cases involving corporations on the I-270 technology corridor to investment and mortgage fraud schemes that target immigrants, the elderly and other vulnerable victims.

Like the Major Crimes Section in Baltimore, the Greenbelt office prosecutes a wide array of other federal offenses, including child pornography, bank robberies, immigration violations, and counterfeiting.

The Southern Division office also handles thousands of misdemeanor cases that occur on areas of exclusive federal jurisdiction such as the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, the National Institutes of Health, and military bases.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Arun Rao supervises the Southern Division with assistance from his deputies, Assistant U.S. Attorneys Kristi N. O'Malley and Bryan E. Foreman. They can be reached by calling (301) 344-4433.

A guy named ARUN RAO was caught liking a bunch of James Alefantis's creepy toddler insta posts.

Guess what area Arun Rao's actual job is?
ASSISTANT US ATTORNEY, DOJ
Supervisor of the Southern Division office for the DOJ's DISTRICT OF MARYLAND.

Comet Pizza is technically in Washington DC, but is practically on the border of Chevy Chase, Maryland, which is Rao's jurisdiction. (tunnels anyone?)

GUESS WHAT SORT OF CRIMES HIS OFFICE IS RESPONSIBLE FOR PROSECUTING

Comet Pizza is adjacent to Rao's jurisdiction, and Rao is the chief executive of an office which is responsible for investigating and prosecuting child pornography cases.

HOUSTON STEWART CHAMBERLAIN: ARYANISM, GOTTMENSCHEN & UNTERMENSCHEN

Untermenschen ("Sub-humans") was the term within the ideology of Aryanism for non-Aryan people who were deemed as racially and genetically inferior. The Untermenschen were often referred to as "the masses from the East," including Jews, Romani, Slavs, Poles, Ukrainians, Serbs, Russians, and those of African descent. During the Nazi regime, these people were scheduled either to become slaves of the Nazis, or to be exterminated. According to the Generalplan Ost, the "Master Plan for the East," the Slavic population of Central and Eastern Europe was to be reduced through mass murder, with a majority of them expelled to Asia and used as slave labor for the Third Reich.

SATANISM & THE DARK OCCULT

Satanism is an ancient occult religion, comprised of diverse, interconnected networks of world-wide adherents. At its ideological core, this religion postulates that knowledge of the human psyche and knowledge of the laws of the universe should be occulted and held only by a few human beings. It is much more accurate to perceive Satanists (and Dark Occultists in general) as ancient psychologists and social engineers, who hold and wield hidden information in ways which exploit those who remain ignorant of it.

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

The Blutfahne, or Blood Flag, was the flag that was carried during the failed November Beer Hall Putsch of 1923, during which it became soaked in the blood of a fallen member of the Sturmabteilung. When the Munich police fired on the Nazis, the flag bearer Heinrich Trambauer was hit and dropped the flag. Andreas Bauriedl, member of the SA, who was marching alongside the flag, was killed and fell onto it, staining the flag with his blood. The Blood Flag subsequently became one of the most revered objects of the Nazi Party and an object of pseudo-religious ritual. All new Nazi flags needed to be "consecrated" in a ritualized manner by being touched to the Blood Flag.

Very weird question. This software is open source. You can download source code and analyze it. The software is not collecting any of your data, it is absolutely clear and easy to understand. Your review is totally useless. If you want to know the developer... then just do a whois on developer's web site and get its (my) home address and phone number. PHILIPPE BUONARROTI

In 1789, Buonarroti visited Paris and met with Maximilien Robespierre. He was soon brought into the midst of Robespierre's French revolutionary government. With the fall of Robespierre's government after the Thermidor coup d'état of 1794, Buonarroti lost political support in Paris, and was imprisoned in March 1795. While in prison he met Gracchus Babeuf, another ambitious radical. Upon their release in October 1795, they formed a secret society called the Society of the Pantheon. When the Society was suppressed by French police in February 1796, its most committed members formed a revolutionary secret society, the Conspiracy of Equals.

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

Women were also enlisted into the Illuminati. Weishaupt wrote: "There is no way of influencing men so powerful, as by means of women. [Women] should therefore be our chief study. We should insinuate ourselves into their good opinion, give them hints of emancipation from the tyranny of public opinion, and of standing up for themselves. This sex has a large part of the world in their hands." Female members were divided into two groups: one group of "society women," to give the organization an air of respectability, and the other group, described by Weishaupt as those "who would help to satisfy those brothers who have a penchant for pleasure." The Illuminati used monetary and sex bribery to gain control of men in high places, then blackmailed them with the threat of public exposure and financial ruin.

ARIOSOPHY, THEOZOOLOGY, ORDO NOVI TEMPLI & OSTARA

Jörg Lanz von Liebenfels (July 19, 1874 – April 22, 1954) was an Austrian occultist, political theorist, and pioneer of the occult ideologies of Ariosophy and Theozoology. He was a former monk of the Catholic Cistercian Order, and the founder of the magazine Ostara, in which he published anti-Semitic and völkisch theories. On Christmas of the year 1900, he founded the occult secret society Ordo Novi Templi (Order of the New Templars) – an occult order dedicated to bringing fascist extremists together and mobilizing them in favor of National Socialism in Germany.

ULTIMATE JOURNEY

Now, for the last 6 months, Haiti is in the midst of new Presidential elections & the ensuing chaos appears that it could only be instigated from outside Haiti, albeit with plenty of willing allies in the Haitian elite (racism is so complex in this country). In her role as Secretary of State, Hillary Clinton ensured Martelly won the rigged elections in 2010. Though little attention has been given to her email scandal with huge gaps around correspondence in Haiti. Now, we are seeing the same thing with Martelly's successor. No one new who he was a year ago. The 2015 (now 2016) Haitian election appear to be fully orchestrated by the US, and presumably the Clintons are playing a big role.

But the real significance of this scandal for me, I know you feel me Bella, is the link to contemporary slavery and trafficking. I can't say to what extent, but there is human trafficking happening through the Clinton's Caraol Complex. And mining has always been historically linked to trafficking, slavery, and labor exploitation. I'd like to go see for myself who's laboring at Morne Bossa, but I would hypothesize that the Dominicans are doing the contractual oversight of the mining, while marginalized Haitians are being exploited for low or no cost labor in dangerous mining conditions.

*That's two huge human trafficking scandals, an

MAIN TENETS OF SATANISM

1. EGOTISM

Egotism is the first tenet of Satanism, expressed through the dictum: "Self-preservation is the highest law," or in other words: "The survival and comfort of the physical self is always a more important goal than doing what is morally right. Live for yourself only, and only care about you and yours. If you must step on others to get what you want, then so be it, for this is a dog-eat-dog world." The mindset that clearly defines the over-arching worldview of Satanism is perpetual me, me, me thinking.

Rewriting History 101 with James Alefantis

Interview with Guy Fiery 14. april 2015

ALEFANTIS: Well, we make everything from scratch. Other restaurants, even good restaurants, will, like, not roast their own peppers. You can just buy the roasted peppers in a can. Or you can buy garlic oil. Some products you can get, and they're consistent and they're easy. But I didn't even know that existed actually until they said that. I was like, "What do you mean? There's another way? You can just buy these things?" Because a lot of restaurants will open a can and put it on. Like our sauce — we harvest a whole crop of organic tomatoes — 10 tons of tomatoes every year. Can them all, store them in the basement, have like a harvest party when it gets loaded in.

Interview with BBC 1. december 2016

"They ignore basic truths," Alefantis tells BBC Trending. For instance, the conspiracy supposedly is run out of the restaurant's basement. "We don't even have a basement."

"I have never believed that additional gun control or federal registration of guns would reduce crime," Biden said on the floor of the Senate in July 1985. "I am convinced that a criminal who wants a firearm can get one through illegal, untraceable, unregistered sources, with or without gun control."

ORDER OF THE BLACK SUN

The Black Sun symbol was formed by 12 Armanen Sig Runes (the same Rune chosen to represent the SS) arrayed in a circular pattern to represent the 12 Houses of the Zodiac surrounding a central disc, representing the "Black Sun" Santur, at the center. The Black Sun symbol is a stylized Sonnenrad, or Sun Wheel. Wiligut designed this variation of the Black Sun disc, and Himmler ordered it to be built into the marble floor of the Obergruppenführersaal (Hall of the Highest Leaders) of Wewelsberg castle. The Obergruppenführersaal is a circular room inside the castle's north tower, with 12 columns and 12 windows. In the middle of the room's light gray marble floor there is a dark green marble inlay of the Black Sun symbol, with each of its 12 spokes pointing to each of the 12 columns in the hall. Originally, there was a golden disc in the center of the ornament, most likely representing the Black Sun's power source, the Vril. The number 12, in addition to representing the Houses of the Zodiac, may also be a reference to the Order of Teutonic Knights, after whom the SS was patterned by Himmler, which also had a "mystical inner order," comprised of 12 "elite" Knights.

Yeah... that's how it'll work.

COMMUNIST LEAGUE

In November and December 1847, the Communist League held a congress in London. Both Marx and Engels attended, and they were assigned the task of composing a political manifesto for the organization. This became The Communist Manifesto. In 1850, a German spy, Wilhelm Stieber, stole the Communist League's register of members and sent it to France and several German states, bringing about the imprisonment of several of its members. From October 4 to November 12, 1852, the Prussian government conducted the Cologne Communist Trial against eleven members of the Communist League who were suspected of having participated in the 1848 uprisings, a series of protests and rebellions in the states of the German Confederation and Austrian Empire. Seven of the eleven members tried were sentenced to prison terms of up to six years. Following the Cologne Communist Trial, the Communist League was formally disbanded in November 1852.

LAW OF THE LAND

The general misconception is that any statute passed by legislators bearing the appearance of law constitutes the law of the land. The U. S. Constitution is the supreme law of the land, and any statute, to be valid, must be in agreement. It is impossible for a law which violates the Constitution to be valid. This is succinctly stated as follows:

"All laws which are repugnant to the Constitution are null and void." Marbury vs. Madison, 5 US (2 Cranch) 137, 174, 176, (1803)

"Where [illegible] by the Constitution are inv[illegible] be no rule making or legisl[illegible] abrogate them." Miran[illegible] US 436 p. 491.

c. The EarthLink account

The second account, [redacted], is, as Ms. Maxwell has repeatedly explained to Plaintiff's counsel, an account that she does not recognize, that she does not recall having ever logged onto, and for which she has no password. See DE 320. Ms. Maxwell tried every avenue available online through EarthLink to reset the password or otherwise access the account. In fact, when one attempts to recover a password for that account, the system states "The email address you entered is not an EarthLink email address or ID." According to Plaintiff, such a message means the account has been permanently deleted by the host company. Plaintiff's counsel, Meredith Shultz, wrote on May 17, 2016, regarding an account of Plaintiff's (that she claims she cannot access but for which relevant and responsive emails were located on her computer):

> "Regarding her live.com address, it appears that the account has been permanently deleted by the host Company. One method of telling if an account still exists for live.com (and for most web mail systems) is to perform an account password recovery. When you enter the e-mail address and enter the captca code and hit Next, the website states that it does not recognize the email address. This means that the account has been permanently deleted from live.com's system."

Menninger Decl., Ex. A.

Plaintiff does not, and cannot, explain why she thinks that her own live.com email address has been permanently deleted by the host company, yet based on the exact same set of data, she thinks that an email account that Ms. Maxwell does not recall ever using (and from which no documents exist on her devices) from Earthlink still remains on its system. If there is some way to access the account, Plaintiff hasn't said what it is. Ms. Maxwell simply has no way to access this account and has no information, save Plaintiff's rank speculation.[2]

---

[2] Plaintiff has an account from which actual documents have been produced – proving she did use the account (unlike Ms. Maxwell's EarthLink account) and it contains relevant information. Yet Plaintiff claims she

THE GESTAPO
THE NAZI'S SECRET POLICE FORCE

The Gestapo (Geheime Staatspolizei, "Secret State Police") was the official secret police force of Nazi Germany. The Gestapo was created by Hermann Göring in 1933 by combining the various political police agencies of Prussia into one organization. On April 20, 1934, oversight of the Gestapo passed to the head of the Schutzstaffel (SS), Heinrich Himmler, who was also appointed Chief of German Police by Adolf Hitler in 1936.

I don't care how messed up the world is

I am not giving up hope

HEINRICH HIMMLER
SS, AHNENERBE & TOTENKOPF

In 1935, Himmler and leading "Blood and Soil" ideologist, Richard Walther Darré founded an archaeological research and expedition society called the Ahnenerbe, which was dedicated to proving the genetic superiority and ancient origins of the Germanic race. Himmler regarded the Ahnenerbe as "an elite think tank" which would sweep away previous scholarship on the development of humanity and reveal that Hitler's ideas on the subject were true. Himmler also believed that the Ahnenerbe's investigations might reveal ancient secrets about agriculture, medicine, and warfare which would benefit Nazi Germany. It employed scholars from a wide range of academic fields, including archaeology, anthropology, ethnology, history, biology, zoology, botany, astronomy, medicine and more. The Ahnenerbe formed the basis for the depiction in the Indiana Jones franchise of Nazis searching for religious artifacts.

SABBATEAN FRANKISM

Jacob Frank

Sabbatean Frankism was a heretical Jewish religious movement of the 18th and 19th centuries, centered on the leadership of the Jewish Messiah claimant Jacob Frank. Frank rejected traditional religious norms, and taught that his followers were obligated to transgress as many moral boundaries as possible. Sabbatean Frankism is has roots in the Sabbatean sect of Turkey, a religious movement that identified the 17th-century Jewish rabbi Sabbatai Zevi as the Jewish Messiah (world savior). Zevi's teachings can be summarized by the maxim: "What is holy is unholy, and what is unholy is holy." Unlike traditional Judaism, which asserts that cumulative acts of righteousness will eventually bring the coming of the Messiah, the Sabbatean interpretation inverted the traditionalist Jewish view to support the opposite conclusion, postulating that it would be easier to accelerate the flow of chaos to utterly destroy civilization than to perfect it, and once the world is forced into complete ruin, God would be forced to start the Messianic Age to save it.

One proposed solution to the problem of global warming involves the seeding of the atmosphere with metallic particles. One technique proposed to seed the metallic particles was to add the tiny particles to the fuel of jet airliners, so that the particles would be emitted from the jet engine exhaust while the airliner was at its cruising altitude. While this method would increase the reflection of visible light incident from space, the metallic particles would trap the long wavelength blackbody radiation released from the earth. This could result in net increase in global warming.

ANTI-CHRIST

My personal concept of an Anti-Christ is a being who is responsible for the spread of false and harmful (if acted upon) information across a significant portion of the human population, and the subsequent ubiquitous spread of that deceptive information throughout the majority of humanity. The resultant behavior conducted by the population leads human society into chaos and degradation, and away from the collective evolution of humanity through the attainment of higher consciousness (often referred to as "Christ Consciousness"). Deceivers of this kind do not even necessarily do this with conscious intention, although many do. Some Anti-Christs are "useful dupes," tasked with the charge of being the messenger or pen-man, so that the true architects of evil remain hidden, or occulted.

CHINESE COMMUNISM

The Chinese Communist Party (CCP) is the founding party and sole ruling party of the People's Republic of China. It was founded on July 1, 1921 by Chen Duxiu and Li Dazhao with the help of the Far Eastern Bureau of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and Far Eastern Bureau of Communist International. Both Marxism and the Bolshevik Revolution heavily inspired the CCP. Chen Duxiu and Li Dazhao were among the first Chinese intellectuals to publicly support Leninism and the idea of a Socialist world revolution. Both regarded the Bolshevik Revolution in Russia as a ground-breaking event, believing it to herald a "new era" for the world. Chen Duxiu served as the first General Secretary of the CCP from 1921 to 1928, and was referred to as "China's Lenin."

passports for young girls to "work" as models. He would bring young girls (ranging to ages as young as twelve) to the United States for sexual purposes and farm them out to his friends, especially Epstein. Brunel would offer the girls "modeling" jobs. Many of the girls came from poor countries or impoverished backgrounds, and he lured them in with a promise of making good money. Epstein forced Jane Doe #3 to observe him, Brunel and Maxwell engage in illegal sexual acts with dozens of underage girls. Epstein also forced Jane Doe #3 to have sex with Brunel on numerous occasions, at places including Epstein's mansion in West Palm Beach, Little St. James Island in the U.S. Virgin Islands (many including orgies that were comprised of other underage girls), New York City, New Mexico, Paris, the south of France, and California.

Epstein also trafficked Jane Doe #3 for sexual purposes to many other powerful men, including numerous prominent American politicians, powerful business executives, foreign presidents, a well-known Prime Minister, and other world leaders. Epstein required Jane Doe #3 to describe the events that she had with these men so that he could potentially blackmail them.

The Government was well aware of Jane Doe #3 when it was negotiating the NPA, as it listed her as a victim in the attachment to the NPA. Moreover, even a rudimentary investigation of Jane Doe #3's relationship to Epstein would have revealed the fact that she had been trafficked throughout the United States and internationally for sexual purposes. Nonetheless, the Government secretly negotiated a non-prosecution agreement with Epstein precluding any Federal prosecution in the Southern District of Florida of Epstein and his co-conspirators. As with Jane Doe #1, and Jane Doe #2, the Government concealed the non-prosecution agreement from Jane Doe #3 – all in violation of her rights under the CVRA – to avoid Jane Doe #3 from raising powerful objections to the NPA that would have shed tremendous public light on Epstein

3) A new subprogram called `PSIKICK`, inside `UAVMC` described below, based on the major national defense vulnerabilities (of the United States of America and every other nation) created by these "Advanced Aerospace Vehicles" (AAVs) discovered by AAWSAP/AATIP and listed in Figure 1, i.e., slide 9 from the Christopher Mellon leak of the Congressional Briefing Package from TTSA.

AAVs have interfered with and outright disabled nuclear launch systems on numerous occasions. Captain Robert Salas, a former Minuteman missile-launch officer at Malmstrom AFB, held a press conference at the National Press Club in 2010 to address this issue, collecting more than 100 (one hundred) military eyewitness testimonies indicating AAV interference at United States' nuclear sites as recently as 2003. The event received global mainstream media coverage.

RESEARCH BASED ON AAWSAP/AATIP FINDINGS

As part of their investigations, AAWSAP/AATIP issued at least 38 research contracts in a variety of cutting-edge fields, including a to be released 490+ page report that DIA FOIA Officer Anthony Kenon provided mention of existence of in a personal communication to Geometric Energy Corporation. The Secret Underground World Of Washington D.C.

Ever wondered what's below Dupont Circle? The remains of a Pizza Express, for starters. Plus 75,000 square feet of solid silence.

To get rid of its post-war congestion,Washington D.C. moved the traffic of Connecticut Avenue below the surface in 1949, including streetcars, for which they constructed two stations connected by 4,000 feet of tunnels made of thick reinforced concrete.

Despite the massive amount of work put into it, the underground party only lasted for 13 years, and since its closure in 1962, Washington has no idea what to do with its hidden space apart from sealing it off to the public. At least not until now.

The last time D.C. residents could walk down below Dupont Circle was in 1995, when Pizza Express tried not to get lost in the dark.

"At political events, there's an inevitable awkwardness," former Clinton administration official Sally Katzen said at a Women's Campaign Fund dinner at the Podestas' home this summer. "The art is an ice-breaker. It puts people at ease."

Heather and Tony Podesta in their Falls Church home with Louise Bourgeois' "The Arch of Hysteria." (Robert A. Reeder -- The Washington Post)

Not always. Folks attending a house tour in the Lake Barcroft neighborhood in Falls Church earlier this year got an eyeful when they walked into a bedroom at the Podesta residence hung with multiple color pictures by Katy Grannan, a photographer known for documentary-style pictures of naked teenagers in their parents' suburban homes.

"They were horrified," Heather recalls, a grin spreading across her face.

The individual in question is one Laura Silsby, former director of The New Life Children's Refuge. She was caught trying to steal 33 children from the country, most of whom were not even orphans and had families.

Hillary has a LONG history of interest in Ms. Silsby. Wikileak emails dating back till at least 2001 have been found in her archives discussing Laura's NGO. Laura had claimed she planned to build an orphanage in the Dominican Republic, but authorities in the country said she never submitted an application for this purpose. They instead located to Haiti.

Sources:

1. https://wikileaks.org/plusd/cables/10BUENOSAIRES166_a.html
2. https://wikileaks.org/clinton-emails/emailid/3465

Huma Abedin was constantly forwarding Hillary articles on this woman's organization:

https://wikileaks.org/clinton-emails/emailid/2772

One of the first things Hillary did when she took over the scene in Haiti was to get Laura off the hook:

http://harvardhrj.com/wp-content/uploads/2009/09/King.pdf

And the attorney who represented Laura Silsby? A man who was himself convicted as a sex trafficker:

https://wikileaks.org/gifiles/docs/32/323249_-os-haiti-us-legal-adviser-to-u-s-haiti-missionaries.html

Even more disturbing, we uncovered an email in Wikileaks where they are literally pricing how much it costs to transport children:

https://wikileaks.org/clinton-emails/emailid/3741

Again, this was the same group that got busted by Haitian Authorities trying to Traffic kids.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/New_Life_Children%27s_Refuge_case

They're in the Clinton Emails;

https://wikileaks.org/clinton-emails/emailid/3741

Pitch for funding or some shit, super sketchy.

This looks like Mills & co are drafting statements following extradition.

Ladies it's time to start thinking about if the guy you're dating has post apocalyptic warlord potential

Meet Gary Webb

In 1996, Gary exposed how the CIA hired drug traffickers, to sell massive amounts of cocaine in the United States, in order to raise untraceable funds to finance a terrorist organization who were trying to overthrow the Nicaraguan government. These massive shipments of cocaine ultimately sparked the crack epidemic that decimated inner cities during the 90's. As a result Mainstream media vilified Gary Webb & destroyed his career which also destroyed his marriage. But he refused to back down. In 2004 he was found dead with 2 bullet wounds to his head. His death was ruled a suicide.

This man literally lost everything to give us a glimpse of the truth. Don't let his memory or what he stood for fade.

CARBONARI

Some of the most famous revolutionaries of the time were members of the Carbonari. Phillipe Buonarroti, organizer of several revolutionary secret societies, had close connections with the Carbonari during his years in Swiss exile, and made use of his Carbonari connections in recruiting for his primary secret society, the Sublime Perfect Masters.

COMMUNIST LEAGUE

The Communist League, widely regarded as the first Marxist political party, was established on June 1, 1847 in London, England. The organization was formed through the merger of the League of the Just, headed by Karl Schapper, and the Communist Correspondence Committee of Brussels, Belgium, in which Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels were the dominant personalities. In January 1847, disparate parts of the German Communist movement began to congeal into a single organizational entity when members of the League of the Just suggested the idea of unity with the Communist Correspondence Committee. On January 20, 1847, Karl Schapper requested that Karl Marx join the League of the Just. Both Marx and Engels joined the League of the Just shortly thereafter, followed by other members of the Communist Correspondence Committee.

Red Flag of the Communist League

ANTHROPOSOPHY & THE TEACHINGS OF RUDOLF STEINER

Anthroposophy (from the Greek nouns ἄνθρωπος [anthropos]: "human" and σοφός [sophos]: "wisdom," thus "Wisdom of Humanity") is a body of spiritual teaching developed in the early 20th century by Austrian occultist Rudolf Steiner. Anthroposophy postulates the existence of an objective and intellectually comprehensible spiritual reality which is accessible to human experience. Through anthroposophy, an individual grows spiritually by applying their abilities to develop clear thinking and truthful perception of the world. It is seen by its adherents as a path to higher moral conduct, eventually leading to higher insight into the workings of the spiritual realm.

ANTI-CHRIST

My personal concept of an Anti-Christ is a being who is responsible for the spread of false and harmful (if acted upon) information across a significant portion of the human population, and the subsequent ubiquitous spread of that deceptive information throughout the majority of humanity. The resultant behavior conducted by the population leads human society into chaos and degradation, and away from the collective evolution of humanity through the attainment of higher consciousness (often referred to as "Christ Consciousness"). Deceivers of this kind do not even necessarily do this with conscious intention, although many do. Some Anti-Christs are "useful dupes," tasked with the charge of being the messenger or pen-man, so that the true architects of evil remain hidden, or occulted.

JACOBIN CLUB

The Jacobin Club included both French parliamentary factions: the Mountain and the Girondins. The Girondins had overthrown King Louis XVI and set up the French First Republic. In May 1793, leaders of the Mountain faction, led by Maximilien Robespierre, succeeded in sidelining the Girondin faction and controlled the government until July 1794. Robespierre, whose political views were rooted in the notion of "the social contract," was viewed as the political force of the Jacobin Movement. The Jacobins' time in government featured high levels of political violence, resulting in the execution of 17,000 political opponents nationwide. For this reason, the period of the Jacobin government of France is identified as the Reign of Terror. The Jacobins' Reign of Terror was instituted as a means of combating those they perceived as enemies within.

Virginia L. Giuffre,

Plaintiff, Case No.: 15-cv-07433-RWS

v.

Ghislaine Maxwell,

Defendant.

AFFIDAVIT

I, Sarah Ransome, swear and affirm as follows:

1. I am currently over the age of 18 and presently reside in the country of Spain.

2. In the summer of 2006, when I was twenty-two years old and living in New York, I was introduced to Jeffrey Epstein by a girl I had met named Natalya. Malyshov. Shortly after meeting Jeffrey he invited me to fly to his private island in the US Virgin Islands, which I did. After that first trip I traveled to the island several more times, usually on one of Jeffrey's private airplanes, and always at his direction. I am told that my name appears on the flight logs of one or more of those trips. On a few occasions, Jeffrey also arranged to have me flown to the island on commercial flights. As it turned out, the primary purpose of those visits was to have me have sexual relations with Jeffrey, Nadia Macinkova, and various other girls and guests he brought to the island.

3. During one of my visits to the island I met Ghislaine Maxwell. Watching her interact with the other girls on the island, it became clear to me that she recruited all or many of them to the island. Once they were there, she appeared to be in charge of their activities, including what they did, who they did it with, and how they were supposed to stay in line. She assumed the same supervisory role with me as soon as I arrived. Some of the girls appeared to be 18 or older, but many appeared to be young teenagers. I recall seeing a particularly young, thin girl who looked well under 18 and recall asking her her age. I later learned was a ballerina. She refused to tell me or let me see her passport.

4. In addition to spending time with Jeffrey on his island, I spent time with him in New York City. At his town house I was also lent out by him to his friends and radioactive material was found. The Atomic Energy Commission and other government agencies have a history of conducting experiments on human subjects, a topic that Joe and his team have also been investigating.

SCHNEIDER WAS FORMER PATIENT AT DAMMASCH STATE HOSPITAL, WILSONVILLE, OREGON, FROM JULY 30, 1968 TO JANUARY 29, 1969. WHILE AT DAMMASCH, SCHNEIDER CHARACTERIZED AS SCHIZOPHRENIC WITH CHRONIC AND DIFFERENTIATED TRAITS. UNDER STRESS SCHNEIDER WOULD MUTILATE

ALL INFORMATION CONTAINED HEREIN IS UNCLASSIFIED

Just one part of the documents obtained by Joe and his research team via their Freedom Of Information requests. Whatever Phil Schneider's legacy in the UFO community was, it appears it may all have been part of a wider fantasy.

This is a public health issue now - because Schneider had a history of mental illness, which was also confirmed by the FBI - they did not press charges. Phil gave up all the radioactive material and the FBI had no interest in attempting to charge a person with an established mental health record. Especially when Phil's level of instability had led to him self mutilating and even removing several of his own digits.

Joe admits that this find has been personally challenging for him because in reading, digesting, and consuming all of the ufology material he really didn't expect his team to turn up these types of results. He says, "it's with a heavy heart that I say Phil Schneider amputated his own fingers and had a documentation of mental health problems. He consented to a search of his room knowing he had nuclear material under his bed and at another location. It is evident the extent of his mental condition is worse than what anyone may have previously realized.

Schneider obtained material and then claimed to have suffered from nausea, hemorrhaging, and soreness in his extremities all while keeping poison under his bed in his room - what kind of judgment or lack thereof allowed him to stockpile uranium, thorium, and whatever else he may have had and been literally sleeping on top of. Also, Phil claimed in many of his lectures that he had cancer and was given radiation treatments. Something doesn't add up here."

Joe's biggest concern and intention with this information is not to merely debunk Phil Schneider; rather his concern is for the people that are out there that have not been told if they saw Phil Schneider in person at a conference and held some material he may have presented, you may have been exposed to radioactive materials (pre-1975).

Getting this vital information to the public is the number one goal. Moving forward, Joe and his team will continue to investigate Phil Schneider as well as all other topics that lie in the middle of the Ab[Para]Normal fields with a healthy dose of reason, logic, and common sense.

implicated Dershowitz by invoking their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination[12] when asked questions about Dershowitz's connection to Epstein's abuse, including a specific question about whether Dershowitz had been involved with massages by young girls. McCawley Dec., Composite Ex. 9.[13]

Finally, in Dershowitz's vociferous attacks on Ms. Giuffre here, the Court will see an eerie parallel to the Jeffrey Epstein criminal investigation. Back in 2005, when the Palm Beach Police Department was first investigating Epstein's sexual abuse, the Department accumulated overwhelming evidence placing underage girls at Epstein's residence who gave statements that they were being sexually abused, the accounts bearing chillingly similar details. As he did to Ms. Giuffre, Dershowitz called those girls liars and defamed them as prostitutes,[14] in an effort to convince the State Attorney that these girls could not even believably establish that they had ever even gone to Epstein's mansion. Later, Dershowitz would remarkably write to tell the Justice Department that "Epstein never targeted minors."

B. The Litigation Involving Dershowitz - The Florida Defamation Case[15]

[12] In a civil proceeding such as this one, Ms. Giuffre is entitled to an inference in her favor when a witness takes the Fifth Amendment rather than answer a relevant question where that witness is associated with the other side of the case or otherwise in an adverse position to the victims. LiButti v. United States, 107 F.3d 110, 124 (2d Cir. 1997).

[13] Dershowitz also refers to an "investigation" he paid for by former FBI Director Louis Freeh in an effort to proclaim his innocence. DE 364 at 5. Interestingly, while Dershowitz has provided a one-paragraph summary of the investigation to the press, he has not chosen to make the specifics of the investigation public, including what Freeh learned about Defendant Maxwell's involvement in Jeffrey Epstein's sex trafficking organization.

[14] "How Alan Dershowitz Bullied Rape Victims to Protect a Serial Child Molester," by Rania Khalek, January 10, 2015, https://electronicintifada.net/blogs/rania-khalek/how-alan-dershowitz-bullied-rape-victims-protect-serial-child-molester; see also McCawley Dec. at Exhibit 10; Recarey Dep. Tr. at 109:13-110:3 ("Q. What -- what types of persuasions did Alan DERSHOWITZ use in an attempt to dissuade the prosecution of Alan DERSHOWITZ [sic] or his associates? THE WITNESS: Let's see. He not only had -- when they went out and badgered the victims, they went through all social media, found photographs of these victims either holding an alcoholic beverage and calling them -- you see they're not saints. You know, they're consuming alcohol under the age of 21. Basically trying to dirty the victim as much as possible.")

[15] Dershowitz says that he "loudly" proclaimed his innocence, but he also attacked Professor Cassell and Ms. Edwards. Dershowitz also repeatedly and publicly attacked Ms. Giuffre, as discussed as greater length below. At no point did Cassell and Edwards ever agree that their client, Ms. Giuffre, was mistaken in her allegations against Dershowitz. See generally, Cassell Dec.

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

Shortly after its official formation on February 24, 1920, the National Socialist German Workers' Party (NSDAP) announced that only persons of "pure Aryan descent" could become party members. Members of the NSDAP could not be related either directly or indirectly to a so-called "non-Aryan." Party members found guilty of "racial defilement" were persecuted heavily, and some even sentenced to death when the party eventually took over Germany.

NAZIS ON BECOMING "GOD":
A "NEW ORDER" OF MASTERS AND SLAVES

By the decree of Hans Frank, Governor General of Poland during the Third Reich, all property in Poland belonging to Jews and Poles was subject to confiscation without compensation. Hundreds of thousands of Polish-owned farms were seized and handed over to the Nazi conquerers.
By June 1943, over 700,000 Polish estates comprising 21.5 million acres of land were confiscated by the Nazi regime.

VÖLKISCH MOVEMENT

Völkisch nationalists and Pan-Germanists found further inspiration in the work of the Ernst Haeckel, who founded the Monist League in 1906 to spread his racist interpretation of Social Darwinism. In 1900, Haeckel's colleague, Wilhelm Bolsche, had written a book entitled From the Bacillus to the Apeman, in which he described the "naked struggle for dominance between Man and the lowest forms of organic life." This "struggle for dominance" was to have a profound effect upon the development of German anti-Semitism in the early years of the 20th century.

JACOBIN CLUB

The Society of the Jacobins, commonly known as the Jacobin Club, or simply the Jacobins, was founded in 1789 by anti-royalists from Brittany in northwestern France. The club grew into a nationwide movement with a membership of more than 500,000, making it the largest and most powerful political organization during the French Revolution. Women were not accepted as members of the Jacobin Club, and their high membership fees confined its membership to well-off men. The Jacobins claimed to speak on behalf of the people but were themselves not "of" the people. Contemporaries saw the Jacobins as a club of the bourgeoisie.

plane with President Clinton, was that during the time, it was 2002, that you were on a flight with Clinton, was that during the time Virginia was working for Jeffrey?

MR. PAGLIUCA: Object to the form. Misstates the witness' answer and if you can answer the question, you can answer it.

A. Well, like I said, I don't recall exactly when I flew with him. I don't recall when Virginia, we know what Virginia claims when she left, so I can't answer the question. I have no idea.

Q. Do you know Prince Andrew?

A. I do.

Q. How long have you known him?

A. A very long time.

Q. Since you were a child?

A. I really -- it's so long, it's really a long time ago. I just don't recall.

Q. Do you remember how you first met him?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Did you introduce him to Jeffrey?

A. That would be another of Virginia's lies and the lies you perpetrate. I never introduced Prince Andrew to Jeffrey Epstein at any time ever, so just add that the to long list of lies.

Q. Did Jeffrey know Prince Andrew?

A. Clearly he knew him. I think we have that answer but how -- yeah.

Q. Do you know how Jeffery met Prince Andrew?

A. I do not know Jeffrey met Prince Andrew. What I do know is that I did not introduce them. That is one of the many lies. Are we tallying all the lies?

Q. Do you know when Jeffrey met Prince Andrew?

A. I do not know when Jeffrey met Prince Andrew.

Q. Did you ever introduce Prince Andrew to any girls under the age of 18 who were not friends of yours children?

A. I have not introduced Prince Andrew to anyone that I am aware of other than friends of mine who have kids under that age that he may have met socially through me.

Q. Did you ever introduce Prince Andrew to Virginia in London?

A. I understand her story about London but again, her tissue of lies is extremely hard to pick apart what is true and what isn't. Actually I wouldn't recollect her at all but for her tissue stories about this situation.

Q. So did you ever introduce Prince Andrew to Virginia in London?

A. I have no recollection.

Q. Did Virginia ever stay at your home in London, your town home?

A. I know she claims she did but if you are asking me here today to remember specifically, I cannot.

Q. Do you remember taking a trip with Virginia to travel over to Europe, including London?

A. So I have seen her reports and I have seen the plane reports. I see she says she was on that but again, I really have no recollection of her.

Q. Did you know that she was 17 at the time of that trip?

MR. PAGLIUCA: Objection to the form and foundation.

A. I have --

Q. Did you know she was 17 at the time of that trip?

MR. PAGLIUCA: Objection to the form and foundation.

A. I didn't even know she was on the trip.

Q. Did you hold her passport for her when she was traveling?

MR. PAGLIUCA: Objection to the form and foundation.

A. I have no recollection whatsoever of her even being on the trip nor holding her passport.

NEO-FEUDALISM

THE OLD RELIGION IS THE NEW RELIGION

Both Nazism and Communism – as arms of the same root religious cult of Satanism – operate through Globalism (centralization of political power), and seek to create a world based upon Neo-Feudalism, a world-wide governmental system of Slavery which ultimately deprives all human beings of property ownership. Under Neo-Feudalism, all property is ultimately owned and controlled by the supreme "Authority" or "Government" – a Satanic Ruling Class based upon the belief in human authority, whose whims are to become god-like, and not to be challenged by the slaves over which they rule.

WHAT IS A CULT?

A cult is an extremist religious belief system that is violent and dangerous to the lives, rights and freedom of those who are not its members. Cults throughout human history have traditionally used the same basic techniques to establish and maintain the loyalty of their fanatic followers. These include, but are not limited to: social isolation, conformity of thought and appearance, censorship of conflicting information, indoctrination via repetition of ideological dogma, and mental and physical trauma.

LENIN & THE BOLSHEVIK REVOLUTION

Much has been historically documented regarding the "covert, sealed-train journey" of April 1917 that transported Vladimir Lenin and his Bolshevik revolutionaries safely through the midst of a war-torn Europe into Russia, where they began to implement the Bolshevik Revolution. Regarding Lenin's journey, British statesman Winston Churchill remarked: "They transported Lenin in a sealed truck like a plague bacillus from Switzerland into Russia," after which "Lenin and Trotsky seized Russia by the hair of its head." Unfortunately, few ever ask the question: How was the exiled Lenin's journey ever allowed to proceed through Europe entirely unhindered?

R-110 SILENT WEAPONS FOR QUIET WARS: TOP SECRET 4.00

This astonishing document was discovered in a surplus copier purchased from Boeing Aircraft in 1986. Reveals details of a plan, hatched in the embryonic days of the Cold War, which called for the control of the masses through manipulation of industry, pastimes, education and political leanings. It called for a quiet revolution from what is right against brother, and diverting the public's attention from what is really important. For all intents and purposes, this document has "come to life." Reprinted in its original form. Includes diagrams.

CHINESE COMMUNISM

Mao Zedong became the Chairman and dictator of the CCP in 1945. He described Chinese Communism as "Marxism–Leninism applied and developed in China." Under the leadership of Mao Zedong, the CCP emerged victorious from the Chinese Civil War in 1949, after which Mao proclaimed the establishment of the People's Republic of China. Since then, the CCP has governed China and Mao Zedong continued to be the most influential member of the CCP until his death in 1976. Zedong attempted to purge the party of capitalist and reactionary elements during the Chinese Cultural Revolution of 1966. From 1958 to 1962, he instituted a five-year plan known as the Great Leap Forward, with catastrophic results. In an effort to rapidly transform the Chinese economy into a form of centralized Socialism, the CCP collectivized farmland, formed people's communes, and diverted labor to factories. The CCP's complete mismanagement of China's food system subsequently led to the Great Chinese Famine, which resulted in an estimated 38 million deaths, making it the largest famine in recorded human history. The death count of Mao Zedong's regime, taking into account starvation due to famine and political executions, totaled at least 50 million people.

義

GI
Integrity

Be acutely honest throughout your dealings with all people. Believe in justice, not from other people, but from yourself. To the true warrior, all points of view are deeply considered regarding honesty, justice and integrity.

Warriors make a full commitment to their decisions.

礼

REI
Respect

True warriors have no reason to be cruel. They do not need to prove their strength. Warriors are courteous even to their enemies. Warriors are not only respected for their strength in battle, but also by their dealings with others.

The true strength of a warrior becomes apparent during difficult times.

勇

YU
Heroic Courage

Hiding like a turtle in a shell is not living at all. A true warrior must have heroic courage. It is absolutely risky. It is living life completely, fully, and wonderfully.

Heroic courage is not blind. It is intelligent and strong.

名誉

Honor

Warriors have only one judge of honor and character, and this is themselves. Decisions they make and how these decisions are carried out is a reflection of whom they truly are.

You cannot hide from yourself.

JIN Compassion

Through intense training and hard work the true warrior becomes quick and strong. They are not as most people. They develop a power that must be used for good. They have compassion. They help their fellow man at every opportunity.

If an opportunity does not arise, they go out of their way to find one.

真

MAKOTO
Honesty and Sincerity

When warriors say that they will perform an action, it is as good as done. Nothing will stop them from completing what they say they will do. They do not have to "give their word." They do not have to "promise."

Speaking and doing are the same action.

忠義

CHU
Duty and Loyalty

Warriors are responsible for everything that they have done and everything that they have said, and all of the consequences that follow. They are immensely loyal to all of those in their care.

To everyone that they are responsible for, they remain fiercely true.

mean, really. Holy shit. It used to be noticable but much more subtle. They've been pulling out this much more aggressive good cop / bad cop strategy lately. God, it's annoying. One of them aggressively trolls and insults me for no particular reason, then his buddy grabs my hand to apologize for his asshole friend and asks me if I'd like to go somewhere else to talk about it. Fuck no, I'm not walking out to the parking lot with any of you right now, stop asking me. Damn. You can all just fuck right off. What the hell is going on here? I'd say the profiling has been much more detailed as well lately, like they've been taking on character avatars that they think I'm likely to trust. Like sitting down next to me and claiming to be DIA, as if any actual DIA personell would just casually introduce themselves that way in public. Please. Damn. It's so aggressive it's just annoying. The Huntsville social scene has always been kinda like that to some extent, but it's totally unreal at the moment.

Amy Eskridge 12:28 AM

That's the main thing I've seen recently. The social engineering attempts in public are through the damn roof at the moment. It's always been kinda like that around here, but it's never been quite this bad. It's almost absurd. A group of anywhere between 2-6 people will walk into a location, usually about 30 mins after I sit down. Then the whole group will take turns one at a time rotating through the empty seat next to me, repeatedly asking me the same questions over and over again. I deflect one, then the next one sits down. They even all use the same opening line between them all, as if they all read the same briefing materials. I mean, really. Holy shit. It used to be noticable but much more subtle. They've been pulling out this much more aggressive good cop / bad cop strategy lately. God, it's annoying. One of them aggressively trolls and insults me for no particular reason, then his buddy grabs my hand to apologize for his asshole friend and asks me if I'd like to go somewhere else to talk about it. performed, her feet play the flats and sharps by means of pedals. The instrument, in fact, may be correctly called an organ, as it is mainly moved by bellows; to bring which into proper action is the one important object of the machinery. The whole is impelled by six strong springs, acting on twenty-five communicating levers, and regulated and equalized by a brass fly. The interior of the instrument is, of course, very complicated and minute in its mechanism, which requires to be wound up once an hour. Before commencing a tune, the lady bows her head to the auditors; she is apparently agitated with an anxiety and diffidence, not always felt in real life; her eyes then seem intent on the notes, her bosom heaves, and at a distance it is impossible to discover any semblance of a work of art.

A magician, that has sometimes accompanied this musical lady, is also a considerable triumph of mechanical skill. He sits at the bottom of a wall, with a long wand in his right hand, and a book in his left. Questions inscribed on thin oval counters, twenty in number, are put into the spectator's hand, who is desired to inclose one or more of them in a drawer, which shuts with a spring. A medallion, for instance, has the question, What is the most universal passion? which being put into the drawer, the figure rises with a solemn gait, bows his head, draws a circle or two with his wand, consults his book, and lifts it toward his face, as if in meditation. He then strikes with his wand on the wall above his hand, when two folding doors open, and discover the inscription Love, as the reply. The counters are remarkably thin, and similar in all other respects but their inscriptions, which some of them bear on both sides: certainly the mechanism that can discriminate the one from the other, must be exquisite; and mechanism alone, we have very high authority for believing it is.

M. Maillardet's writing boy is hardly less meritorious. He is exhibited kneeling on one knee, and an attendant having dipped his pencil and laid the paper before him, he executes drawings, and French and English sentences, in writing, of a very superior description. Every natural motion of the fingers, elbow, eyes, &c. is correctly imitated.

The first of these figures the artist stated to have cost him the sum of 1,500*l.* in its construction.

Our engraving represents two specimens of Automata, which were exhibited some years ago. The first is that of a female figure which played several tunes. The second is a small carriage, similar to that of Vaucauson, with this difference, that it appears to be drawn by birds; the charioteer guiding the reins and displaying all the dexterity of a living Jehu.

& LENIN'S JOURNEY THROUGH EUROPE

Lord Northcliffe

Wellington House was originally directed by Alfred Harmsworth, the First Viscount Northcliffe (Lord Northcliffe) and his younger brother Harold Harmsworth, the First Viscount Rothermere (Lord Rothermere). Their mandate was to produce an organization capable of manipulating public opinion and directing that manufactured opinion for public support for a declaration of war by Great Britain against Germany during World War I. Funding for Wellington House was provided by the British Royal Family, and later by the Rothschild banking family (to whom Lord Northcliffe was related through marriage), the Milner Group of Lord Alfred Milner, and Rockefeller family trusts.

BOLSHEVISM

LENIN & THE BOLSHEVIK REVOLUTION

After an assassination attempt on Lenin, the Bolsheviks initiated a campaign of political repression and executions known as The Red Terror, which began in September 1918 and lasted until 1922. The Red Terror was chiefly carried out through the Cheka, the Bolshevik secret police, and was modeled on the Reign of Terror of the French Revolution. The purpose of The Red Terror was to seek out and eliminate all political dissent, opposition, and any other threats to Bolshevik power. The French Jacobin terror campaign was a blueprint for the Soviet Bolsheviks. Prominent Bolshevik leader Leon Trotsky had previously compared Vladimir Lenin to Maximilien Robespierre as early as 1904.

* N A R R A T I V E # 27 **********

IA Reported By: KRAUEL, CURTIS D. 12/21/05
Entered By.: ALTOMARO, NICKIE A. 12/21/05

On Thursday, October 20, 2005 at approximately 0936 hours, I assisted in the execution of a search warrant located at 358 El Brillo Way, Palm Beach, Florida, residence of Jeffrey Epstein. I was instructed by Case Agent Det. Joseph Recarey, to secure all computer and media related material from the residence.

Upon my arrival I was directed by Det. Recarey to a room designated as the Kitchen Staff Office. I observed a, Silver in color, CPU with the left side cover removed, exposing the CPU s hardware sitting on floor next to a glass type desk. The CPU had no discernable identifiers or features indicating a make or model. This CPU was powered off with the power cord not plugged in. The keyboard and mouse were atop the CPU. It should be noted that the CPU was not connected to a monitor, printer, or other media device. On the back Panel of the CPU, I observed an A/V card with RCA jacks attached. This type of hardware would allow audio and video to be downloaded onto the CPU s hard disk. The ends of the RCA jacks were unattached at the time of the search and no external camera was located within this room.

The CPU was located on the right side of a desk that held a flat panel LCD screen. The desk also held another keyboard and mouse, indicative of a second computer; however, no other computer was found. It appeared as though a second computer had been recently removed as the cables ends from the monitor, keyboard and mouse were in the same area. A further search of the room revealed no media storage devices, i.e. CD s, Floppy Disks, Zip Disks, etc. This type of media is commonly stored in an area where computers are placed, yet no media was found.

After completing a search of this room, I secured the CPU and turned all items over to the Evidence Custodian for future forensic analysis via a property receipt.

I was then directed by Det. Recarey to a room designated as the Garden Room, where I observed a wooden desk facing west. The desk held a flat screen LCD monitor, keyboard, mouse, media card reader and printer; however, no CPU was located. All of the cables were removed from an area where a computer had once been. A search of the desk area revealed no signs of any media devices.

Det. Recarey directed me to a third location designated as the Cabana room, which is detached from the residence and located just south of the pool. In the South East corner of the room, I observed an office type setting, with an L-shaped desk holding a flat screen LCD monitor, keyboard, mouse and printer; however, no CPU was located. All of the cables were removed from an area where a computer had once been. A search of the desk area revealed no signs of any media devices.

Communism: International Socialism

Spreads its form of totalitarian control through the conquest of world-view and social institutions, eventually becoming a world empire though regional centralization of power and policy-making.

NAZI INDOCTRINATION:
HITLERJUGEND & LEAGUE OF GERMAN MAIDENS

The Hitlerjugend (Hitler Youth, HJ) was the youth organization of the Nazi Party. From 1936 to 1945, the Hitler Youth was the sole official boys' youth organization in Nazi Germany. Its origins date back to 1922, when the Munich-based Nazi Party established its official youth organization called Jugendbund der NSDAP (Youth League of the NSDAP). Its inaugural meeting took place on May13, 1922. Another youth group, the Jungsturm Adolf Hitler (Youth League of Adolf Hitler), was established the same year. Based in Munich, Bavaria, it served to train and recruit future members of the Sturmabteilung, the main paramilitary wing of the Nazi Party at that time.

KARL MARX

Marxism has exerted major influence on Socialist thought and political movements, and during the 20th century revolutionary governments identifying as Marxist took power in many countries and established socialist states including the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China. A number of theoretical variants, such as Leninism, Trotskyism, and Maoism have been developed. Marx was expelled from Paris, Belgium and Germany over the course of his life for his revolutionary ideas. He finally settled in London in 1849, where he wrote Das Kapital. In 1864, Marx helped found International Workingmen's Association, also called First International, through which he sought to spread the Communist ideology, and to fight the influence of "anarchists" of his time led by Mikhail Bakunin. Marx died in March 1883.

PRUSSIAN "EDUCATION" SYSTEM & OUTCOME-BASED "EDUCATION"

The Prussian Education System was the original model for what has come to be called Outcome-Based Education, an educational model that bases education around desired outcomes for the student. By the end of the outcome-based educational experience, each student is to achieve a pre-planned goal set for them by the system. There is no single specified style of teaching or assessment in Outcome-Based Education. Instead, all aspects of the system are specifically designed to achieve specified student outcomes. Thus the role of the faculty adapts into instructor, trainer, facilitator or mentor, based on the outcomes desired. This model should more properly be called a system of indoctrination, since its main objective is to instill into student what it wishes for them to learn, rather than teaching students proven methods for truth discovery, such as the Trivium method. It could be correctly described as "What To Learn" instead of "How To Learn." Outcome-Based Education methods have been adopted in education systems around the entire modern world, including the United States, which has had a Outcome-Based Education programs in place since 1994.

ANTI-CHRIST

My personal concept of an Anti-Christ is a being who is responsible for the spread of false and harmful (if acted upon) information across a significant portion of the human population, and the subsequent ubiquitous spread of that deceptive information throughout the majority of humanity. The resultant behavior conducted by the population leads human society into chaos and degradation, and away from the collective evolution of humanity through the attainment of higher consciousness (often referred to as "Christ Consciousness"). Deceivers of this kind do not even necessarily do this with conscious intention, although many do. Some Anti-Christs are "useful dupes," tasked with the charge of being the messenger or pen-man, so that the true architects of evil remain hidden, or occulted.

NEO-FEUDALISM

THE OLD RELIGION IS THE NEW RELIGION

Both Nazism and Communism – as arms of the same root religious cult of Satanism – operate through Globalism (centralization of political power), and seek to create a world based upon Neo-Feudalism, a world-wide governmental system of Slavery which ultimately deprives all human beings of property ownership. Under Neo-Feudalism, all property is ultimately owned and controlled by the supreme "Authority" or "Government" – a Satanic Ruling Class based upon the belief in human authority, whose whims are to become god-like, and not to be challenged by the slaves over which they rule.

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

The Illuminati spread from Bavaria throughout all of Germany, and eventually into Austria and Switzerland. Soon they had members from all walks of life, including students, merchants, doctors, lawyers, judges, professors, civil officers, bankers, and ministers. By 1784, their membership reached nearly 3,000. By 1786, they had lodges across Germany, Austria, Hungary, England, Scotland, Poland, France, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Holland, Spain, Sweden, Russia, Ireland, Africa, and America. By the 3rd Masonic Congress of Frankfurt in 1786, the Illuminati virtually controlled all the Masonic lodges of Europe, and at this meeting their goals were solidified as: pantheism for higher degrees and atheism for lower degrees and the populace, "communal ownership" of goods (abolition of private property), the destruction of all forms of Christianity, and the removal of all existing human governments to make way for a "universal republic" in which the "utopian" ideology of complete separation from moral and religious restraint should reign.

ANTONIO GRAMSCI

CULTURAL MARXISM & THE FRANKFURT SCHOOL

Gramsci's ideas would go on to greatly influence the Frankfurt School. The Frankfurt School, founded in Frankfurt, Germany in 1923, is a school of social theory and a think tank for Critical Theory ideology. The Frankfurt School initially comprised intellectuals, academics, and political dissidents dissatisfied with the contemporary socio-economic systems of the 1930s. The Frankfurt theorists proposed that current social theory was inadequate for explaining the turbulent reactionary politics occurring in 20th-century. The works of the Frankfurt School are understood in the context of Critical Theory, which purports that the dominant ideology in bourgeois society misrepresents how human relations occur in the real world, and how capitalism justifies and legitimizes human domination. The Frankfurt School perspective of Critical Theory is based on Freudian, Marxist and Hegelian premises of idealist philosophy. Critical theory draws its investigational resources and methods directly from Marxism.

WHAT IS FASCISM?

Fascism is an authoritarian, ultra-nationalist political ideology and movement, characterized by a dictatorial leader, centralized autocracy, militarism, forcible suppression of opposition, belief in a natural social hierarchy, subordination of individual rights for the perceived "good of the nation and race," and strong regimentation of society and the economy. It has been historically symbolized by the symbol of the fasces, an axe surrounded by a bundle of rods, representing the strong centralization of political authority and power.

While the CVRA case was moving forward in the Southern District of Florida on behalf of Jane Does 1 and 2, separate litigation developed between the pro bono attorneys who had filed the lawsuit (Cassell and Edwards) and Dershowitz. After the filing of the joinder motion in the CVRA case, Dershowitz took the airwaves to attack not only Jane Doe 3, but also Cassell and Edwards. Typical of these attacks was one levelled on CNN, in which Dershowitz alleged:

> If they [Cassell and Edwards] had just done an hours' worth of research and work, they would have seen she is lying through her teeth. . . . They're prepared to lie, cheat, and steal. These are unethical lawyers. . . . They can't be allowed to have a bar card to victimize more innocent people.

Hala Gorani – CNN Live (Jan. 5, 2015).[5]

Cassell and Edwards then filed a state law defamation action against Dershowitz in Broward County, Florida. See McCawley Decl., Exhibit. 5, Complaint in Edwards and Cassell v. Dershowitz. The complaint alleged that Dershowitz had engaged in a "massive public media assault on the reputation and character" of Cassell and Edwards. Id. at 4. Ms. Giuffre was not a party to this defamation lawsuit.

The Florida Court Rejects a Waiver of Attorney Clients Privilege Argument

As Cassell and Edwards' Florida defamation action moved forward, Dershowitz sought to make an argument that they had somehow waived their client's (Ms. Giuffre's) attorney-client privilege. On September 8, 2015, Dershowitz filed a motion to compel Cassell and Edwards to produce documents and additional responses to interrogatories. McCawley Decl., Exhibit. 6, Motion to Compel. In his motion, Dershowitz argued that Cassell and Edwards "have waived any privilege or protection that would otherwise attach to responsive documents and information

YOUTH SOCIETIES

KOMSOMOL, YOUNG PIONEERS & LITTLE OCTOBRISTS

The All-Union Leninist Young Communist League, usually known as Komsomol, was a political youth organization in the Soviet Union that existed between 1918 and 1991. It was sometimes described as the "Youth Division of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union." The Komsomol was the final stage of three youth organizations in the Soviet Union, with members ranging from 14 to 28 years of age. The intermediate group was called the Young Pioneers, an organization for members ages 8 to 15. The third and youngest group was known as the Little Octobrists, with members between 7 and 9 years of age. At their peak during the 1970s, these youth societies had up to 25 million members. The Young Pioneers was a compulsory organization for children, tasked with indoctrinating the youth with Communist ideology. In line with the Soviet doctrine of state atheism, the Young Pioneers tasked their members to "set up an atheist's corner at home, with anti-religious pictures, poems, and sayings."

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

During the Great Depression in the early 1930s, the German economy was beset with mass unemployment and widespread business failures. The Nazis blamed the crisis on Jewish financiers and the Bolsheviks, a position which resonated with wide sections of the German electorate. In the 1930 elections, the Nazis won 18% of the votes and became the second-largest party in the Reichstag (German parliament). By March 1932, the Sturmabteilung had grown to 400,000 members, and its street battles with other political paramilitaries reduced some German cities to combat zones.

BRINGERS OF THE DAWN

Teachings from the Mahabharata

DAMODAR VASUDEVA DAS

- Amy Eskridge 12:46 AM

  The Isreali's though, holy shit. I personally think that they have been playing both sides between the US and Russia. I recently went to the dentist for my routine cleaning and exam. The hygeinest pulled up my dental insurance information to see how often I had dental x-rays covered. She asked me how I liked my job at some company that I had never heard of. I was like... what? She showed me the information on the computer screen. My dental insurance company had my employer listed as an Isreali technology company at the MAMAT Technology Center in Haifa Isreal. Wtf? I do not see how that information could be entered into my records by any type of routine accidental typo. Seems like someone in Isreal has been recently requesting my dental records, and they faked an employer address for me in Isreal to do it. Jesus, that's just absurd. I can only think of a handful of reasons for a foreign nation state to social engineer their way into obtaining my dental records, and none of them are good.

  Amy Eskridge 2:34 AM

  This happened with my denist thinking that I was employed at some technology center in Haifa Isreal, and I left and immediately texted a friend about it. I was like... I have become pretty desensitized to a pretty wide variety of fucking absurd esponiage bullshit. However... my dentist having records of me being employed in Isreal is just a little too absurd, even by my standards. I gotta admit, I've seen a whole lot of crazy nation state shit... but I defintely did not see THAT ONE coming. This was 3-4 weeks ago. I have no clue how long ago that information was added to my records though.

  MAY 12

- Amy Eskridge 1:05 AM

  My dental records having my employer listed as some random company in Isreal did at least trigger me to rewind and think more in depth about other times that spooky fucks have seemingly had access to my detailed diagnostics or other medical records. And I guess I had sort of underestimated how many other examples there were of this, because it's all been sort of a weird blur of pretty extreme crazy shit over the past few years. But, in retrospect, it has happened a few times now. Connected

ORDER OF THE BLACK SUN

The Black Sun symbol was formed by 12 Armanen Sig Runes (the same Rune chosen to represent the SS) arrayed in a circular pattern to represent the 12 Houses of the Zodiac surrounding a central disc, representing the "Black Sun" Santur, at the center. The Black Sun symbol is a stylized Sonnenrad, or Sun Wheel. Wiligut designed this variation of the Black Sun disc, and Himmler ordered it to be built into the marble floor of the Obergruppenführersaal (Hall of the Highest Leaders) of Wewelsberg castle. The Obergruppenführersaal is a circular room inside the castle's north tower, with 12 columns and 12 windows. In the middle of the room's light gray marble floor there is a dark green marble inlay of the Black Sun symbol, with each of its 12 spokes pointing to each of the 12 columns in the hall. Originally, there was a golden disc in the center of the ornament, most likely representing the Black Sun's power source, the Vril. The number 12, in addition to representing the Houses of the Zodiac, may also be a reference to the Order of Teutonic Knights, after whom the SS was patterned by Himmler, which also had a "mystical inner order," comprised of 12 "elite" Knights.

MAIN TENETS OF SATANISM

3. SOCIAL DARWINISM

Social Darwinism is the extension of the theory of Darwinian macro-biological "evolution" into the human social domain. The proponents of Darwinian macro-biological "evolution" postulate the notion of the survival of the "fittest" animals, meaning that animals who are the most dominant and vicious will eventually come to rule their social strata. Applied to the human social domain, this theory puts forward the notion that it is the "natural order" (and even desirable) for human society to be ruled by the most dominating and vicious humans, and that such human beings' genetics are the reason they acquired and maintain their positions of social power.

I will not leave this beautiful country without saying that the "Luciffer Project" was a failed project. My will/intention was to fully expose the Illuminati/ /the Council, and their crimes, but I failed!

Hillary Rodham Diane Clinton is one of the high priests, a goddess of this occult, satanic shadow group. One must see their evil and profoundly corrupt nature to understand what I am talking about.

Though I know I invested a great deal of time/effort trying to expose the crimes of the Rockefellers, the Bush klan, the Clintons, and many others, maybe my skills (or lack of skills?) were NOT matching my faith.

So, I apologize in front of the unknown soldiers who struggle to take this fight against these monsters to a glorious end. Many of 'em are risking their lives, while doing this, behind the computer screens, from inside or outside the system.

ORDER FOLLOWERS

THOSE WHO ARE MOST CULPABLE FOR THE CREATION OF TOTALITARIAN REGIMES

"Following Orders" means doing what you are told to do, without judging for yourself whether or not the action you are being ordered to carry out is morally Right or Wrong. If an individual is following orders, it is a complete impossibility for that individual to be exercising Conscience, since – by definition – exercising Conscience means that one is willfully choosing for themselves Right Action over Wrong Action.

NAZI EUGENICS
LEBENSBORN PROGRAM

Lebensborn ("Fount of Life"), established by Heinrich Himmler on December 12, 1935, was an SS-initiated, state-supported, registered association in Nazi Germany with the stated goal of increasing the number of children born who met the Nazi standards of "racially pure Aryans," based on Nazi eugenics. The Lebensborn program provided welfare to its mostly unmarried mothers, encouraged anonymous births by unmarried women at maternity homes, and mediated adoption of children by likewise "racially pure" parents, particularly SS members and their families. About 8,000 children were born in Lebensborn homes in Germany, and between 8,000 and 12,000 children in Norway. Access to Lebensborn was restricted in accordance with the Nordicist eugenic and racial policies of Nazism, which could be referred to as supervised selective breeding.

LEBENSBORN PROGRAM

The Cross of Honor of the German Mother was given to the women who bore the most Aryan children. Abortion was legalized and endorsed by the Nazis for disabled and non-Germanic children, but strictly punished otherwise. Lebensborn expanded into several occupied European countries with Germanic populations during World War II. It included the selection of "racially worthy" orphans for adoption and care for children born from Aryan women who had been in relationships with SS members. During the war, many children were kidnapped from their parents and judged by Aryan criteria for their suitability to be raised in Lebensborn homes, and fostered by German families. At the Nuremberg Trials, much direct evidence was found of the kidnapping of children by Nazi Germany, across Ukraine and Poland during the period 1939–1945.

SOVIET COMMUNISM

After Vladimir Lenin and the Bolsheviks seized power in the Bolshevik Revolution and created a one-party state under the Russian Communist Party, Joseph Stalin (December 18, 1878 – March 5, 1953) joined its governing Politburo, and served in the subsequent Russian Civil War. Stalin was instrumental in the establishment of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR, Soviet Union) in 1922. Following Lenin's death in 1924, Stalin assumed leadership over Russia. Stalin was a Soviet revolutionary who led the Soviet Union from 1924 until his death in 1953, initially governing the country as part of a Communist collective, and eventually consolidating power to become a dictator by the 1930s.

abused numerous underage girls in his Florida mansion, his New York mansion, and several other places that Dershowitz apparently admits he visited on multiple occasions.

In 2009, one of Epstein's household employees, Juan Alessi, testified about the parade of young "massage therapists" entering Epstein's Palm Beach mansion, and that Ms. Giuffre was one of the girls who came to Epstein's mansion.[8] Alessi also saw many celebrities came to the Florida mansion, including "a very famous lawyer that I'm sure you know, Alan Dershowitz." Id. at 70:9-25. Alessi testified that Dershowitz came to the mansion "pretty often . . . at least four or five times a year" and would stay overnight "two [or] three days." Id. at 73:22-25. Ms. Giuffre came to the house when Dershowitz was there. Id. at 73:18-20. And, importantly, Dershowitz got massages while he was visiting Epstein's home. Id. at 74:1-4.[9] The private, upstairs room where Dershowitz got his "massages" was the room where Defendant Maxwell had "a laundry basket . . . full of those toys." Id. at 76:11-15.

In 2009, Epstein's butler, Alfredo Rodriguez, testified that Dershowitz was at Epstein's mansion when underage girls were there to give massages.[10] Rodriguez also testified that Dershowitz was present alone at the home of Jeffery Epstein, without his family, in the presence of young girls.[11] It also appears that Rodriguez would later circle Dershowitz's name in Epstein's address book as among the people with important information for the FBI to collect regarding sex trafficking. In addition, Sarah Kellen, Nadia Marcinkova, and Adrianna Mucinska all

Q. Now, do you have knowledge of Professor Dershowitz having sex with any minor girls other than, you claim, yourself?

A. Yes, I don't know their names.

Q. How do you know that?

A. I witnessed it.

Q. Where were you?

A. On an airplane.

Q. How many girls?

A. One.

Q. Describe her?

A. Blond, young.

Q. Anything else?

A. No.

Q. Where were you going on this plane?

A. You know, it's hard for me to remember the exact destination. I was flying around a lot from the times I was with Jeffrey, but I believe it was to Massachusetts, if my memory is correct.

Q. Why were you flying to Massachusetts?

A. Again, I don't want to -- I don't know. I just flew wherever Jeffrey wanted fly to.

Q. Did you stay in a hotel in Massachusetts?

A. No, we flew in and flew out the same day.

Q. Who else was on the plane?

ANTI-CHRIST

My personal concept of an Anti-Christ is a being who is responsible for the spread of false and harmful (if acted upon) information across a significant portion of the human population, and the subsequent ubiquitous spread of that deceptive information throughout the majority of humanity. The resultant behavior conducted by the population leads human society into chaos and degradation, and away from the collective evolution of humanity through the attainment of higher consciousness (often referred to as "Christ Consciousness"). Deceivers of this kind do not even necessarily do this with conscious intention, although many do. Some Anti-Christs are "useful dupes," tasked with the charge of being the messenger or pen-man, so that the true architects of evil remain hidden, or occulted.

WOTANISM & ARMANISM

The popularity of List's work among the German Völkisch Movement resulted in the establishment of the Guido von List Society in 1908, which published List's writings and included an Ariosophist inner occult society, the High Armanen Order, which List founded in 1911 and presided over as Grand Master. Many influential German and Austrian occultists became members of the List Society in the early 20th century.

Arnold Toynbee

A prominent member of Wellington House was renown historian Arnold Toynbee. Toynbee later worked for another London-based think-tank, Chatham House, also known as the Royal Institute For International Affairs. In his book, America and World Revolution, Toynbee advocated for a world government, stating: "If we are to avoid mass-suicide, we must have our world-state quickly, and this probably means that we must have it in a non-democratic form to begin with. We will have to start building a world-state now, on the best design that is practicable at the moment." Toynbee also stated that this "world dictatorship" would have to "supplant the local national states which litter the present political map." He proposed that this future world-state must be brought about on the basis of mass propaganda that would make it acceptable to the majority of human beings.

'A SHOT OF WHISKEY'

In the old west a .45 cartridge for a six-gun cost 12 cents, so did a glass of whiskey. If a cowhand was low on cash he would often give the bartender a cartridge in exchange for a drink. This became known as a "shot" of whiskey.

VÖLKISCH MOVEMENT

Völkisch nationalists and Pan-Germanists found further inspiration in the work of the Ernst Haeckel, who founded the Monist League in 1906 to spread his racist interpretation of Social Darwinism. In 1900, Haeckel's colleague, Wilhelm Bolsche, had written a book entitled From the Bacillus to the Apeman, in which he described the "naked struggle for dominance between Man and the lowest forms of organic life." This "struggle for dominance" was to have a profound effect upon the development of German anti-Semitism in the early years of the 20th century.

Jane Doe #3's Circumstances

As with Jane Doe #1 and Jane Doe #2, Jane Doe #3 was repeatedly sexually abused by Epstein. The Government then concealed from Jane Doe #3 the existence of its NPA from Jane Doe #3, in violation of her rights under the CVRA. If allowed to join this action, Jane Doe #3 would prove the following:

In 1999, Jane Doe #3 was approached by Ghislaine Maxwell, one of the main women whom Epstein used to procure under-aged girls for sexual activities and a primary co-conspirator in his sexual abuse and sex trafficking scheme. In fact, it became known to the government that Maxwell herself regularly participated in Epstein's sexual exploitation of minors, including Jane Doe #3. Maxwell persuaded Jane Doe #3 (who was then fifteen years old) to come to Epstein's mansion in a fashion very similar to the manner in which Epstein and his other co-conspirators coerced dozens of other children (including Jane Doe #1 and Jane Doe #2). When Jane Doe #3 began giving Epstein a "massage," Epstein and Maxwell turned it into a sexual encounter, as they had done with many other victims. Epstein then became enamored with Jane Doe #3, and with the assistance of Maxwell converted her into what is commonly referred to as a "sex slave." Epstein kept Jane Doe #3 as his sex slave from about 1999 through 2002, when she managed to escape to a foreign country and hide out from Epstein and his co-conspirators for years. From 1999 through 2002, Epstein frequently sexually abused Jane Doe #3, not only in West Palm Beach, but also in New York, New Mexico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, in international airspace on his Epstein's private planes, and elsewhere.

Epstein also sexually trafficked the then-minor Jane Doe, making her available for sex to politically-connected and financially-powerful people. Epstein's purposes in "lending" Jane Doe

COUNTER ECONOMICS

In order to break free from the grip of the central planners one must start to participate in the localized means of production and trade. The amount of power that is stripped from the state simply by purchasing a turnip from your local farmer or growing your own, will prove to be an invaluable asset in the near future.

SOVIET COMMUNISM

Ideologically adhering to the Leninist interpretation of Marxism, Stalin formalized this ideology as Marxism–Leninism. Retaining the Marxist belief that the state would "wither away" as Socialism transformed into pure Communism, Stalin believed that the Soviet Union would remain "until the final defeat of capitalism." Under Stalin, "Socialism in one country" became a central tenet of the Communist Party's ideology. This clashed with original Bolshevik view that Socialism could only be achieved by the process of world-wide revolution.

Vienna, Paris and London, before thousands, many of whom were mathematicians and chess-players, and yet the secret by which he governed its arm was never discovered. This automaton could not play unless M. de Kempelen, or his assistants, was near to direct its movements. A small square box was frequently consulted by the exhibitor during the game; and in this it is supposed consisted the secret which the inventor declared he could communicate in a moment. Any person who could beat M. de Kempelen at chess was sure of conquering the automaton.

While speaking of the androides, you forgot the famous one recorded to have been made by Albertus Magnus, which is said not only to have moved but to have spoken. Thomas Aquinas is said to have been so frightened when he saw this head, that he broke it to pieces; upon which Albert exclaimed, "Periit opus triginta annorum!"

M. de Droz, of la Chaux de Fonds, in the province of Neufchatel, has also executed some curious pieces of mechanism; one was the figure of a man as large as life, which held in its hand a metal style, and under this was a card of Dutch vellum. A spring was touched, and the internal machinery being thus set agoing, the figure began to draw elegant portraits: and likenesses of the king and queen facing each other; and it was curious to observe with what precision the figure lifted up the pencil, in the transition from one point of the picture to another; for instance, in passing from the forehead to the eye, nose, and chin, or from the waving curls of the hair to the ear, &c. The first card being finished, the figure rested until a second was completed, and so on through five separate cards put to it, on all of which it delineated different subjects, but five or six was the extent of its powers. M. de Droz also made a clock, which he presented to the King of Spain. It had, among other curiosities, an artificial sheep, that imitated the bleating of a natural one, and a dog that watched a basket of fruit, and barking and snarling when any one attempted to take it away: if it was actually taken away, it would bark till it was restored.

A son of this gentleman has also made some extraordinary pieces of mechanism, particularly an oval gold snuff-box, about four inches long, three broad, and one and a half thick. It has an horizontal partition, with a lid on each of its parts. One contains snuff; but in the other, as soon as the lid is opened, there rises up a small bird, only three quarters of an inch from the beak to the extremity of the tail, of green enamelled gold, sitting on a gold stand, which immediately wagging its tail, shaking its wings, and opening its bill of white enamelled gold, pours forth a clear melodious song, capable of filling a room of twenty or thirty feet square with its melody.

Archytas of Tarentum, who lived A. D. 400, is said to have made a wooden pigeon that could fly. It is also recorded that Archimedes made similar automata; Dr. Hook made the model of a flying chariot, capable, it is said, of supporting itself in the air. George Whitehead, an Englishman, made a ship, with all her tackling, to move upon a table by itself, with rowers plying the oars, a woman playing on a lute, and a little whelp crying on the deck, as Scotus says, in his Itinerary.

But the wooden eagle and iron fly which Petrus Ramus tells us was made by Regiomontanus, a famous mathematician at Nuremberg, outstrips, if possible, all the other automata. It is said that the eagle flew forth out of the city, aloft in the air, met the Emperor Maximilian a good way off, coming towards it; and, having saluted him, returned again, and waited on him at the gates of Nuremberg. The fly, at a feast to which the Emperor had invited his familiar friends, flew forth from his hand, and taking a round, returned thither again, to the great astonishment of the beholders. Du Bartas, alluding to these singular instances of ingenuity, says;—

"Why should I not that wooden eagle mention,
A learned German's late admired invention,
Which, mounting from the fist that fram'd her,
Flew far to meet the German Emperor?
And, having met him, with her nimble train
And pliant wings, turning about again,
Preceded him unto the castle gate
Of Nuremberg; whom all their shows of state,
Streets hung with arras, arches curious built,
Grey-headed senate, and youth gallantries,
Grac'd not so much as only this device."

Of the fly he thus observes:—

"Once, as this artist, more with mirth than meat,

COMMUNIST MANIFESTO

The Communist Manifesto asserts that capitalism does not offer humanity the possibility of self-realization, and ensures that human beings remain perpetually stunted and alienated. It theorizes that capitalism will bring about its own destruction, and predicts that a revolution will lead to the emergence of a classless, communist society. The text ends with a decisive and famous call for solidarity among the proletariat, popularized as the slogan "Workers of the world, unite! You have nothing to lose but your chains." The Communist Manifesto remains one of the world's most influential political documents.

ANTONIO GRAMSCI

CULTURAL MARXISM & THE FRANKFURT SCHOOL

Gramsci called for a kind of education system that would develop Socialist intellectuals, whose primary task would be to reform the existing intellectual activity of the masses and make it natively critical of the status quo. This is the basis of modern "Critical Theory." Viewing bourgeois cultural values as being tied to folklore, popular culture and religion, Gramsci argued that those cultural institutions should be the first and foremost toward which Socialists should direct their cultural subversion efforts. Gramsci described this tactic as a "war of position," and felt that such a war should be waged by revolutionaries through political agitation and the advancement of Socialist culture. This strategy has come to be called Cultural Marxism in the modern day.

Besant wrote: "A democratic Socialism, controlled by majority votes, can never succeed, [but] a truly aristocratic Socialism is the next step upward in civilization." Besant was the personal mentor of fellow Fabian Society member, Jawaharlal Nehru, the first Prime Minister of India, who subsequently framed the economic policy for the nation of India upon Fabian Socialism.

In the early 1900's, List became increasingly interested in Occultism, specifically Theosophy, which he distorted into an expansion of Wotanism. In 1902, he invented a new variation of the Nordic Runes, which he called the Armanen Runes, or the Armanen Futarkh.

privately. Nevertheless, we write in an abundance of caution and to avoid the risk of a de-contextualized and one-sided disclosure.

In a letter from her counsel Boise Shiller Flexner LLP to Laura Menninger on May 5, 2017, Ms. Giuffre purported to give notice of her "withdrawal of her confidentiality designation of Ms. Ransome's deposition transcript in its entirety." We understand Ms. Maxwell will move to oppose this de-designation.

If the Court allows Ms. Giuffre to remove the confidentiality designation from the Ransome deposition, the Emails should be disclosed at the same time to allow the public to understand the full context of Ms. Ransome's testimony, and to assess the credibility (or lack thereof) of Ms. Ransome. Ms. Giuffre should not be permitted to use this Court's power to make a false and heinous public accusation against Intervenor (like the publicly filed false affidavits in prior litigation concerning Intervenor) and then shield from disclosure all proof that the accusation is perjurious (as she has done previously in this case by designating her book manuscript and emails to the press, which show her claims against Intervenor to be false, as confidential).

Intervenor seeks the de-designation of the Emails to challenge Ms. Ransome's false and defamatory accusations that, among other things, she had sexual intercourse with Intervenor when she was twenty-three. Ms. Ransome's allegations concerning Intervenor are categorically false. Prof. Dershowitz has never met or had contact with Ms. Ransome, was not her lawyer, and certainly never had a sexual encounter with her. Prior to this action, Intervenor had never heard of Ms. Ransome. Her testimony was fabricated from whole cloth. Ms. Ransome's testimony also contains a slew of other incendiary claims concerning the sexual proclivities of Donald Trump, Bill Clinton, and other prominent individuals.

The Emails are a necessary antidote to Ms. Ransome's deposition misstatements because they demonstrate she manifestly lacks credibility. For example, she writes:

- "My emails have been hacked. I have reached out to the Russians for help and they are coming to my aid. Thank goodness for Anonymous!!!! I will make sure that they all go behind bars. I have already sent everything I need to so, the CIA, hacking my emails etc were too late. I also have numerous devices, with systems that are unhackable and I have film footage all over Europe itching to be released." Ex. 1 (RANSOME_000521);

- Her friend was "approached, by Special Agents Forces Men sent directly by Hilary [sic] Clinton herself, in order to protect her presidential campaign." Ex. 2 (RANSOME_000295);

- "I will make sure that neither that evil bitch Hillary or that Paedophile Trump gets elected. I will also make sure that everyone on the God damn planet see's [sic] that footage and photo's [sic] and will release them to Wiki leaks by Sunday. I will take down Epstein and his bunch of fuck wit cronies myself!!!!!!!!! I have also gone to a Russian news paper." Ex. 3 (RANSOME_000368);

"Gun control" does not mean what you think it means.
It means only the State will have guns.
If you think that's a good idea, you need to read a history book on government betrayal and tyranny.

(U) Symbols and Logos Used by Pedophiles to Identify Sexual Preferences

(U//FOUO) This intelligence bulletin addresses Crimes Against Children Standing Intelligence Requirements Set contained in Q-FBI-2200-005-06, HRWC CAC-VI.A.5.

(U//LES) Pedophiles, to include those who sexually abuse children as well as those who produce, distribute, and trade child pornography, are using various types of identification logos or symbols to recognize one another and distinguish their sexual preferences. To specifically indicate the pedophile's gender preference, members of pedophilic organizations encourage the use of descriptions such as "boylove", "girllove", and "childlove."[1] These symbols have been etched into rings and formed into pendants, and have also been found imprinted on coins.

(U) The BoyLover logo (BLogo) is a small blue spiral-shaped triangle surrounded by a larger triangle, whereby the small triangle represents a small boy and the larger triangle represents an adult man.[2] A variation of the BLogo is the Little Boy Lover logo (LBLogo), which also embodies a small spiral-shaped triangle within a larger triangle; however, the corners of the LBLogo are rounded to resemble a scribbling by a young child.[3] Images of the BLogo and LBLogo symbols are depicted below.

I don't know how much further down this rabbit hole I want to go.

The wikileaks batch today mentions a girl named Maeve Luzzatto being brought in as entertainment. It references her being almost 7 years old.

https://wikileaks.org/podesta-emails/emailid/5252

This is the fucking website for the birth of a girl named Maeve Luzzatto, born in 2008, who would just so happen to be almost around 7 years old at the time of the email.

http://mamasmidwives.com/maeve-chaim/

Confirmed it's this girl because it names both her and Ruby Luzzatto in the article and in this article it shows that they BOTH ATTENDED THE MARTHA'S VINEYARD DOGSHOW AT THE SAME FUCKING TIME AS THE EMAILS WERE SENT. They won for best crossbreed in honor of Cleopatra.

What the fuck /pol/. I am legitimately shaking, my heart is pounding. Fuck this. Fuck this so hard.

Maeve's Story

October 29th was a wild and blustery day. Our four-year-old Ruby had a field trip at a pumpkin patch about an hour's drive from home, and parents were requested to join them. As Ruby and I set out in the morning, I noticed that the intermittent contractions I had been having for about a week were coming a bit stronger and with a little more regularity. My due date was still several days away, and I'd had a few false alarms, so I didn't think too much about it as we drove out to the country.

There is something wild and magical about a pumpkin patch in late October. This big wide expanse of land with lots of dead looking reedy vines twisting around on the ground is punctuated by an occasional bright orange glowing orb. It feels like a moonscape in an alternate universe. The field stretched out under a dramatic grey sky, and I felt I could understand why these bizarre yellow fruits held such a place of stature in fairy tales.

The field trip included the obligatory hayride. And it was a bumpy one. Ruby struggled to sit on my lap, what was left of it, and then just gave up and sat next to friends instead. I had been casually timing the contractions and noticed that they were coming about every 8 to 9 minutes for an hour or two and occasionally getting more intense. At the end of the ride, one of the fathers offered his hand to help me out of the truck but I said I'd wait. I didn't tell him it was because I was right in the middle of a pretty strong contraction!

By the time 3-hour field trip was over, I was thinking that I might now be in real labor. One of Ruby's friends was having a pumpkin carving party, so I sent her along and went home. My partner was at work about an hour away and I hesitated to call him home in case this wasn't the real thing. I called our midwife Erin, who told me to take a nap and check back with her. I rested as best I could, not really sleeping, and when I got up I called Ben and let him know it was probably time to come home.

The next few hours were mostly occupied with logistics. Ruby got a ride home from the party, my sister-in-law came to pick up Ruby and our two year old daughter Emerson and took them to her house for dinner and a possible sleep over. Ben got home and started setting up the birth tub and filling it with water. Ruby's godfather Skip brought over a load of firewood. He saw me quietly reclining on the couch next to the tub that was filling up, listening to Sade on the stereo. He said, "you're going to give birth to Barry White!" (Being Irish and superstitious, I worried that Skip's words might jinx us, but they didn't. In fact, Skip may actually be right.)

I spoke to Erin and Mairi on the phone a few times during these hours. I was feeling very quiet and focused and didn't want to talk much. When we all felt it was probably time for them to head over, it was full on rush hour and we live right in the city.

I wanted very much to get in the tub and so relieved when it was ready for me. Mairi, Erin and Susan (who was assisting them) were all on their way, and everyone else had cleared out other than Ben. The tub felt wonderful and I felt the baby and I were ready to get serious. When Mairi arrived a few minutes later I was already pushing. Ben went to get the rest of Mairi's equipment from her car while she stayed with me and quietly set up. She told me I might want to hang on until he came back. Ha! This baby was on her way. There was no way of holding her back.

When Ben came back in a few minutes before Susan arrived, I could reach down and feel the baby's head on its way. I wanted to get out of the tub and use the birthing chair, but the contractions were coming so close to one another that I didn't get enough of a break to climb out. Susan asked, "Are you going to have your baby now?" I nodded. She said "Reach down and catch your baby," – which somehow hadn't occurred to me. One more push and her head was out. But then she stayed there, under the water, with just her head out and the rest of her still inside me.

The contractions had been coming quickly, with one almost immediately following the next for several in a row, followed by a break for a few minutes. Then the whole cycle would start again – several contractions in a row followed by a nice break. This last series of contractions had resulted in the arrival of the baby's head, but then my break in contractions arrived. Mairi told me to push hard to get the rest of her body out, but with no contraction behind it my pushing didn't do much. They told me to stand up so that the baby's head would be out of the water.

Up until that point I had been on one knee, leaning against the side of the tub. They helped me to stand up. I put my hands against the edge of the pool, moved my hips around which seemed to loosen the baby's position, and with the next contraction Maeve Chaim Luzzatto arrived.Someone (Susan I

THE TAVISTOCK INSTITUTE
& LENIN'S JOURNEY THROUGH EUROPE

The train trip was also authorized and approved by German General Erich Ludendorff and German Emperor Kaiser Wilhelm. The Germans hoped that Lenin's presence in Russia would add to the chaos and instability weakening the country at the time. The journey began in Zurich, Switzerland and proceeded to the German town of Sassnitz at the edge of the Baltic Sea, where the Bolshevik passengers had to de-train. The Swedish Government then provided them ferry transport across the Baltic to Trelleborg, Sweden. They continued the journey by train at Malmö, Sweden to Stockholm, then through Finland, and finally to Petrograd, Russia, where Lenin's revolution would take full form, soon leading Russia into Soviet Communism. Understanding the conspiracy that led to Lenin's return to Russia, it is an inescapable conclusion that without the complicity of members of the think tank that would become the Tavistock Institute Human Relations, the Bolshevik Revolution would have been still-born.

We used to see ourselves as separate from nature.

Today we are witnessing the horrors of that separation.

Soon, we will all be living in conscious knowledge of our union.

PRUSSIAN "EDUCATION" SYSTEM & OUTCOME-BASED "EDUCATION"

The Prussian Education System was established in Prussia as a result of educational reforms in the late 18th and early 19th century, and has had widespread influence since. The Prussian System was introduced in the late 18th century and was significantly enhanced after Prussia's defeat in the Napoleonic Wars. The Prussian educational reforms inspired similar changes in other countries, and variations of it remain in wide-spread use today under various names. Characteristic of the Prussian System included compulsory attendance, national testing for all students, a prescribed national curriculum for each grade, and mandatory kindergarten. It soon widely inspired educational models in other German states and a number of other countries, including Japan and the United States. State-oriented mass educational systems were instituted in the 19th century throughout the rest of Europe. The Prussian reforms in education spread quickly through Europe, particularly after the French Revolution. This form of public education was subsequently widely institutionalized throughout the world and developed in parallel with nation-building.

GUIDO VON LIST
WOTANISM & ARMANISM

List viewed his religion Wotanism as the exoteric, outer form of pre-Christian Germanic religion, while Armanism was the term he applied to what he believed were the esoteric, secret teachings of this ancient belief system. List believed that while Wotanism expounded polytheism for the wider population, those who were members of the Armanist priest-class were fully aware of the reality of monotheism. List's Armanism would later be classified as a form of Ariosophy, a term which was coined by Jörg Lanz von Liebenfels in 1915.

THE TAVISTOCK INSTITUTE
& LENIN'S JOURNEY THROUGH EUROPE

The modern science of mass manipulation of public opinion was born at Wellington House. From its elementary beginnings at Wellington House, the Tavistock Institute of Human Relations eventually developed into a highly sophisticated and top-secret Social Engineering organization, whose main purpose was to manipulate world-wide public opinion. Tavistock's social engineers became masters of mind control through the steering of mass human perception. Tavistock's long-term agenda viewed Classical and Western civilizations as the only two civilizations that could bring a "modern-day Renaissance" to the world, and saw them as threats to their plan for ushering in a "New World Order" under an internationalist (globalist) world government.

Manifesto of Humanity

To all humans! This message will reach humans on this planet through many different ways. Time is right to take the next step in your evolution. Time is right to change this current pernicious system. It will take decades and you will have to work hard for these goals. But it will surely happen. Pain will end. Hunger will end. Exploitation of humans, nature and resources will end. Slavery will end! The dignity of humans, creatures and nature will be restored at the end!

The end of your known civilisation is near. Build your civilization anew with the following seven rules.

1) Abolish monetary system, exchange trade and the system of material worth:
   Humans have the choice between slavery and living in freedom. Do not give an ordinary object an imaginary value. The monetary system is designed to make all humans to slaves of evil people. Do not give power to the evil people. Get rid of slavery. You have the power in your hands. Wake up!

2) Worldwide abolition of all borders:
   When ordinary objects have no value, you do not need to worry about protecting them. Borders are only created to protect values from the others. The only value to protect is humanity, life itself and freedom. You don't need borders.

3) Worldwide abolition of weapons:
   Melt your weapons and build bridges to bring people together and not to kill people. Life is the highest good on your planet. Protect it, do not destroy life!

4) Worldwide abolition of overproduction and avoiding wastefulness:
   Produce only the best. Do not waste precious resources with cheap products. All humans deserve only the best products. You have smart systems to calculate the needs of humans on your planet. Use these systems to prevent overproduction. Protect your planet. You will live here forever!

5) Worldwide distribution of food, resources and commodities without expectations of compensation:
   Some regions of your planet are barren. Humans in these regions need your help in the form of food, water, resources and other commodities. There is enough for all humans. Bring it to them. Do not let any creature starve.

6) Worldwide distribution of knowledge and information without expectations of compensation:
   The only thing which increases when it is shared is knowledge and information. With knowledge and information you can create a better environment for all humans and help generate new knowledge and information. Your information can be used by another to generate new knowledge. New Knowledge from this can be used to generate inventions to help all humans. Share your knowledge without any expectations with all humans.

7) Worldwide distribution of technology, medical care and medicine without expectations of compensation:
   Technology must be shared. Technology makes life easier for people. Technology can be used to end slavery of work. Diseases can be cured. Help without hesitation. Send your doctors. If there is not enough medicine, share your medicine without expectations. One person whom you have healed could save the world.

NAZIS ON BECOMING "GOD":
A "NEW ORDER" OF MASTERS AND SLAVES

"The Poles are especially born for low labor. There can be no question of improvement for them. It is necessary to keep the standard of life low in Poland and it must not be permitted to rise. Poland should be used by us merely as a source of unskilled labor. Every year the laborers needed by the Reich could be procured from there. As for the Polish priests, they will preach what we want them to preach. If any priest acts differently, we shall make short work of him. The task of the priest is to keep the Poles quiet, stupid and dull-witted. It is indispensable to bear in mind that the Polish gentry must cease to exist. However cruel this may sound, they must be exterminated wherever they are. There should be one master only for the Poles, the German. Two masters, side by side, cannot and must not exist. Therefore, all representatives of the Polish intelligentsia are to be exterminated. This sounds cruel, but such is the law of life."

"LIGHT" OCCULTISTS VS. "DARK" OCCULTISTS

Light Occultists have hidden occult knowledge in order to prevent its complete eradication during exceedingly draconian times, and at other times, to prevent it from falling into the hands of would-be Dark Occultists (those who knew of the empowerment that could be gained from such knowledge, but wanted to use it for their own immoral purposes of deception and control).

Dark Occultists have hidden occult knowledge in order to create and maintain a power differential between those who hold such knowledge and those who are ignorant of it. Dark Occultists work through fear and manipulation to bring about compliance with their own selfish will. Their work is always done in secrecy, constantly contravening the freedom and prosperity of all but themselves.

THE TAVISTOCK INSTITUTE
& LENIN'S JOURNEY THROUGH EUROPE

Lord Alfred Milner, prominent member of Wellington House and a leading Fabian Socialist, had many contacts among the Bolshevik exiles in Europe, including Vladimir Lenin. Carrying a letter of introduction from fellow Socialist, Fritz Platten, Lenin met with Lord Milner and laid down his plan for the overthrow of the Romanov Tzars. Lenin asked Milner to provide the necessary funds required to launch his Bolshevik revolution. Milner agreed on condition that he could send his agent Bruce Lockhart of British MI6 Intelligence to supervise Lenin's daily affairs and report his progress back to Milner.

GUIDO VON LIST
WOTANISM & ARMANISM

List promoted the millenarian view that modern society was degenerate, but that it would be cleansed through the establishment of a new Pan-German Empire that would embrace Wotanism. He influenced later völkisch groups such as the Reichshammerbund and Germanenorden, and through those organizations, exerted a significant influence on both the burgeoning Nazi Party and the SS.

1 Q. Putting aside ages, whether they were 2 minors or not, other than this one girl you say had sex
3 with Professor Dershowitz on a plane, are you aware of 4 any other girls with whom you believe Professor
5 Dershowitz had sex?
6 A. Professor Dershowitz was around a lot and 7 there was always young girls around a lot and I
8 physically did not see him with any other girls besides 9 the ones that we're talking about right now and myself,
10 but no, I'm not too sure.
11 Q. You don't know of any, correct?
12 A. Not that I physically witnessed.
13 Q. How tall is Professor Dershowitz?
14 A. I don't know.
15 Q. Is he closer to 5'5" or 6"?
16 A. Goodness, 5'5", 5'6", 5'7", he's not 6".
17 Q. Does he have any distinguishing 18 characteristics?
19 A. Like are you asking me skin color?
20 Q. Any distinguishing physical
21 characteristics, whatever that might mean to you?
22 A. He's older, he's -- I don't know what you 23 mean. Like does he have a mole in a specific place, is 24 that what you're asking me?
25 Q. Anything that might occur to you?

A. I want to say it was early 2006 or late 2005.

Q. Do you recall who you met with?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall what you told the police?

A. It was similar to this. They were asking me a lot of questions that I answered. They knew a lot. They knew what the bathroom looked like. They knew that the couch had a hot pink throw on it with green tassels.

I assumed that there had been videos and they had seen me. They had seen the videos. That's what I had assumed. I didn't know that maybe people had already come forward and given them statements.

Q. Did they talk to you at all about the videos?

A. They said, Were you aware that there were video cameras in the house?

I said, No, but it would not surprise me.

MS. McCAWLEY: And I'm going to mark as Exhibit 4 -- do you have an extra -- sorry. Did you get one? Okay. Giuffre 0002 through 89.

And I'm going to direct you to page 00076, and I'm going to hand it to you.

1 Brunel?
2 A. I again was there.
3 Q. How many times did you and Les Wexner and 4 Sarah Kellen have sex together?
5 A. Once that I can remember.
6 Q. Where were you?
7 A. New Mexico.
8 Q. Are there other witnesses?
9 A. Number 48, [redacted], I can't pronounce her last 10 name.
11 Q. [redacted]?
12 A. [redacted], yes.
13 Q. Anyone else?
14 A. Number 50, [redacted]
15 MS. MCCAWLEY: I'm sorry, I think she's 16 moving on with the list. Are you still talking 17 about the incident?
18 BY MS. BORJA:
19 Q. I understand [redacted] was a witness 20 to your sexual activities with Les Wexner in Mexico, is 21 that not what you meant?
22 A. Yes.
23 Q. She was a witness?
24 A. Yes.
25 Q. Was [redacted] a witness?

- Visit farmers markets and local non-chain stores.
- Grow a garden or homestead.
- Encourage local stores & restaurants to accept crypto (KYC-free):

  - BTCPayServer.org works with online stores (e.g. WooCommerce) and physical points-of-sale.
  - A mobile wallet such as Cake Wallet works well in brick-and-mortar stores.

  - Direct trade means fair payments and working conditions for the farmers, unlike Nestle.

ANTI-CHRIST

My personal concept of an Anti-Christ is a being who is responsible for the spread of false and harmful (if acted upon) information across a significant portion of the human population, and the subsequent ubiquitous spread of that deceptive information throughout the majority of humanity. The resultant behavior conducted by the population leads human society into chaos and degradation, and away from the collective evolution of humanity through the attainment of higher consciousness (often referred to as "Christ Consciousness"). Deceivers of this kind do not even necessarily do this with conscious intention, although many do. Some Anti-Christs are "useful dupes," tasked with the charge of being the messenger or pen-man, so that the true architects of evil remain hidden, or occulted.

When you repay the loan, I will keep the $200,000 plus interest and will erase these digits.

If you can't repay the loan, I will keep your house and will erase these digits.

This is risky business for me. So if you fail, your Government will bail me out from the taxes you pay.

Methods

Data reporting

No statistical methods were used to predetermine sample size. The experiments were not randomized and the investigators were not blinded to allocation during experiments and outcome assessment.

Sample collection

Human samples, including oral swabs, anal swabs, blood and BALF samples were collected by Jinyintan hospital (Wuhan, China) with the consent of all patients and approved by the ethics committee of the designated hospital for emerging infectious diseases. Patients were sampled without gender

Virus isolation, cell infection, electron microscopy and neutralization assay

The following cell lines were used for virus isolation in this study: Vero E6 and Huh7 cells, which were cultured in DMEM containing 10% FBS. All cell lines were tested and free of mycoplasma contamination, submitted for species identification and authenticated by morphological evaluation by microscopy. None of the cell lines was on the list of commonly misidentified cell lines (by ICLAC).

Cultured cell monolayers were maintained in their respective medium. The PCR-positive BALF sample from ICU-06 patient was spun at 8,000*g* for 15 min, filtered and diluted 1:2 with DMEM supplemented with 16 μg ml^{-1}

Big business needs to stay out of government!
No! Big government needs to stay out of business!
ASK ME ABOUT MY PRONOUNS

What is this fruitless quarreling?
Think you that the big state and big business are separate? Nay! When you strike at one or the other, you strike merely at the limbs of the beast, but never at its torso or head!
Is it not so that the government intervenes to insure the profitability of corporations? Does it not provide corporate welfare in times of crisis? It does this to preserve itself, for the state and business are organs of one creature!
And do businesses not install their favored representatives into seats of power, so that the state can continue to pump lifeblood into them? Has it ever been otherwise in recorded history?
The benevolent state and the benevolent marketplace are mere fictions! Never has one existed without the other! Always there has been a violent state which has backed the claims of the elite!

BEHOLD! THE TRUE FACE OF YOUR SOCIETY!

Not even the free market could fix this!
No amount of re-tweeting could fell this beast!
WE'RE DOOMED!
FEAR NOT, BROTHERS!

BROTHER!
But when last we saw you, you had been recruited by the Nazis!
Tell us, what happened?
Yea, that was a dark time in my journey! But after meeting the Enlightened One, I was freed from the clutches of that demon which had for so long haunted me!
Don't Tase Me, Bro!

My beliefs had turned to ashes, and so I began a quest to discover the true path!
But I found a world awash in foolishness! None could tell me who really ruled the world, though all had pet theories!

It was then that I turned away from the world and sought answers within!
I began my astral journey!
I battled with Reptilians on the cosmic plane! I matched magickal wits with Illuminati! Grappled with Archons and Nephilim! Eavesdropped on Bohemian Grove!
All this and more I did before I found the answer I sought - before I stood before the master of the universe!
But there is no way to tell you his identity, I must show you!
Don't Tase Me, Bro!

Please, teach us all you have learned!
It is the task of the enlightened not only to ascend to learning and to see the good, but to be willing to descend again to those prisoners of ignorance and share the treasures they have gathered.

ANTONIO GRAMSCI

CULTURAL MARXISM & THE FRANKFURT SCHOOL

Antonio Gramsci (January 22, 1891 – April 27, 1937) was an Italian Marxist Socialist and Social Engineer. He was a founding member and one-time leader of the Italian Communist Party. Gramsci was one of the most influential Marxist thinkers of the 20th century, and a key thinker in the development of Western Marxism. After an attempt on Italian dictator Benito Mussolini's life in November 1926, the Italian Fascist government passed emergency laws, after which police arrested and imprisoned Gramsci for his anti-Fascist political views. Gramsci died in prison on April 27, 1937, at the age of 46.

GIUSEPPI MAZZINI
& YOUNG ITALY

Giuseppe Mazzini (June 22, 1805 – March 10, 1872) was the spearhead of the Italian revolutionary movement. His efforts helped bring about a unified Italy in place of separate states in the 19th century. Mazzini was an Italian nationalist in the historical radical tradition, and a proponent of a social-democratic state. Mazzini helped define the modern European movement for "popular democracy." In 1827, Mazzini travelled to Tuscany, where he became a member of the Carbonari secret society. In 1831, Mazzini was exiled to France and settled in Marseille, where he became a popular figure among Italian exiles. That year, he founded a new political society called Giovine Italia (Young Italy), a secret society formed to promote Italian unification. Mazzini believed that a popular uprising would create a unified Italy, and would touch off a European-wide revolutionary movement.

provide deep insight into what the DIA and DoD have interest in regarding AAWSAP/AATIP, and what they have learned so far from their assessment of these encounters. From power systems, to tracking, to biological effects, to "edge" hypothetical sciences, to new aviation control systems, to invisibility and much more; all of these research projects aim to bring future technology to the current age, for military applications.

These research efforts reveal the possibility of many astounding new systems, including but not limited to completely undetectable, anti-gravity hypersonic weapons platforms controlled by the human mind; new forms of energy that can power systems never thought possible before; and new defense and offense capabilities so profound that whoever masters these technologies first could arguably conquer any and all enemies simultaneously.

It is likely that a single TicTac UFO, armed with sufficient weapons systems, (if those weapons systems were parallel in power and technological level to their currently observed aeronautic abilities), could easily destroy an entire battle fleet of our most state-of-the-art naval weapons systems in mere seconds. No military on Earth would stand a chance against just a few of these TicTac UFOs - not to mention the larger observed craft ("from 375ft saucers to much larger cigar shaped "motherships") detected many times by credible witnesses and corroborated by technology.

JOSEPH GOEBBELS

Goebbels converted May 1st from a workers' rights holiday into a day celebrating the Nazi Party. May 1st is Beltane (also called Walpurgisnacht) the highest Sabbat (holy day) of the occult solar calendar. He also organized and spoke at many book-burning ceremonies, where huge crowds of Nazis gathered to burn books which were viewed as being subversive, or representing ideologies that were opposed to Nazism. This proved an effective information control technique within Nazi Germany. If they could never read opposing views, most Germans could never come out of the mindset programmed into them by Nazi propagandists.

ANTI-CHRIST

My personal concept of an Anti-Christ is a being who is responsible for the spread of false and harmful (if acted upon) information across a significant portion of the human population, and the subsequent ubiquitous spread of that deceptive information throughout the majority of humanity. The resultant behavior conducted by the population leads human society into chaos and degradation, and away from the collective evolution of humanity through the attainment of higher consciousness (often referred to as "Christ Consciousness"). Deceivers of this kind do not even necessarily do this with conscious intention, although many do. Some Anti-Christs are "useful dupes," tasked with the charge of being the messenger or pen-man, so that the true architects of evil remain hidden, or occulted.

D.C. Official: Outdoor Seats At Pizza Place Will Mean Rapes And Murders

When a Washington neighborhood commissioner staged a nighttime surveillance of a Northwest pizza place and put the resulting video up on YouTube to prove what a threat to public safety an outdoor ping-pong table posed, the image of a ping-pong ball rolling out onto Connecticut Avenue was chilling enough.

But this week, that same commissioner, Frank Winstead, ratcheted up the scare rhetoric in a big way: At a meeting of Advisory Neighborhood Commission 3F Monday night, in front of the largest crowd in the ANC's history, Winstead accused the owner of Comet Ping Pong of seeking to turn this quiet stretch of Connecticut Avenue in Forest Hills into a haven for rape and murder.

The crowd of about 100 residents--mainly fans of the pizza place--fell into an uproar and drowned out Winstead following this exchange, which you can hear for yourself on the audio recording of the meeting:

A supporter of Comet addressed the commission, which was considering owner James Alefantis's application to extend his opening

I mean how could anyone believe this guy, the place is nice

Dear James:

Thank you for lending your time and extraordinary talent to participate in the "Cooking with Fratelli Podesta" fundraiser for my campaign for president hosted by Tony and John Podesta. I heard the evening was a smashing success, and am grateful to you for everything you did to make it possible.

I'm running for president because everyday Americans and their families need a champion, and I want to be that champion. I want to help all people fulfill their potential and not only get ahead, but stay ahead. I am energized by the support and good wishes I have received on the trail, and am looking forward to continuing the conversation about our future and to building an inclusive, nationwide grassroots campaign that will earn every vote to victory.

Thank you for standing with me in this fight, and please know that I am counting you on for continued success. Onward!

With warm regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

POSTMODERNISM

Postmodernism is generally defined by an attitude of skepticism and rejection of ideas associated with modernism, often criticizing Enlightenment rationality, and focusing on the role of ideology in maintaining political or economic power. Postmodern thinkers frequently describe that knowledge and values are contingent or socially-conditioned, framing them as products of political, historical, or cultural power hierarchies. Common targets of postmodern criticism include: objective reality, objective morality, truth, reason, science, language, and social progress. Accordingly, postmodern thought is broadly characterized by tendencies toward pluralism, irreverence, Solipsism, epistemological relativism, and Moral Relativism.

15. Nadia Marcinkova (3 ½ hours). Ms. Marcinkova's deposition is set for June 16, 2016, in New York.[4] Ms. Marcinkova was specifically identified by the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida as a "potential co-conspirator of Epstein" in the non-prosecution agreement it executed with Mr. Epstein as part of his guilty plea. She has relevant information because she observed the recruitment of underage girls for sex and, in fact, participated in sex acts with minors. She was also on numerous flights with Defendant (in contradiction to Defendant's testimony), and she can provide valuable testimony about Maxwell's role in the recruitment of females.

16. Sarah Kellen (a/k/a Sarah Kensignton or Sarah Vickers) (3 ½ hours). Ms. Kellen's deposition is set for June 22, 2016, in New York. Ms. Kellen specifically identified by the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida as a "potential co-conspirator of Epstein" in the non-prosecution agreement it executed with Mr. Epstein as part of his guilty plea. She has relevant information because she was present during the time when Virginia was with Epstein and the Defendant, and she travelled with all of them during this critical time period. It is believed that she worked at the direction of, and directly under, Ms. Maxwell and was taught by Ms. Maxwell how to recruit females for sex with Mr. Epstein.

[4] Marcinkova, Kellen and Epstein have not been personally served and are all subject to Ms. Giuffre's Motion for Alternative Service [D.E. 160].

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

In April 1789, the Illuminati had infiltrated French Masonic Lodges to such an extent that they had ceased operation and instead rallied under the name "The French Revolutionary Club." When they needed a larger meeting place they used the hall of the Jacobin's Convent. This revolutionary group of 1,300 people emerged on July 14, 1789 as the Jacobin Club. The Illuminati controlled the Jacobin Club, and were directly responsible for fomenting the activities which developed into the French Revolution. The Illuminati's revolutionary plan in France called for the population to be reduced by one-third to one-half to ensure the stability of the new French Republic. The total death toll of the French Revolution was over 1,000,000 people. In August 1792, after the overthrow of the government, the tri-colored banner was replaced by the red flag of social revolution.

State monopoly on ID

- "Digital ID" already exists (passports, national ID cards, birth certificates).
- The state refuses to print ID for 1 billion people worldwide.
- No alternatives: Flag Theory requires an existing ID, Red Cross doesn't print IDs and non-government IDs aren't accepted.
- Cruel and fatalistic: No way to appeal or "earn" access, e.g. if you weren't registered at birth. No way to prove identity via bills, school/work records, vouches/witnesses, social media or even fingerprints.

The Alles

GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (DAP)

In July of 1919, Adolf Hitler was sent as an intelligence agent of the German Army to infiltrate the DAP and monitor its activities. Hitler quickly made an impression on the other DAP members with his oratory abilities. The DAP's chairman Anton Drexler was impressed with Hitler, and encouraged him to join the DAP. On the orders of his army superiors, Hitler applied to join the party. He was accepted into the DAP in September of 1919. Hitler initially wanted to form his own political party, but was convinced to join the DAP because it was small and he thought he could eventually become its leader. He consequently encouraged the DAP to become less of a debating society, which it had been previously, and more of an active political party. The small number of party members were quickly won over to Hitler's political beliefs. With the support of Drexler, Hitler became chief of propaganda for the DAP in early 1920.

WORKS FOR THE STATE

The vast majority of the disputes that the police initiate on behalf of their employer are also adjudicated by their employer, where the plaintiff, the judge, the antagonist (the police) and the only witness (also the police), all represent the same party, and, since no corpus delicti, mens rea or acts reus can be produced, doesn't technically qualify to be heard according to its own "laws". The State therefore is indistinguishable from a criminal cartel.

LEAGUE OF THE JUST

Wilhelm Weitling

The League of the Just eventually adopted a pyramidal structure inspired by the Italian Masonic revolutionary secret society, the Carbonari. Their long-term goal was to establish a "Social Republic" in the German states. The most prominent leader within the League of the Just was Wilhelm Weitling. Weitling, a German radical political activist and one of the first theorists of Communism, proclaimed himself a "Social Luther," and denounced private property. Many members of the League of the Just were involved in the Blanquist Revolt of May 12, 1839. This led to the group being expelled by the French government. The League proceeded to move to London, where they continued to grow, reaching a peak membership of over 1,000 members. In June 1847, the League of the Just merged with the Communist Correspondence Committee, an organization led by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, to form the Communist League. The Communist League tasked Marx and Engels with writing a political platform. The resulting document was The Communist Manifesto.

In his motion and reply pleading (McCawley Decl., Exhibit 8, Reply in Support of Motion to Compel), Dershowitz argued that Cassell and Edwards' actions throughout the case constituted a waiver of attorney-client privilege.

Cassell and Edwards responded, arguing that Ms. Giuffre was not a party of the defamation action and that she was the only person who could waive her privilege. McCawley Decl., Exhibit 7 at 4-6, Response in Opposition to Motion to Compel. Cassell and Edwards also argued that there had been no waiver because confidential attorney-client communications with Ms. Giuffre were not "at issue" in the defamation case. Id. at 6-9. McCawley Decl., Exhibit 9, Sur-Reply in Support Opposition to Motion to Compel. Cassell and Edwards also explained that communications with Ms. Giuffre were protected not only beginning in March 2014, but even earlier than that date when Ms. Giuffre understood that she was obtaining legal services from Cassell and Edwards. Id. at 1.

Following this extensive briefing on waiver issues,[6] on December 8, 2015, the Florida Court (Lynch, J.) ruled, denying Dershowitz's argument that attorney-client privilege had been waived. McCawley Decl., Exhibit 10, Order Denying Motion to Compel. Specifically, the Court denied the motion to compel, explaining "Pre March 2014 communications are protected by the work product privilege and the witness has not waived the communications that were protected by the attorney-client privilege. Also, there was no waiver by the [Cassell and Edwards] by filing suit." Id. at 1.

BOLSHEVISM

LENIN & THE BOLSHEVIK REVOLUTION

By the beginning of the February Revolution, the leading figures of the Bolshevik faction were mostly in exile, including Lenin, who was exiled in Switzerland. After a highly-secretive journey through Europe, Lenin was smuggled back into Russia on April 16, 1917. Upon his return, Lenin immediately formulated a new program of action for the Bolshevik party called the April Theses, in which he demanded transfer of power to the Soviets "in the interests of the proletariat and peasantry." Faced with resistance even among other supporters of Bolshevism, Lenin managed to institute his plan with the support of the lower classes. Lenin rejected the critical arguments of his political opponents regarding Russia's unpreparedness for a Socialist revolution and the inevitability of a civil war. In April 1917, the split of the Russian Social Democratic Labor Party was finalized. Lenin's April Theses received the support of the majority of delegates, and the Bolsheviks took over the Russian government.

On December 30, 2014, Cassell and Edwards filed a Motion Pursuant to Rule 21 for Joinder in the Action on behalf two additional victims: Jane Doe 3 and Jane Doe 4. (Jane Doe 3, Virginia Giuffre, subsequently decided to reveal her name). The joinder motion argued that Jane Does 3 and 4 should be allowed to join the two existing plaintiffs in the action because they had suffered the same violations of their rights under the CVRA. McCawley Decl., Exhibit 2, Jane Does' 3 and 4 Joinder Motion.[2] To establish that they were "victims" of Epstein's sex crimes with standing to join the suit, Jane Does 3 and 4 alleged that they had suffered sexual abuse from Epstein. For example, Jane Doe 3 alleged that she had been forced by Epstein to have sexual relations with various persons, including Alan Dershowitz – who had been one of Epstein's defense attorneys negotiating the non-prosecution deal and arranging to keep it secret from the victims. McCawley Decl., Exhibit 2 at 4. Jane Doe 3 also alleged that Defendant (i.e., Ghislaine Maxwell) had participated in the sexual abuse of Jane Doe 3. Id. at 4-5.

After Dershowitz also filed a motion to intervene to contest the allegations (DE 282), Jane Doe 3 filed a response to Dershowitz's intervention motion. McCawley Decl., Exhibit 3, Response to Motion to Intervene.[3] The response explained that the allegations against Dershowitz were relevant to at least eight separate issues in the CVRA case. Id. at 18-26. The response also explained some of the evidence supporting the allegations against Dershowitz, including:

- sworn testimony from one of Epstein's household employees (Juan Alessi) that Dershowitz came "pretty often" to Epstein's Florida mansion and got massages while he was there;

[2] The Joinder Motion attached as an exhibit is a "corrected" motion, filed on January 2, 2015. As discussed below, several paragraphs in this motion were later stricken by Judge Marra.

[3] This document is currently restricted/under seal in the CVRA case, although an order sealing it is not found in the Court record so far as can be determined. In light of the sealing of the document, we have marked aspects of this pleading dealing with the document as confidential.

COMMUNISTS BECOMING "GOD":

THE SOCIALIST "NEW ORDER" OF MASTERS AND SLAVES

It was even incredibly dangerous to be the first to stop applauding during a political speech in the Soviet Union. To cease applause meant to the Soviets that you were a dissident. People clapped for so long at a speech that sometimes a bell would have to be rung to let them know they could stop. Consequence for insufficient applause was severe. After a tribute to Stalin was proposed at a speech in Moscow, the crowd continued to applaud for 11 minutes straight. No one in the audience had the courage to stop, so people clapped until their hands were red. Finally, one man sat down, after which the entire crowd followed suit. The man who sat first was arrested and sentenced to 10 years in a gulag.

COMMUNIST MANIFESTO

The Communist Manifesto, originally The Manifesto of the Communist Party, is a political pamphlet written by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, commissioned by the Communist League and originally published in London in 1848. The text is the first and most systematic attempt by Marx and Engels to codify for widespread consumption the core historical materialist idea that, as stated in the text's opening words, "The history of all hitherto existing society is the history of class struggles," in which social classes are defined by the relationship of people to the means of production. Marx and Engels combine materialism with the Hegelian dialectical method to analyze the development of European society through its modes of production. Marx and Engels assert that capitalism is marked by the exploitation of proletariat (working-class wage-laborers) by the ruling-class bourgeoisie.

GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (DAP)

In February 1920, Hitler, along with Anton Drexler and Gottfried Feder, drafted a 25-point manifesto, which summed up the DAP's political views, including an expansionist foreign policy, the nullification of the Treaty of Versailles, the creation of a "Greater Germany," and exclusion of Jews from German citizenship. On February 24, 1920, Hitler revealed the DAP's new manifesto in a speech at a DAP rally in Munich to over 2,000 people. On the same day, the DAP was officially renamed the National Socialist German Workers' Party (Nationalsozialistische Deutsche Arbeiterpartei, or NSDAP) in an attempt to make the party more broadly appealing to larger segments of the population. The name was intended to draw upon both left-wing and right-wing ideals, with "Socialist" and "Workers" appealing to the left, and "National" and "German" appealing to the right.

CHINESE COMMUNISM

The CCP kills thousands of people every year using firing squads, lethal injections and mobile death vans. Firing squad executions were said to have been discontinued in 2010, but there are many examples that this practice continues. Lethal injections have taken over as the main form of execution in modern China due to its cheaper cost and more secretive nature. Lethal injections were legalized by the CCP in the 1990s, and since 2003, are sometimes administered via the CCP's "mobile execution vans," which allow the execution of prisoners without having to transport them to a jail. Enemies of the State are loaded into a van, strapped to a table, and administered lethal injection. Organs are then harvested from executed prisoners without permission, for use in medical and scientific experiments. Contrary to what one may think, members of the public in China aren't even bothered by such forms of execution by the CCP, but rather are largely in support of it. The true numbers of those killed by the Chinese Communist Party every year are thought to be staggeringly high, but the China's Communist regime keeps those numbers closely concealed as state secrets.

UKRAINIAN AZOV BATTALION

The Azov Battalion's main Brigade Patch displays the symbol of the Wolfsangel (Wolf's Anchor). The Wolfsangel was the "Gibor" Rune, the final Rune of the Armanen Futarkh Rune system of Guido von List, which represented the Norse wolf-god of destruction, Fenriz, and the Ragnarök, the End of the World. It was the main symbol used by the Nazi's Waffen-SS 2nd Panzer Division, which took part in several major battles on the Eastern Front during World War II. Even more blatantly, the Azov Battalion has openly displayed both the Nazi Swastika and the symbol of The Black Sun on both its military regalia and its propaganda publications.

DID YOU KNOW?

Diamonds are neither rare, nor valuable. In one of the most successful ad campaigns of all time, De Beers claimed men should spend one month's salary on a diamond ring. Then they raised their prices, restricted their supply, and created an illusion that generations of people still believe to be a mandatory part of the marriage process.

GUIDO VON LIST
WOTANISM & ARMANISM

Prominent members of the Guido von List Society included many influential German occultists, including Friedrich Wannieck, Philipp Stauff, Eberhard von Brockhusen, Karl Hellwig, Georg Hauerstein, and Bernhard Koerner, some of whom were also founding members of the Reichshammerbund and Germanenorden occult societies. Through the Germanenorden's Munich offshoot, the Thule Society, a lineage can be drawn directly between the List Society and the early Nazi Party as it was established after World War I. Some historical scholars contend that List's vision of a future German Empire constituted a blueprint for the coming Nazi regime.

GO BACK.
WE FUCKED UP EVERYTHING.

1 think I met Prince Andrew in 2001. And Glenn Dubin
2 and Stephen Kaufmann were, like I said, the first
3 people I was sent out to after my training. So I
4 don't know. I'm not going to give you an exact time
5 if I don't know it.
6 Q I asked you the relative order.
7 A And I'm trying to give you it.
8 Q And where does Alan Dershowitz fit into 9 that group of people?
10 A Same. I can't tell you piece by piece by 11 piece who -- I know Glenn Dubin was first.
12 Q Okay.
13 A And I know Stephen Kaufmann was one of the 14 first I was sent to. Alan Dershowitz could have been 15 between there. Between, sorry, between Glenn and 16 Stephen. The first time I was with Alan Dershowitz
17 was in New York, so I wasn't actually sent to him.
18 It actually happened at one of Jeffrey's residences.
19 (Ms. McCawley left the deposition.)
20 A So it's very hard for me to 21 chronologically give you each person individually.
22 Q (BY MS. MENNINGER) Okay. Name the other
23 politically connected and financially powerful people
24 that Ghislaine Maxwell told you to go have sex with?
25 A Again, I'm going to tell you "they"

1 because that's how it went. They instructed me to go
2 to George Mitchell, Jean Luc Brunel, Bill Richardson,
3 another prince that I don't know his name. A guy
4 that owns a hotel, a really large hotel chain, I
5 can't remember which hotel it was. Marvin Minsky.
6 There was, you know, another foreign 7 president, I can't remember his name. He was 8 Spanish. There's a whole bunch of them that I
9 just -- it's hard for me to remember all of them.
10 You know, I was told to do something by these people
11 constantly, told to -- my whole life revolved around 12 just pleasing these men and keeping Ghislaine and 13 Jeffrey happy. Their whole entire lives revolved 14 around sex.
15 They call massages sex. They call
16 modeling sex. They call --
17 Q I asked you the names for people. Are you 18 going to tell me any other names or is that all of 19 them?
20 A I'm trying to think. That's the answer
21 I'm trying to give to you. It's that it's so hard to 22 just keep naming and naming and naming.
23 Q All right.
24 A A lot of times I would be introduced to 25 them. I didn't know --

1 Q If you're going to tell me more names,
2 please continue your answer.
3 A I'm trying to think.
4 Q If you're just going to talk --
5 A I'm sorry. I'm trying to think.
6 Q Okay. Let's take a break and then you can

15 A Yes.
16 Q You understand her to be my client,
17 correct?
18 A Yes.
19 Q I'm here today to talk to you about your 20 allegations against Ghislaine Maxwell.
21 Do you understand that?
22 A Yes.
23 Q I want you to tell me a single time that 24 you recall Ghislaine Maxwell using words to you and

3 Ghislaine Maxwell?
4 MR. EDWARDS: Objection. Asked and

6 To the extent that she can answer the 7 question, I'd ask that she answer the question.
8 A I have answered the question. The 9 question that you're asking me is Ghislaine. And 10 Ghislaine and Jeffrey worked together. They were one 11 and the same of persons. They both directed me to do 12 this. They both directed me to report back to them.
13 They were both the same.

ORDER FOLLOWERS

THOSE WHO ARE MOST CULPABLE FOR THE CREATION OF TOTALITARIAN REGIMES

"Following Orders" means doing what you are told to do, without judging for yourself whether or not the action you are being ordered to carry out is morally Right or Wrong. If an individual is following orders, it is a complete impossibility for that individual to be exercising Conscience, since – by definition – exercising Conscience means that one is willfully choosing for themselves Right Action over Wrong Action.

The Anti-Media

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

On February 27, 1933 a fire broke out in the German parliamentary building, the Reichstag. Widely recognized as a False Flag operation, this fire gave Hitler a pretext for suppressing his political opponents. The Reichstag Fire Decree was issued the following day, which suspended most civil liberties within Germany. The NSDAP won the parliamentary election on March 5, 1933 with 44% of votes. On March 23, 1933, the German parliament passed the Enabling Act, which gave the cabinet the right to enact laws without the consent of parliament.

1 talking on the phone about Frederic Fekkai?
2 A. Yes.
3 MS. MENNINGER: Objection, leading.
4 BY MS. McCAWLEY:
5 Q. What did you hear?
6 A. I heard him call someone, and say, Fekkai
7 is in Hawaii. Can we find some girls for him?
8 Q. And what was your reaction to that?
9 A. Well, I was massaging and I didn't have a 10 reaction. I tried to remain reactionless the whole 11 five years.
12 Q. Did Jeffrey ever take you shopping?
13 A. Yes.
14 Q. Can you describe for me what happened?
15 A. Sure. He took me to Victoria's Secret. I 16 believe he picked out everything and went into the 17 room with me, the fitting room, which was very odd.
18 Q. Did he make any comments about being in 19 the fitting room with you?
20 A. He joked that one time he was in there 21 with another girl, and she said something like 22 "Dad." But that's all I recall.
23 Q. Did Jeffrey ever talk to you -- let me
24 back up a moment.

COMMUNISM DID NOT FALL WITH THE BERLIN WALL

Communism is still alive and well throughout the entire world. Driven largely by Marxist Socialism, there is an international network of Communist organizations with tens of millions of members operating throughout the world today. Communists, Socialists, and those who support the ideologies which have led to the extermination of tens of millions of people in the 20th century alone, are everywhere among us, and still cling to this destructive cult with absolute religious fervor.

the hypercross and spin

The Hypercross is created by starting with a regular three dimensional cube.

First imagine that the three dimensional cube is in front of you. Then, as you turn it to one side or the other, you see it move into parogee (two cubes of the same size sharing one common wall), until finally, looking at it from the opposite side you were before, you see it at apogee (a cube within a cube) and now you are holding a hypercube.

The Hypercube is a fourth dimensional cube, or, in other words, a geometric expression of the force of time.

Now turn this hypercube around, so that you see each of the six possible cubes that can be thus expanded from each face of the first cube, until you see all six at parogee.

This is the hypercross. Next take the hypercross apart into three pairs of cubes. Then, instead of a three dimensional cube over time in the center, substitute a sphere, to represent particles.

Lastly observe how each of the cubes turns its own way, and these spin the particle.

THE NAZI "FINAL SOLUTION": MASS HUMAN SACRIFICE

Between 1941 and 1945, Nazi Germany and its collaborators systematically murdered two-thirds of Europe's Jewish population. The murders were carried out primarily through mass shootings and poison gas in extermination camps chiefly located in Poland at Auschwitz, Treblinka, Belzec, Sobibor, and Chełmno, and within Germany at Dachau (originally a detainment camp for German nationals detained for political reasons). On November 9th and 10th 1938, the Nazi regime orchestrated a nationwide pogrom called Kristallnacht (Night of Broken Glass) against Jews. Also known as the Novemberpogrome (November pogrom), it was carried out by the Nazi's paramilitary forces, the Sturmabteilung and Schutzstaffel. The name Kristallnacht comes from the shards of broken glass that littered the streets after the windows of Jewish-owned stores, buildings, and synagogues were smashed. Jewish homes, hospitals and schools were ransacked as attackers demolished buildings with sledgehammers. At least 90 Jews were murdered, over 7,000 Jewish businesses were damaged or destroyed, and 30,000 Jewish men were arrested and incarcerated in concentration camps, with over 10,000 interned at Dachau.

EXTERNAL EVIDENCE OF INJURY, NECK:

A length of 1/2" rubber tubing is wrapped three times around the mid-neck. The left end of the rubber tubing is wrapped once around the right end and tucked beneath the loop. This half knot holds the rubber tubing extremely tightly around the neck. The rubber tubing is removed to reveal overlapping 1/2" to 1/4" furrows in the mid-neck corresponding with the loops of the tubing. The edges of the furrows are smooth. The depths of the furrows are brown-tan. No satellite scratches or other forms of injury are identified at the edges of the furrows. Of course not, he was knocked out and his hands were bound behind him

EXTERNAL EVIDENCE OF INJURY, RIGHT ARM:

There is a roughly triangular red-brown abrasion which is horizontally oriented in the right upper arm, measuring 2" x 1/4". What was this from? a "scant" fright?

AUTHORITARIANISM

Authoritarianism is a false religious belief system based upon the idea that some human beings have somehow been magically gifted with the right to control and command others.
The belief in human authority is the basis for the belief in the moral legitimacy of all forms of Government. Those who believe in human authority operate under a religiously-induced delusion. The belief in authority is an illusion which can only operate within a human psyche that has become diseased through indoctrination and mind control. Authority is and has always been based entirely in violence, and built upon the erroneous and dogmatic belief that some people are Masters who have the "moral right" to issue commands, while others are Slaves who have a "moral obligation" to obey the Masters.

All gun control is an infringement.
What about common sense gun laws?
Did I stutter, bitch?

ANTI-CHRIST

My personal concept of an Anti-Christ is a being who is responsible for the spread of false and harmful (if acted upon) information across a significant portion of the human population, and the subsequent ubiquitous spread of that deceptive information throughout the majority of humanity. The resultant behavior conducted by the population leads human society into chaos and degradation, and away from the collective evolution of humanity through the attainment of higher consciousness (often referred to as "Christ Consciousness"). Deceivers of this kind do not even necessarily do this with conscious intention, although many do. Some Anti-Christs are "useful dupes," tasked with the charge of being the messenger or pen-man, so that the true architects of evil remain hidden, or occulted.

THE KYBALION

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

On October 31, 1922, the National Fascist Party came into power in Italy under the dictator Benito Mussolini. Hitler was inspired by Mussolini and the Italian Fascists, and began to adopt elements of their form of fascism for the Nazi Party. Hitler borrowed their use of the straight-armed salute as the Nazi Salute. When the Fascists took control of Italy through their coup d'état called the "March On Rome," Hitler began planning his own coup less than a month later. By November 1923, Hitler had decided that the time was right for an attempt to overthrow the Weimar Republic and seize power in Munich.

UKRAINIAN AZOV BATTALION

The Azov Battalion's main Brigade Patch displays the symbol of the Wolfsangel (Wolf's Anchor). The Wolfsangel was the "Gibor" Rune, the final Rune of the Armanen Futarkh Rune system of Guido von List, which represented the Norse wolf-god of destruction, Fenriz, and the Ragnarök, the End of the World. It was the main symbol used by the Nazi's Waffen-SS 2nd Panzer Division, which took part in several major battles on the Eastern Front during World War II. Even more blatantly, the Azov Battalion has openly displayed both the Nazi Swastika and the symbol of The Black Sun on both its military regalia and its propaganda publications.

I don't know yet what the connection is between the mine & the Caracol Complex, but they're suspiciously close geographically. It may just be that they were both easy money & nothing more. But they were initiated the same year??

Mining was set to commence in 2012, but the Haitian Senate opposed it. President Michel Martelly did not, but has been unable to make progress in the Haitian Mining Conventions & laws in order for VCS Mining to move ahead, as they had hoped for before Martelly left office. Magically, 4 months before the elections last summer, a hand-picked Martelly successor appeared to take over as President. There is no social or environmental impact assessment to date and such a mining project will massively destroy scarce water resources for local farmers, while at the same time, literally, flattening the entire mountain the mine sits on.

Several articles have pointed out that the mining activity at Morne Bossa over the last two decades oddly corresponds to the first & second coups of former President Aristide. Haitian mining laws were revised during both coups when Aristide was ousted from office. Bill Clinton's administration backed those coups throwing Aristide out.

This article makes a great point: "It doesn’t matter

WHITE HOUSE OFFICE - EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue NW., Washington, DC 20500

January 30, 2019 - 3:30AM EST

To: Scott Pace, Executive Secretary of the National Space Council

*cc: President Donald J. Trump, Vice-President Mike Pence

Due to leaks of DIRDs (Defense Intelligence Research Documents) from DIA AAWSAP (James T. Lacatski - ATTN: CLAR/DWO-3, Bldg 6000, Washington, DC 20340-5100), and exposures associated with AATIP (Luis Elizondo), critical international defense capabilities have been exposed in relation to new science applications, and groundbreaking, disruptive, emerging technologies, which must be developed first and most robustly and optimally with the United States of America and allies (Canada, and potentially all of Five Eyes, or as necessary, all of NATO). Failure at this pivotal moment could have stupefying implications for the United States of America and her allies in all major geopolitical arenas, including but not limited to global politics, finance, and national security.

No doubt there is a frantic international race to acquire the technologies displayed by the Advanced Aerospace Vehicles (AAVs) that penetrate our atmosphere, airspace, and oceans with impunity. Given the state of fidelity of modern surveillance and sensor equipment, there is no longer any way to deny their existence.

Understandably, their presence spurs every major nation's desire for such useful and dynamic abilities. The purpose of this paper is to identify these abilities, as well as to show that Geometric Energy Corporation (GEC) in Calgary, Alberta, Canada, and our partner Public Benefit Corporation in Huntsville, Alabama - the Institute for Exotic Science - are uniquely placed, equipped, staffed, and otherwise prepared to provide crucial data and insight into the topic while being uniquely prepared to deliver such crucial new technology to benefit the United States of America and her allies.

GEC has 3 main areas of value in this regard:

1) State-of-the-art equipment and facilities at a variety of locations as well as facility use access in relation to ongoing theoretical and experimental development.

2) Active research into revolutionary power, control, and propulsion systems with immense value and usefulness to the United States of America and her allies.

The Bolshevik Revolution was secretly supported and funded by an occult group of Internationalists (Globalists) called the Committee of 300 and its Social Engineering think tank, the Tavistock Institute of Human Relations. The Tavistock Institute of Human Relations is located in London, UK. It branched from the Tavistock Clinic, a mental health trust founded in London in 1920, and was formally established as a separate entity in September 1947. While not existing under its current name until the 1940s, the origin of the Tavistock Institute goes back to the creation of Wellington House, Britain's war propaganda bureau during World War I.

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

In 1786, the government of Bavaria gathered all of the confiscated documents and published them in a book called Original Writings of the Order and Sect of the Illuminati, which was circulated to every government and crowned head in Europe – including France – to warn them of the impending danger. Leaders of the Illuminati were arrested and interrogated. However, these revelations and the publication of their documents did little to alert the public because of their unbelievable claims. On November 15, 1790, Duke Dalberg issued another edict, whereby anyone found to be an active member of the Illuminati was to be put to death.

Re: Giuffre v. Maxwell,
Case No.: 15-cv-07433-RWS

Dear Judge Sweet,

This is a reply letter in support of Ms. Giuffre's letter motion to allow for the newly-discovered witness, Sarah Ransome, to be called as a witness at trial because she can testify about Defendant's involvement in Epstein's sex trafficking ring based on first-hand experiences and first-hand observations.

Defendant Violated Rule 26 By Failing To Disclose This Critical Witness

Defendant argues that Ms. Giuffre is somehow to blame for the fact that Sarah Ransome is only now being discussed as a witness in this case. But Ms. Giuffre only recently learned about this witness because Defendant failed to properly disclose her months earlier. In her response, Defendant does not address the fact that Ms. Ransome and Ms. Maxwell know each other. Indeed, Defendant does not address the fact that Ms. Ransome and she spent time together on Mr. Epstein's private island, as reflected in the flight logs showing Ms. Ransome flying to and from the island (where Ms. Maxwell was present):

We have seen the truth! What more can you tell us? What more can we do?

Come with me, brothers in light, and I will show you the glow of the Monad... There is so much to see.

Ignore the Red Pill, cattle.
Come with me, and I will show you the dark truth he ignores...
W-what?

Indigo Pill!
Be gone before I am forced to dispel you myself!

I have seen you in my visions, Red Pill. You say the worthy possession is that of oneself... but you fail to realize that, like the universe, the self is a passing thing too. All shall be frozen dust in the end, and the astral plane, too, will die.

Control of oneself is equally in folly as control of the entire materium... Both shall pass, and nothing is permanent. Join me, Red Pill. Together we may use our powers to conquer this lifeless husk of a universe.
Together we may reap infinite pleasure from this passing plane, and rule as gods.

You speak nothing but lies, Indigo Pill.
The Monad is infinite and eternal.

NOW BEGONE!

Who was that!?
Let us begone from this tainted place, my kindred souls...
Your spiritual journey begins now.

CARBONARI

The Carbonari ("Charcoal Burners") was a revolutionary secret society active in Italy from about 1800 to 1831. The roots of the Carbonari can be traced back to southeastern France around the beginning of the French Revolution. It became a powerful force in the European revolutionary struggles of the early nineteenth century. The Carbonari was probably derived from the Order of Woodcutters, a fraternal secret society founded by Freemasons in the 1740s in Paris.

SOVIET COMMUNISM

As a Marxist and an anti-capitalist, Stalin believed in an inevitable "class war" between the world's proletariat and bourgeoisie. He believed that the working classes would prove successful in this struggle and would establish a "dictatorship of the proletariat," regarding the Soviet Union as an example of such a State. He also believed that this proletarian state would need to introduce repressive measures against "foreign and domestic enemies" to ensure the full crushing of the classes that supported private property ownership, and thus the class war would greatly intensify with the advance of Socialism. As a propaganda tool, Stalin employed the tactic of "the shaming of enemies," which would be used to blame all economic, political and military failures, and all hardships endured by the populace, on political opponents of the Communists. Stalin's Soviet state would also utilize a new standardized economic system that was industrialized, collectivized, centrally planned, and technologically advanced.

COMMUNIST SECRET POLICE

The KGB (Committee for State Security), was the main security agency for the Soviet Union from 1954 to 1991. The KGB was a direct successor of preceding agencies such as the Cheka and NKVD. It carried out internal security, foreign intelligence, counter-intelligence and secret police functions for the Soviet Union. It guarded the leadership of the Central Committee of the Communist Party and the Soviet government, and combatted nationalist, dissident, religious and anti-Soviet activities. Similar agencies operated in each of the nations of the Soviet Union.

The Ministry for State Security (Ministerium für Staatssicherheit), commonly known as the Stasi, was the state security-service of East Germany, a Soviet satellite State from 1950 to 1990. Headquartered in East Berlin, the Stasi's function in East Germany resembled that of the KGB in the Soviet Union. It served as a means of maintaining state authority, and it was referred to as the "Shield and Sword of the Party." The Stasi maintained surveillance files on millions of East Germans, and used a network of civilian informants to acquire information of potential dissidents. The Stasi contributed to the arrest of approximately 250,000 people in East Germany during its existence.

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

Part of Hitler's appeal to a frightened and demoralized middle class was his promise to "restore law and order." In the July 1932 Reichstag election, the Nazis won 37% of the vote and became the largest party in the German parliament by a wide margin. The German people voted for Hitler primarily because of his promises to revive the economy, restore German greatness and save Germany from Communism. Hitler was appointed as Chancellor of Germany on January 30, 1933.

Defendant's [redacted] email account was part of Epstein's [redacted] account through which he communicated with his employees and other members of his household, including his co-conspirators Sarah Kellen, Nadia Marcinkova, and the Defendant. This email account likely has (or had) myriad of communications between and among Defendant and Jeffrey Epstein, Defendant and Sarah Kellen, Defendant and Nadia Marcinkova, and others. This email account is the one most likely to have the most relevant documents in this case, as it was used by Jeffrey Epstein and his sex trafficking organization. The fact that this account - an account created for the sole purpose of enabling Defendant and others to communicate with Jeffrey Epstein - has no communications with Epstein or the other co-conspirators, is extremely strong indicia that someone destroyed those email communications. Their destruction warrants an adverse inference instruction. And, at the very least, the Court should direct Defendant to retrieve her data from the Citrix server or any other applicable server upon which the mindspring.com account was hosted.

The [redacted] account bears Defendant's initials, and, again, listed as part of her contact information gathered by the police from Epstein's home, and turned over to the Palm Beach County State Attorney as part of the investigation and prosecution of Epstein:

Introduction

A natural phenomenon is a non-artificial event in the physical sense, and therefore, not produced by humans, although it may affect humans (e.g. bacteria, ageing, natural disasters).

Common examples of natural phenomena include volcanic eruptions, lightning and thunder, earth quakes, weather, and decay.Most natural phenomena are harmless such as rain.

Some natural phenomenons such as volcanic eruptions, earth quakes, tsunami and tornadoes are considered dangerous and might lead to death on large scale.

On October 12, 1913, Woodrow Wilson signed the Revenue Act of 1913, a bill that would lead to NAFTA, GATT and the World Trade Organization (WTO), and create the Federal Income Tax, fulfilling Plank # 2 of The Communist Manifesto in the United States. On December 23, 1913, Wilson signed into law the Federal Reserve Act, which created a new central bank system in United States, the Federal Reserve System, fulfilling Plank #5 of The Communist Manifesto in the United States. The deceptive language of the Federal Reserve Act was written under the guidance of Edward Bernays and Walter Lippman of Wellington House. Bernays and Lippman had previously set up the National Citizen's League with lawyer and self-identified Zionist, Samuel Untermeyer, as its chairman, to promote the Federal Reserve Bank, the mechanism which would go on to deceptively secure control of America's currency and transfer it to a private monopoly.

[Question] Why would there be 30ish wifi networks seemingly emanating from under a concrete pad?

Hi, For the record this is a serious post, so please no tin foil hat comments, etc....

Recently I lived on a semi urban farm property for a few months, and I noticed some very unusual things that I won't get into here. What I'd like to know is what reason there might be for somewhere in the neighborhood of 25-30 low-strength wifi networks (all with exactly the same signal strength, peaking at the same point location) to be seemingly emanating from underneath a concrete pad which is supposed to be simply covering gravel and dirt?

To clarify, I used wifi analyzer to ensure that it wasn't just a coincidental situation where lots of neighborhood networks happened to have similar signal strength due to the distances they were from their sources. I walked in concentric circles with wifi analyzer running, and the further I got from the point location on the concrete pad mentioned above, the weaker the signals became.

For example, if they were neighborhood networks, you would expect some to get stronger as you approached the property line on one side, and some to get weaker. No matter which direction you went, the signal strength degraded in proportion to the distance you were from this spot. Eg at 20 feet from the spot at 12, 3, 6 and 9 o clock they would be the same strength, as would they be at 40 feet (weaker than at 20, however). there were residential homes on two sides of the property, but to the rear of the property there was a large county park and to the front there was another larger farm, where there were clearly no wifi routers.

The next peculiar thing, is that these networks SSID's would change every 5 minutes or so. They also covered the entire 2.4g spectrum from channel 1-14 and had total coverage over the entire spectrum.

as you watched the signal strength diagram on wifi analyzer in real time, there were peaks and valleys in signal strength, but they were all coordinated across these low strength networks. There was a single wifi network (the company network on that property I was living on) that would peak and valley in signal strength exactly in time with these low strength networks that would change their names regularly, and that covered the spectrum at exactly the same signal strength.

Also, I used a seek thermal imaging camera to check out the peak signal strength point location on that concrete pad, and the temperature at that point was about 30 degrees F hotter than the surrounding concrete.

I drilled a hole through that part of the pad, and drilled a couple other holes randomly at different spots on that same concrete pad. I poured water down all the holes, and only the one at the peak signal strength location would drain and drain without filling up. the others all filled up after about 1/2 liter of water was poured into them. Any idea what that means? Thanks!

[Question] Why would there be 30ish wifi networks seemingly emanating from under a concrete pad?

You can, but i couldn't Crack the passwords at the time. I'm no longer in the area. Had to flee to be honest.

There are indeed buildings that could be hiding vents. https://imgur.com/lLCSqi2

These buildings are about 150-250 feet away. I built them with my boss on concrete pads that were laid by seemingly normal contractors, but the footprint had been prepared and leveled by very shady tongan contractors before I arrived. Supposedly, before i arrived on site they demoed a warehouse where the big building stands and pulled out HUGE liquid tanks that would have left a very large open space in the ground after removal.

Also, very curiously a municipal storm drain running adjacent to the building had been removed during the site prep and another one installed on the opposite property line, and the new one was significantly larger than the old one. The old one was too small for a person to go into, but the new one is about the size of a door.

If you look at Google maps, you can see the old storm drain on the property line between 577 and 567 pakala st, honolulu 96825

I reckon that if you wanted to excavate an access to the space mentioned above, an old storm drain would be a good way to do it.

Also, i noticed a truck making multiple late night trips for many days removing lots of busted up new looking concrete from the neighbors city trash bins. The property i lived on and that neighbors property are lease holds held by the same person (not my old boss).

Ive also recently connected my old boss to ebay accounts selling "faulty hard drives" and "faulty" electronics for strange prices. The buyer feedback is very bizarrely enthusiastic and there are lots of disturbing mentions of "very happy kids" and "no fakes"

I think i stumbled on a possible human trafficking and child p ring.

Agorism already works

- Agorism is not theoretical. Right now, sellers earn profits, bypass bureaucracy and avoid censorship, and buyers get what they need with cash or crypto.
- Many motivations to avoid state bureaucracy: Time/cost savings, bypass restrictions, financial inclusion, privacy, safety, humanitarian or ideological reasons, etc.
- "Will it work?" Gray markets work and have worked since decades.

OPERATION PAPERCLIP

Following their military defeat in World War II, many Nazis fled to parts of Europe, Africa and South America. What is lesser historically known is that many of them were deliberately brought into the United States by a top-secret U.S. Government program. Operation Paperclip was a secret United States intelligence program in which thousands of German scientists, engineers, technicians, medical professionals, and educators were taken from Nazi Germany to the United States between 1945 and 1959 for government employment in their respective fields. Operation Paperclip was overseen by the Joint Intelligence Objectives Agency, and largely carried out by special agents of the U.S. Army Counterintelligence Corps. Many of the personnel brought into the U.S. were members of the Nazi Party, and some were even Nazi Party leaders.

BOLSHEVISM

LENIN & THE BOLSHEVIK REVOLUTION

Adopting the Leninist slogan "Plunder the Loot", the Bolsheviks proceeded to carry out complete confiscation of private property, which they considered to be "acquired through the exploitation of the working people." However, the Bolsheviks never truly determined whether the property they confiscated was obtained through exploitation or if in fact the owners adequately paid for hired labor, or whether the owners had created the property with their own labor. In 1918, Social Democrat Alexander Parvus described Bolshevism thusly: "The essence of Bolshevism is simple – to ignite the revolution everywhere, not choosing the time, regardless of the political situation and other historical realities. Whoever is against is the enemy – and the conversation with the enemies is short – are subject to urgent and unconditional destruction."

NATURAL LAW IS THE MASTER KEY

The fundamental nature of the Human Condition of Slavery is that most human beings do not have a full and accurate understanding of Objective Morality – the definitive difference between Right behavior and Wrong behavior. This ignorance of Natural Law leads them to erroneously believe that human behaviors based upon the belief in "authority" are morally legitimate and acceptable (when they are absolutely NOT morally legitimate at all). As a result, many, many behaviors which most human beings conduct and condone are completely out of alignment with Natural Law, which leads to the continuation and furtherance of human Slavery. This dynamic is expressed in the Law of Freedom: aggregate Morality and aggregate Freedom are directly proportional to each other.

about privacy. (This Court quashed those subpoenas, see June 23, 2016, Minute Entry). Defendant cannot argue to the Court in June that it is appropriate for her to receive unfettered access to every email Ms. Giuffre ever sent or received from two accounts, and then, in August, argue to the Court that it is inappropriate for a neutral third-party to review Defendant's electronic documents for deleted (or unproduced) responsive documents - a process through which, importantly, neither Ms. Giuffre nor the Court gets access to all of Defendant's data (unlike Defendant's subpoenas which would give all data directly to her). To the contrary, neither Ms. Giuffre nor the Court would ever see or know about Defendant's personal data unless it is non-privileged, and directly responsive to the requests for production that this Court has already, specifically allowed.

JOSEPH GOEBBELS

As the war drew to a close and Nazi Germany faced defeat, Goebbels and his family joined Hitler in his war bunker in Berlin. Hitler committed suicide on April 30, 1945 (Eve of Walpurgisnacht). In accordance with Hitler's will, Goebbels succeeded him as Chancellor and served only one day in this post. The following day, May 1, 1945 (Walpurgisnacht), Goebbels and his wife committed suicide after killing their six children with a cyanide compound.

The Stanford Prison Experiment was a psychological experiment conducted in August 1971 by a research team at Stanford University led by psychology professor Philip Zimbardo. The experiment was a two-week simulation of a prison environment that examined the psychological dynamics of such an environment upon its participants' behaviors. Participants were recruited from the local community to take part in a "psychological study of prison life." Volunteers were then randomly assigned to act as either "prisoners" or "prison guards." The volunteers selected to be guards were given uniforms specifically to de-individuate them, and were instructed to do what was necessary to maintain control over the prisoners and prevent them from escaping. Over just five days, the guards' abuse of the prisoners became so brutal that the experiment had to be stopped prematurely. This showed that given "authority" over others, most human beings are extremely quick to completely abuse that power and turn brutally violent toward their subordinates.

PHIL SCHNEIDER: DECLASSIFIED

F.B.I. Declassified Philip Schneider Documents Prove Invaluable to History and Field of Ufology.

Words: Joe from the Carolinas, Burke W. and Lisa G.

Filling out massive amounts of FOIA requests, scouring databases, and piecing together Ab[Para]Normal puzzles with reason, logic, and common sense is all in day's work for the team at Joe from the Carolinas. However, getting the exclusive, first access release of information from government agency intel departments, such as the F.B.I., doesn't happen on a regular basis, or, ever for that matter. So when team members connected on the afternoon of Tuesday, September 18, 2018, the news of "striking information gold," was shared and marveled by all.

According to one member, "The magnitude that this information was going to have on the field of Ufology was so profound, and the knowledge that our group would be the first to disclose this inwformation was surreal." Joe didn't waste any time in making a plan to get the information he had just received out to the public. Within hours, he had edited a video detailing the declassified information and made it public on his YouTube Channel , titled, "Philip Schneider - Declassified Secrets Released."

Joe was more than aware of the backlash and accusations that were likely to come with the release of this material, but true to his mission of following the logic, being reasonable, and using common sense, he had no choice but to bring the information forward so the public could make their own informed decisions.

The information Joe presented was hot off the wire - literally just declassified by the F.B.I. this same day. The information was concerning the case of Phil Schneider, a self proclaimed alleged deep underground military base whistleblower from decades back. Schneider had been in ufology circles for years before his passing, and had claimed to be involved in a Military vs Alien shootout at an underground base in Dulce, New Mexico.

Joe and his team had already begun an ongoing "underground base deep dig" series on Joe's YouTube channel, and their background investigation had started turning up some serious questions about the legitimacy of Schneider's claims. Additionally, the series documents legitimate evidence for the existence of underground bases.

Although it may appear that Joe is a stone cold skeptic, that is certainly not the case. Joe's and his team's interest in this (and other) topics is not to outright debunk Phil Schneider; it is to try to establish solid foundations in all areas of the paranormal, ufology, conspiracy theories, and secret space programs in order to accurately figure out what's really going on. According to Joe, "I kind of see it like a bridge. The bridge is between blind-belief and absolute knee-jerk skepticism, and I'm neither. I am on the bridge to examine the data and see where the logic leads."

Joe shares the official correspondence with his viewers, patreon supporters , and website visitors. This is something he is well-known for – citing his sources and listing his references thoroughly to lend credibility to the information he makes public, and then he moves on to the information that will change what has been accepted by certain groups of conspiracy theorists and ufologists for decades before him.

> "IN MARCH 1975, PHIL AGREED TO BE INTERVIEWED BY THE FBI AND GAVE THEM CONSENT TO SEARCH HIS RESIDENCE."

Phil Schneider talking at the Preparedness Expo in 1995 © via YouTube

By all reasonable accounts, Schneider's fantastic stories were just that. Joe states he was shocked to learn this himself, but the document reports that on March 22nd 1975, an acquaintance of Phil Schneider turned him in to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Oregon State because Schneider claimed to be attempting to build a nuclear device, and had radioactive material in his home. Additionally, Schneider was a former inpatient at a Mental Hospital in Wilsonville, Oregon from July 1968 to January of 1969.

While at the state psychiatric hospital, Schneider was characterized as having schizophrenia, and when under stress, the FBI report states that Schneider would mutilate himself for attention and actually had self-amputated two fingers and a thumb.

It is reported that Schneider had an uncle who was a surgeon and a physician named Leo Schneider, MD. Dr. Leo Schneider had been questioned by the FBI regarding Phil's possession of radioactive material, and Leo turned over two pieces of the material which Phil had given to him to display in his medical office. Dr. Schneider also stated that Phil claimed to possess approximately 80 pounds of the radioactive material. When the F.B.I. processed it, they report that the material was examined by Ray D Paris, a radio chemist from the Environmental Radiation Surveillance Section, as well as another specialist.

Their initial examination determined that the material was uranium ore, and it was radiating at 100 Milliroentgen per hour (100 MR/HR). The experts that the FBI sent this powdered form of material to stated that prolonged exposure to, or ingestion of, this uranium ore that Phil Schneider had in his possession (and had also given to his Uncle) could be extremely hazardous.

Phil Schneider, according to this just Declassified document, had agreed to be interviewed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on March 26, 2975 about his possession of a dangerous, radioactive substance. Schneider gave the FBI consent to search his residence and they traced the source of the substance (by Phil's own report) to a man that he met in a local tavern by the name of George M.

By his own admission he did not get the material from an underground base and this uranium ore was traced back through the FBI who tracked down the guy that had sold it Phil. If you are wondering how much radioactive material Phil bought, well, the F.B.I. claimed to have removed approximately 60 pounds based on their reports. The F.B.I. was also very clear in reporting that Phil Schneider had no license to possess any type of nuclear source material. As Phil claimed to be a self-taught geologist and engineer, wouldn't a competent professional be aware of the risks of this material?

Schneider granted FBI consent to search of his room as well as the property in which he purchased the ore, and specialists' that were evaluating the area where Phil was residing detected four to five times the normal background radiation in the parking lot of the building. Materials were found in both the basement and attic, emitting 10-20 MR/HR of radiation, and were disposed of by radiation specialists. The Atomic Energy Commission was consulted regarding all materials and facts in the FBI report. Schneider's brother, a deputy sheriff named George Schnieder, in Portland, Oregon, was provided information about Phil's physical conditions and indicated that he would seek additional help for Phil.

"Immediately," Joe says he reflects upon, "how many people were exposed to the materials that Phil Schneider took with him on the ufology circuits he would speak at; conferences where he would hold up rocks and let the audience hold, interact with, and be in the vicinity of these deadly elements."

According to Phil Schneider's own report, he consented to a search, and bonafide

PHIL'S CLAIMS

HEINRICH HIMMLER
SS, AHNENERBE & TOTENKOPF

Late in the Second World War, upon realizing that the war was lost, Himmler attempted to open peace talks with the western Allies without Hitler's knowledge. Hearing of this, Hitler dismissed him from all his posts in April of 1945 and ordered his arrest. Himmler attempted to go into hiding, but was detained and then arrested by British forces once his identity became known. While in British custody, he died by suicide on May 23, 1945.

A room called Die Gruft ("The Tomb" or "The Crypt") is located directly below the Obergruppenführersaal. Its shape resembles a Mycenaean dome grave. The Gruft was probably used as an SS occult ritual chamber. At its center was the incomplete construction of the housing of an "eternal flame," which would have represented the Nazi's so-called "Thousand Year Reich." In 1935, Heinrich Himmler formed the SS-Schule Haus Wewelsburg (SS School of the House of Wewelsberg) which would offer ideological training courses for SS leaders (Reichsführerschule SS). SS leaders would gather at Wewelsburg three to four times a year for planning meetings and SS initiation ceremonies arranged by Himmler. Toward the end of World War II, Himmler ordered that Wewelsburg should become the "Reichshaus of the SS-Gruppenführer" ("Reich House of the Highest SS Leaders"). Wewelsburg was planned by Himmler and Wiligut to be the future "Center of the World," the capital of the Nazi's "New Order," and to become a planning space and ritual center for the Order of the Black Sun, the occult elite within the Nazi SS.

THE NAZI "FINAL SOLUTION": MASS HUMAN SACRIFICE

At Auschwitz, around 25% of the camp population was separated out for forced labor for the Nazi war effort. In addition to gas chambers, extermination camp victims were also killed through starvation, mass shooting and torture, and used as test subjects in deadly forced medical experimentation at Auschwitz led by Eduard Wirths and Josef Mengele. The majority of Holocaust victims died in 1942, but the killing continued right up to the end of World War II in May 1945. Not all Holocaust victims were Jews. Millions of non-Jews were also killed for their ethnic and ideological associations.

GUIDO VON LIST
WOTANISM & ARMANISM

Guido von List (October 5,1848 – May 17, 1919), was an Austrian occultist who founded a Germanic Pagan religious movement known as Wotanism, named after the Germanic Pagan god Woden (the Norse god Odin). List abandoned his family's Roman Catholic faith in childhood and devoted himself to the pre-Christian god Wotan. List claimed that Wotanism was the revival of the religion of the ancient Germanic Aryan root race. Wotanism, the exoteric form of Lists's religion, included a set of esoteric teachings of Ariosophy, which List termed Armanism.

Hitler was released from prison on December 20, 1924. On February 16, 1925, Hitler convinced German authorities to lift the ban on the Nazi Party and it was formally re-founded on February 26, 1925, with Hitler as its undisputed leader. It was at this time Hitler began referring to himself as "der Führer." Nuremberg, Germany had remained a Nazi Party stronghold during this time, so Hitler decided to hold the first Nuremberg Rally there in 1927. The Nuremberg Rallies soon became massive displays of Nazi paramilitary power and attracted many recruits to the party. By 1929, the NSDAP had 130,000 members.

Clinton Foundation Board Member Is Ex-EPA Administrator Who Used Fake Email Name 'Richard Windsor'

CHUCK ROSS
Reporter

2342

Lisa Jackson, the former Environmental Protection Agency administrator who was caught using an email account under the pseudonym "Richard Windsor," sits on the board of the Clinton Foundation, the charity of Hillary Clinton, of HDR22@clintonemail.com fame.

Jackson's — or "Windsor's" — position on the board has not been a secret, but it has received little media attention during the Clinton email scandal, which threatens to derail the Democrat's White House hopes.

Jackson's biography on the Clinton Foundation's website shows that she took her position there in 2013. The bio states that Jackson is currently vice president of environmental initiatives as Apple. It details her career at EPA but makes no mention of her shady email habits.

Jackson's tactics were not exactly the same as Clinton's. While the former secretary of state exclusively used a personal email account hosted on a server housed in her basement, Jackson used the account windsor.richard@epa.gov as a secondary email address.

Jackson and the EPA defended the use of the Windsor account at the time, saying that it was a necessary step because Jackson's regular email address was listed on the EPA's website and received an enormous amount of correspondence. Officials at the agency said that using two email addresses was not an unusual step for senior government officials. But critics countered that most secondary email account are not set up using aliases. The critics charged that using the Windsor account allowed Jackson to skirt congressional inquiries and Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) requests.

Ironically, Jackson's email chicanery prompted a Freedom of Information Act request filed with the State Department for information about Clinton's email accounts. But that request, which was filed in Dec. 2012 by the watchdog group Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington, was denied by the State Department which falsely claimed that no relevant records existed.

The State Department's inspector general found that Clinton's chief of staff, Cheryl Mills, had been made aware of the FOIA request for information on Clinton's email account. Other Clinton aides and the State Department's legal office was also informed of the FOIA. The request was still denied, however. (RELATED: State Department Gave 'Inaccurate' Response To Records Requests For Hillary's Emails)

There is some evidence in State Department records that the agency attempted to fit Clinton with a setup that was similar to Jackson's.

In an Aug. 30, 2011 email obtained last month by The Daily Caller, State's then-executive secretary Stephen Mull wrote to two Clinton aides and under secretary for management Patrick Kennedy offering to provide Clinton with a second Blackberry fixed with a state.gov email address "which would mask her identity."

Emails sent on the Blackberry would "also be subject to FOIA requests," he cautioned.

> Separately, we are working to provide the Secretary per her request a Department issued Blackberry to replace her personal unit which is malfunctioning (possibly because of her personal email server is down). We will prepare two versions for her to use – one with an operating State Department email account (which would mask her identity, but which would also be subject to FOIA requests), and another which would just have phone and internet capability. We're working with Monica to hammer out the details of what will best meet the Secretary's needs.
> Please let me know if you need anything more for now, and I'll be in touch with the above longer term options soon.

Clinton's deputy chief of staff Huma Abedin shot down the idea, telling Mull in an email that the proposal "doesn't make a lot of sense."

Clinton never was provided with a second Blackberry. She used one device to send and receive both personal and work-related emails.

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Lisa Perez Jackson[1] (born February 8, 1962) is an American chemical engineer who served as the Administrator of the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) from 2009 to 2013. In May 2013, it was announced that Jackson would be joining Apple Inc. as their environmental director.[2]

Born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Jackson is a graduate of Tulane University and Princeton University. She began working as a staff-level engineer for the Environmental Protection Agency in 1987, later moving to the EPA's regional office in New York City, where she spent the majority of her 16-year EPA career. She joined the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection in 2002, working as the assistant commissioner of compliance and enforcement and as the assistant commissioner for land use management. In 2006, New Jersey Governor Jon Corzine appointed Jackson the state's Commissioner of Environmental Protection. Jackson also briefly served as Corzine's Chief of Staff in late 2008.

On December 15, 2008, the President-elect Barack Obama nominated Jackson as the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. She was confirmed by the Senate and took office on January 23, 2009. During her tenure, Jackson oversaw stricter fuel efficiency standards, the EPA's response to the Deepwater Horizon oil spill, authorized carbon dioxide as a public health threat, granting the EPA authority to set new regulations regarding CO2 emissions, and laid out a failed plan to set stricter smog pollution limits by amending the National Ambient Air Quality Standards. In December 2012, Jackson announced she would be stepping down as EPA administrator, a move which took effect on February 15, 2013; she was succeeded by Deputy Administrator Bob Perciasepe, who became Acting Administrator pending Senate confirmation of Gina McCarthy on July 18, 2013 as a permanent successor.

CHINESE COMMUNISM

Under the current rule of Xi Jinping, China has developed a Social Credit System, a national digital registry, which enables the CCP to track individuals and businesses, and "evaluate them for trustworthiness." The Social Credit System rewards citizens for actions the CCP condones, and punishes them for doing anything the CCP deems undesirable. Since 2014, the CCP has embarked on a campaign of genocide against Uyghurs and other ethnic minorities, detaining more than 1,000,000 in internment camps. Under Xi Jinping's modern Communist regime, China has been branded by Amnesty International as the "World's Worst Executioner." China often holds mass rallies to announce people being sentenced to death in medieval-style public trials. Chinese prosecutors litigating execution cases have a conviction rate of 99%, and doom thousands of political prisoners to execution every year.

BLOOD & SOIL

"Blood and Soil" (German:"Blut und Boden") was a concept and slogan which expressed the Völkisch Movement's ideal of a racially defined national body (Blood) united with a geographic settlement area (Soil). Through the concept of "Blood and Soil," many völkisch proponents idealized rural and farm life as preferable to urban living. The German expression of "Blood and Soil" was originally coined in the late 19th century in völkisch writings espousing racialism and romantic nationalism. It produced much regionalist literature, whose romantic attachment was widespread prior to the rise of the Nazis. "Blood and Soil" later became a key slogan of Nazi ideology.

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

The Bavarian Order of the Illuminati ("Enlightened Ones") was founded by Adam Weishaupt on Beltane, May 1st, 1776, as the "Ancient Illuminated Seers of Bavaria." Its name was soon changed to the "Order of the Illuminati." It was secretive, hierarchical, and heavily modeled on the Jesuit Order, the Society of Jesus. Weishaupt, born February 6, 1748 in Ingolstadt, Bavaria, Germany, was educated by the Jesuits, who converted him to Catholicism. Although he became a Catholic priest, he purportedly later developed an intense hatred for the Jesuits, and he became an atheist. After his separation from the Jesuits, Weishaupt became a master occultist, studying Astrology, Freemasonry, Kabbalah, the Egyptian Mystery Tradition, the Eleusinian Mysteries, Solomonic Magic, the teachings of the Essenes, and perhaps most influentially, Pythagoreanism. One of the fundamental teachings of Pythagoras, a 6th century B.C. Greek philosopher, was that human beings should combine all their belongings into a form of mutual ownership. Much later in human history, this Pythagorean doctrine became the underlying ideology behind the inception of Communism.

ARIOSOPHY, THEOZOOLOGY, ORDO NOVI TEMPLI & OSTARA

In 1915, Liebenfels began using the term Ariosophy to describe his esoteric doctrines. The word Ariosophy translates to "Wisdom of the Aryans." Ariosophy is generically used to describe the Aryan esoteric theories which constituted a subset of the Völkisch Movement. While both Liebenfels and Guido von List considered themselves Ariosophists, List called his esoteric doctrine Armanism, while Liebenfels used the terms Theozoology and Ario-Christianity prior to World War I.

the wave-mechanical hyper-sphere at parogee

Key:
the red band depicts a wavelength.
the gap between the two large spheres represents the super-position of potential directional fronts upon the wavelength.
the relationship between these is such that it causes the wavelength to become a standing wave-form, that is, the measure of a static field.
the smaller spheres represent the lesser versions of the interference patterns that cause wavelengths to form.
the green arrows show the motion of particles in a static field.
the large blue arrows indicate the way peaks and troughs form on the wave-length. These are only two directions however, accounting for two types of vector, longitudinal and lattitudinal; therefore the third dimensional vector must come from the shape of a torus.
the apparently three dimensional shapes of the large spheres are really fourth dimensional probability wells.

Members of the Carbonari called one another "good cousins," and pledged mutual support and protection on the blade of an ax. Their lodges were called "shops," which had a system of two degrees, Apprentice and Master. Members took names drawn from the history of the Middle Ages, and had secret signs and passwords to identify themselves to other Carbonari. Immediately after their initiation, Carbonari members were required to acquire a rifle, fifty rounds of ammunition, and a dagger, and be prepared to use them in a revolutionary capacity.

Can you connect to these APs? I'd love to know if its just some odd interference, or you're actually able to communicate with it? If you're able to communicate with it, then you're able to get a MAC. If you get MAC you can get manufacturer (usually). If you're REALLY curious, which I assume you are, there has to be ventilation somewhere for a bunker. I'm picking an arbitrary amount of distance but check 300' outward from the weird wifi area, are there vents? Are there buildings that look like they could hide vents? Is that power meter wizzing around like its powering an underground complex?

You kinda lost me with the water, although thinking about it, draining water means there is empty space below, hypothetically. I'm pretty curious TBH.

You can, but i couldn't Crack the passwords at the time. I'm no longer in the area. Had to flee to be honest.

There are indeed buildings that could be hiding vents. https://imgur.com/lLCSqi2

These buildings are about 150-250 feet away. I built them with my boss on concrete pads that were laid by seemingly normal contractors, but the footprint had been prepared and leveled by very shady tongan contractors before I arrived. Supposedly, before i arrived on site they demoed a warehouse where the big building stands and pulled out HUGE liquid tanks that would have left a very large open space in the ground after removal.

Also, very curiously a municipal storm drain running adjacent to the building had been removed during the site prep and another one installed on the opposite property line, and the new one was significantly larger than the old one. The old one was too small for a person to go into, but the new one is about the size of a door.

If you look at Google maps, you can see the old storm drain on the property line between 577 and 567 pakala st, honolulu 96825

I reckon that if you wanted to excavate an access to the space mentioned above, an old storm drain would be a good way to do it.

Also, i noticed a truck making multiple late night trips for many days removing lots of busted up new looking concrete from the neighbors city trash bins. The property i lived on and that neighbors property are lease holds held by the same person (not my old boss).

Ive also recently connected my old boss to ebay accounts selling "faulty hard drives" and "faulty" electronics for strange prices. The buyer feedback is very bizarrely enthusiastic and there are lots of disturbing mentions of "very happy kids" and "no fakes"

I think i stumbled on a possible human trafficking and child p ring.

What do you think?

BOLSHEVISM

LENIN & THE BOLSHEVIK REVOLUTION

In 1916, Lenin wrote his work Imperialism As The Highest Stage Of Capitalism, which was a major contribution to the development of classical Marxism. This work concluded with the possibility of the victory of Socialism, initially in a few countries or in a single country, such as Russia, provided that the head of the revolutionary movement would be a disciplined avant-garde, ready to go all the way to the establishment of the "dictatorship of the proletariat." During and before the Bolshevik Revolution, the Bolsheviks and their ideology led up to the formation of the Communist Party. Vladimir Lenin and his ideas for a "Workers' Socialist State" heavily dominated the Bolshevik movement. In October 1917, the Bolshevik Party won a majority in the Soviets (Revolutionary Workers' Councils), which had been formed throughout Russia following the February Revolution, which had ended the Romanov dynasty's rule over Russia. It subsequently organized the October Revolution, which overthrew the Russian Provisional Government and replaced it with state power under the control of the Soviets, led by the Bolsheviks and with other left-wing Socialists. Lenin viewed the subsequent Russian Civil War as "an inevitable continuation, development and intensification of the class struggle."

KARL MARIA WILIGUT

IRMINISM, WEWELSBERG & THE OCCULT PURGE

In Berlin, while working in the office of Karl Wolff, chief adjutant of the SS, Wiligut developed his plans for the rebuilding of the Wewelsburg castle into an allegorical "Center of the World." Wiligut contributed significantly to the development of Wewelsburg as the "Order Castle," a ceremonial center of SS occult practice. Wiligut also designed the Totenkopfring (Death's Head Ring), which Himmler personally awarded to prestigious SS officers. During the Third Reich, at the instigation of Wiligut, the Nazi regime instituted an "occult purge," a policy of persecution of other occultists, systematically closing down all esoteric organizations, which were seen as a threat to the Nazi regime due to the knowledge such groups possessed.

PHILADELPHES

From 1818 to the mid-1820s, Buonarroti's secret society, the Sublime Perfect Masters, infiltrated the Philadelphe leadership in Italy and took control of the organization. Along with the Carbonari, the Philadelphes helped coordinate preparations for the widespread revolutions of 1820 and 1821. It then dissolved, with many of its members absorbed by other secret societies with similar aims, among them the Grand Lodge of Philadelphes, a clandestine Masonic Lodge of the Rites of Memphis and Misraim.

When people ask me: "What are your political views?"

I tell them: I don't have any. Politics is an illusion. I don't believe in politics, its a dialectic set up there to keep people in opposition with themselves.

There is no such thing as 'politics', it doesnt exist, it never has existed and never will exist.

Its a mechanism for controlling ones mind.

PHILADELPHES

The Philadelphes reached Italy sometime after 1807, when Italian exiles in Paris became members and began planning organized resistance to Napoleon. Known as Filadelfi or Adelfi in Italy, the organization played an active role in the complex politics of the early nineteenth century. The revolutionary Phillipe Buonarroti became a member of the Philadelphes while in prison for his involvement in the Conspiracy of Equals, and organized a Philadelphe circle in Geneva after his release in 1806.

64 Tetrahedron Grid - Othographic Projection. This is the seed space geometry that allows for all space dynamics we see, including expansion, collapse, and stillness.

Two octaves of vector equilibrium, centered/stillness at each octave, able to collapse at each octave due to jitterbugging/folding of cuboactehdron into octahedron. These octaves can be continually added, from planck scale to cosmological.

Each tetrahedron is a dual torus of implosion/expansion, a harmonic oscillator - resulting in a sphere around each. This is the literal holographic interference pattern of the cosmos - just as in holography. These are PSU's at the smallest resolution - planck spherical units with a planck length diameter and planck mass.

These are 'closest packed spheres' 12 around 1. This is the spherical analogue of the vector equilibrium - if each sphere were connected at their centerpoints. This is precisely why the VE is so stable.

Vector equilibrium / cubeoctahedron. Totally balanced due to edge and radial length being equivelant, however can also fold into itself for collapse. This is what the unperceivable vacuum energy's configuration usually is Marx's critical theories about society, economics, and politics hold that human societies develop through class conflict. In the capitalist mode of production, this manifests itself in the conflict between the ruling classes (bourgeoisie) that control the means of production and the working classes (proletariat) that enable these means by selling their labor-power in return for wages. Employing a critical approach known as historical materialism, Marx predicted that tensions produced by capitalism would lead to its self-destruction and replacement by a new system known as the socialist mode of production. This would lead to a workers' conquest of political power, and eventually the establishment of a classless, communist society. Marx argued that the working class should carry out organized revolutionary action to topple capitalism and bring about his envisaged socio-economic emancipation.

KARL MARX

WHAT IS THE OCCULT?

The word occult is etymologically derived from the Latin occultus, meaning "hidden."
Occultism is the study of the hidden Laws of Nature, specifically those laws which are at work in the invisible/mental/spiritual domain far more than those at work in the visible/physical world. Therefore, Occultism involves the acceptance of a much wider worldview than that which is ordinarily taken by the everyday person. Occultists, then, may be defined as those who study all the Laws of Nature, both those that are readily seen, and those which are much more difficult to see with the physical eyes or measuring instruments alone.

I have a bot running 24/7 buying and selling for 0 target profit just to waste IRS manpower and money.

I print and send the IRS all the documentation about my trades in paper form to stop them from automatizing the process with a computer program.

I mix blank pages, double print, ghost print or mark/write in them just in case they have a way to scan and use some sort of recognition software. That way they have to look at thousands upon thousands of pages one by one and look and random scribblings and drawn dicks while doing their job.

It's a whole pallet of papers with trades so I hire a guy to forklift that shit and send it just in the offchance that having to deal with a pallet is troublesome for them.

All the documents are numbered but I pack everything """"completely out of order"""" (as in the lower numbers always happen to be at the bottom of the pallet) in case the order of the trades is important. If order is important they now have to deal lift boxes and have them laying around before they can even start checking the numbers.

My normal trades are also in those pages so they can't just ignore everything.

This costs me thousands of dollars every year. I make sure to send the invoices of how much all the processes cost me on top of the pallet so that whoever is in charge of it knows I'm wasting the equivalent of two months of his waging in asinine shit on top of his or her time.

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

After the death of Adam Weishaupt on November 18, 1830, the Italian revolutionary leader Giuseppe Mazzini was eventually appointed head of the Illuminati. Mazzini had established the revolutionary society Young Italy a few years earlier in 1831. Young Germany – the radical socialist think tank that paved the way for the Communist League – was modeled on, and affiliated with, Mazzini's Young Italy. The day of the Illuminati's creation and the highest occult holiday of the year, May 1st (Beltane), was eventually adopted as May Day in all Communist nations, and is still celebrated as the high holiday of Communism.

SECULARISM / MATERIALISM

With a world-view driven heavily by the theories of Darwinism, and extruding Darwinism into the human social domain, both Nazism and Communism completely embrace Secularism and Materialism, placing significant de-emphasis on philosophy and spirituality, and placing a strong emphasis on secular institutions and material needs only. As an over-arching aspect of their secular world-view, adherents of both Nazism and Communism erroneously believe that political and/or economic "solutions" to human problems exist, and that such policies should be implemented by coercion and violence if deemed "necessary." Both of these cult ideologies have continuously failed to recognize and acknowledge that the only true solutions to human problems stem from an accurate and balanced spiritual world-view – one which encourages human beings to live in harmony with Objective Morality and Natural Law.

THE TWO SPIRITUAL CURRENCIES

There are two "Spiritual Currencies": Time and Attention. This analogy can be seen very readily in the sayings "Spending Time" and "Paying Attention." Whatever information or endeavors we put our time and attention toward, we end up getting something in return for that investment. This return could come in the form of knowledge, understanding, skills, expertise, and empowerment, if we invest our Spiritual Currencies wisely.

MY ADVENTURES AS THE WORLD'S MOST WANTED HACKER

FOREWORD BY STEVE WOZNIAK, CO-FOUNDER OF APPLE INC.

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

On the night of November 8, 1923, the Nazis used a patriotic rally in a Munich beer hall to launch an attempted putsch (coup d'état). This so-called "Beer Hall Putsch" failed within one day, when German military commanders refused to support it. Hitler and a number of his supporters were arrested and tried for treason in March 1924. Hitler and some of his close associates were convicted, but given very lenient prison sentences. While he was in Landsberg Prison, Hitler wrote his political manifesto, Mein Kampf ("My Struggle"). The Nazi Party was officially banned in Germany on November 9, 1923. However, it continued to operate under the name German Party (Deutsche Partei or DP).

1 A I'd say in his 40s.
2 Q Okay. And where did you meet him?
3 A I believe it was New Mexico.
4 Q New Mexico?
5 A Possibly New Mexico. I'm sorry. It's
6 really hard to go back and remember lots of different
7 events with lots of different people.
8 Q Okay. And is that the only foreign
9 president that you have met?
10 A I've met a lot of very high, powerful 11 people and I wasn't just introduced to them as who 12 they were. It's only going back through photos in 13 time to be able to realize who they are and what they 14 are now. So it's hard for me to distinguish who I've 15 actually met and when and where I've met them.
16 Q So to your knowledge, you have only met
17 one foreign president?
18 A To my knowledge at this time, yes.
19 Q And is there anything that might change
20 your knowledge at a different time?
21 A If I were to see more photos of other 22 people. I mean, I've been able to distinguish the 23 majority of the people I've been lent out to, but 24 who's to say there's not more.
25 Q All right. If I were to ask you the

1 question how many times have you had sex with Tom
2 Pritzker, do you know what that question means?
3 A I believe so.
4 Q All right. And what is the answer to that
5 question?
6 A I believe I was with Tom once.
7 Q Okay. I would like to ask you about your
8 prior sworn statement.
9 You understand you're under oath today,
10 correct?
11 A Yes.
12 Q All right. You've previously made 13 statements under oath, correct?
14 A Yes.
15 Q And you've previously authorized pleadings
16 to be filed on your behalf, correct?
17 A Yes.
18 Q By various attorneys, right?
19 A Yes.
20 Q All right. You have included in your 21 sworn statement allegations about my client,
22 Ghislaine Maxwell, correct?
23 A Yes.
24 Q And did you review any of those prior 25 sworn statements before appearing here today?

1 A Yes.
2 Q And which ones did you review?
3 A I'd have to see which ones you're 4 specifically talking about. There's quite a lot of 5 statements I've made.
6 Q Right. And which ones do you recall
7 having reviewed before you attended this deposition
8 today?
9 A I've reviewed my affidavit. I'm not a 10 lawyer so I really don't know legal terms to half of 11 the, you know, legal jargon of statements, which they 12 are. If you showed me, I'd be able to tell you if 13 I've seen it or not.
14 Q Okay. So to your knowledge, can you
15 identify any sworn statement you reviewed before 16 attending the deposition today?
17 A Could I name what the statement is?
18 Q Right.
19 A The actual piece of paper that has the 20 title at the top?
21 Q Right.
22 A No, I don't.
23 Q Can you describe it in any other fashion?
24 A I don't understand. I'm sorry.
25 Q That's all right. You have to tell me if

1 you don't.
2 Do you have any reason to believe that any
3 of your previous sworn statements that you have made
4 are not true?
5 A No.
6 MR. EDWARDS: I just object and ask that 7 if we're going to ask the witness questions about any 8 of her statements in whole or in part that the 9 witness be allowed to see the statement, review the 10 statement and then answer your questions.
11 Q (BY MS. MENNINGER) You may answer the 12 question.
13 A Can you reask the question? I'm sorry.
14 Q Do you have any reason to believe that any 15 of your prior sworn statements are untrue?
16 A I have no reason to believe that my prior 17 statements are untrue.
18 Q Has anyone told you to say something that 19 was not true in connection with this case?
20 A No, ma'am.
21 Q All right. I'd like to start with a 22 lawsuit that you filed under the caption Jane Doe
23 versus Jeffrey Epstein.
24 Do you recall that lawsuit?
25 A I believe so.

1 alone.
2 Q. So he's the only witness to your sexual
3 activity, the prince?
4 A. On the instruction of Epstein and 5 Ghislaine, yes.
6 Q. Where in the South of France were you?
7 A. I don't know.
8 Q. Were you on a boat, were you in a house?
9 A. We were at a like a cabana, not cabana,
10 like a resort, but it was a big party.
11 Q. Who was throwing the party?
12 A. I don't know. I was just brought there.
13 Q. You also refer to powerful business
14 executives. What powerful business executives were you 15 sexually trafficked to?
16 MS. MCCAWLEY: Again, to the extent you can 17 reveal somebody without a safety concern you're 18 welcome to do that.
19 SPECIAL MASTER: Well, again --
20 MS. MCCAWLEY: Right. I understand.
21 SPECIAL MASTER: Same objection, same
22 ruling.
23 A. George Mitchell.
24 Q. When were you sexually trafficked to George 25 Mitchell?

JOSEPH GOEBBELS

After the Nazis came to power in 1933, the Nazi Propaganda Ministry, headed by Goebbels, quickly gained and exerted complete control and censorship over the news media, arts, and information throughout Nazi Germany. Goebbels was particularly adept at using the relatively new media of radio and film for propaganda purposes. In 1943, Goebbels began to pressure Hitler to introduce measures that would produce "total war," including closing businesses that were deemed "non-essential" to the Nazi war effort, conscripting women into the war labor force, and enlisting men in previously exempt occupations into the Wehrmacht (Nazi Armed Forces).

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

In September 1921, the Sturmabteilung (SA / Storm Battalion / Storm-Troopers / "Brownshirts") was founded as a paramilitary wing of the NSDAP and began violent attacks on other German political parties. In 1922, the NSDAP formed its official youth organization for the children of party members called Jugendbund der NSDAP (Youth League of the NSDAP), which was a predecessor to the Hitlerjugend (Hitler Youth).

ANTI-CHRIST

My personal concept of an Anti-Christ is a being who is responsible for the spread of false and harmful (if acted upon) information across a significant portion of the human population, and the subsequent ubiquitous spread of that deceptive information throughout the majority of humanity. The resultant behavior conducted by the population leads human society into chaos and degradation, and away from the collective evolution of humanity through the attainment of higher consciousness (often referred to as "Christ Consciousness"). Deceivers of this kind do not even necessarily do this with conscious intention, although many do. Some Anti-Christs are "useful dupes," tasked with the charge of being the messenger or pen-man, so that the true architects of evil remain hidden, or occulted.

KARL MARX

Karl Marx (May 5, 1818 – March 14, 1883) was a German-born ideologue, political theorist, and revolutionary socialist. His best-known works are the 1848 pamphlet The Communist Manifesto (co-authored by Friedrich Engels) and the three-volume Das Kapital (Capital), an analysis of capitalism which espouses his theory of historical materialism. Marx's ideas and theories and their subsequent development, collectively known as Marxism, have exerted enormous influence on modern intellectual, economic, and political history.

Det. Recarey directed me to a second detached structure located on the South East corner of the property. This area of this structure was assigned with single letters to identify a particular part of the room. In the office area, designated as Room B, I observed a powered on Dell Dimension 2350, attached to an LCD flat panel monitor. The screen displayed an open Microsoft Internet Explorer browser with URL address of http://home.bellsouth.net/. I observed no other active windows in the Start panel window and photographed screen. The power cord was removed from the back of the Dell CPU and I disconnected the cable modem to prevent remote access. At that time, the Dell CPU, marked with Serial Number 6WTVN21, was secured and turned over the evidence custodian for future forensic analysis via property receipt. I also located several media related items within Room B, which were recorded onto a property receipt and turned over the Evidence Custodians.

I then responded to a Bedroom designated as Room F, where I observed a white in color CPU marked Premio. The Premio CPU was in a computer desk which held a white CRT monitor, both of which were powered on. The CRT monitor displayed a message from Norton Antivirus software, warning of an expired subscription. I observed no other active windows in the Start panel window and photographed screen. I removed the power cable from the back of the Premio CPU and shutdown all other media. The Premio CPU, marked with Serial Number 2000091078, was secured and turned over the evidence custodian for future forensic analysis via property receipt. I also located several media related items within Room F, which were recorded onto a property receipt and turned over the Evidence Custodians.

This concluded my participation in the search of the residence.

On December 20, 2005, I contacted ASA Daliah Weiss in an attempt to subpoena the Epstein former houseman, Alfredo Rodriguez. Rodriguez, who resides in Miami, had eluded the process servers previously and was not served the investigative subpoena. A telephone message was left as she is not available during the week of 12/19/2005. I made contact with State Attorney Inv Theresa Wyatt and requested the same via telephone message.

I then researched the victim's [redacted] cellular telephone subpoena data which had been received from a previous subpoena request. I analyzed the records which depict several calls from Haley Robson. The telephone calls start on February 6, 2005 at 12:49 pm.; the same day which the victim and the victim's father stated the incident occurred at Epstein s house. The first incoming call was from Robson's residence at 561 333-0180. The second incoming call from Robson's

In 1770, Weishaupt was chosen by international banker Meyer Amschel Rothschild to develop an organization that could be used for political revolution to weaken Great Britain. In 1773, Weishaupt began focusing on establishing this revolutionary organization.
To confuse his detractors, he based the organizational structure on the one used by the Jesuits. However, his intention was to have a secret coalition of liberalism. Additionally, Weishaupt wanted to use the Illuminati to replace Christianity with what he called "a religion of reason," to strive for the "perfection of morals," and "make of the human race, one good and happy family." Prior to its official founding on May 1, 1776, the original name of the Order was Bund der Perfektibilisten (League of Perfectibilists, League of Perfectionists). Their original symbol was a shield similar to the Jesuit shield, but they replaced the Jesuit phrase "Extension of the Kingdom of God" with the words "Perfection of Man." Weishaupt soon changed the name to Illuminatenorden (Order of the Illuminati). The symbol of the Order became the primordial archetype and Freemasonic Symbol of the Sun, a circle with a dot in the center, a rudimentary representation of the "All-Seeing Eye" which eventually became associated with the Illuminati.

In 1828 he published a book on the French Revolution and the conspiracies that followed it called Conspiracy for Equality, which became the Bible of liberal secret societies throughout the 19th century. The same year, he published History of Babeuf's Conspiracy of Equals, which became a quintessential text for revolutionaries, inspiring many socialists, including Louis Auguste Blanqui and Karl Marx.

LENIN & THE BOLSHEVIK REVOLUTION

Bolshevism is a revolutionary Socialist current of Soviet Leninist and later Marxist–Leninist political thought, and a political regime associated with the formation of a rigidly centralized, cohesive and disciplined party of social revolution, focused on overthrowing an existing capitalist state system, then seizing power and establishing a "dictatorship of the proletariat." Bolshevism originated at the beginning of the 20th century in Russia and was associated with the activities of the Bolshevik faction within the Russian Social Democratic Labour Party, led by Vladimir Lenin. Highly influenced by Marxist ideology, Bolshevism absorbed Marxist elements, and continued the practices of the socialist revolutionaries of the second half of the 19th century. The most widely known theorists of Bolshevism were Vladimir Lenin and Leon Trotsky.

NAZI OCCULT TECHNOLOGY

Hans Kammler (August 26, 1901 – Uncertain) was an SS-Obergruppenführer (Highest SS Leader) responsible for Nazi civil engineering projects and the chief technologist for top secret Nazi weapons programs. Kammler joined the Nazi Party in 1931, and the SS on May 20, 1933. In Kammler's ideology, modern technology and ideologies of German supremacy were tightly interwoven. Kammler was described as having technological competence and extreme Nazi fanaticism co-existing in the same man. Hitler's chief architect Albert Speer described Kammler as "Himmler's most brutal and most ruthless henchman." Kammler oversaw the construction of various Nazi concentration camps, including Auschwitz, at which he was later called in to advise on modalities for boosting the daily output of its gas chambers. He was also responsible for the demolition of the Warsaw ghetto.

MONICA PETERSEN
I am heartbroken to report that Monica Petersen died today in Haiti. She was a recent graduate of the Korbel School, a Research Fellow and an Assistant Director at the Human Trafficking Center, and had moved to Haiti to teach and start an NGO. Monica was a scholar-activist committed to serving the dispossessed and a clear and critical voice in the human trafficking field. She was also a dear friend and colleague to many of us.
I will post the time and date of a memorial service soon.

Some wisdom you can only get from fieldwork. Quite the scandal.
And as the anniversary of Haiti's earthquake's approaches this week, along with the upcoming 2016 presidential elections in both Haiti & the U.S..... this is significant. It's unsurprising, to me personally, but starts to connect the dots on what I already suspected.
If the Clintons plan to disseminate Haiti with their gold looting (apparently contracting with the DR, not Haiti).... I guess we know why Martelly's guy is set to steal the elections.... Ms. Clinton has corrupt & dirty business to finish in Haiti. The people suffer so.
This is the theory my masters thesis puts forth... this is modern structural slavery. Disaster Capitalism at its finest.

Hi. I'm new to this page, per the recommendation of the lovely Ms. [redacted]ar. I'm down in Haiti for the next 3 wks doing fieldwork on human trafficking (i.e. ALL exploited labor sectors, not just sex), but was wondering if anyone knew of any sex work organizations working in Haiti?

No "sex trafficking saviors," just actual pro-sex worker orgs. I'm a social anthropologist who wants to do solid research on HT, rescuing people is not in my agenda (this is a stupid & imperialist concept). Any info on sex workers/sex worker orgs in Haiti would be much appreciated, if anyone knows of anything! Thanks much!!

We are deeply saddened to share the news that Monica Petersen, a former LCHT research intern (2014), passed away in Haiti this week. Monica was a passionate social justice champion who supported the anti-trafficking movement in Colorado in so many ways. She recently graduated from DU's Korbel School, and was a past Research Fellow and Assistant Director at the Human Trafficking Center; she also served on the Colorado Human Trafficking Council's Data & Research Task Force. We remember Monica as an outspoken professional who never grew tired in confronting institutions or holding up the voices of those who weren't being heard. Her own experience in the Child Welfare system led her to a deep belief in a survivor-informed approach to combat human trafficking.

We are awaiting details on a memorial service for Monica. As we grieve this loss, we encourage you to message us any memories or thoughts you have about her life that you'd like us to share with her family. Rest in peace dear friend, Monica.

Ms. Giuffre's Deposition in the Defamation Case

As the defamation action moved forward, Dershowitz subpoenaed Ms. Giuffre to a deposition. McCawley Decl., Exhibit 11, Composite Exhibit of excerpts from transcript of deposition of Ms. Giuffre. During the deposition, held in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, Ms. Giuffre was represented by the undersigned legal counsel, who asserted objections to revealing attorney-client information where the questions called for revealing confidential attorney client communications. See, e.g., id. at 22-23; 131-32; 173-74; 183; 208. During the deposition, Ms. Giuffre specifically stated that "I decide not to waive my [attorney-client] privilege at this time." Id. at 174. Ms. Giuffre also denied that Cassell and Edwards had ever pressured her into identifying someone as being involved in her sexual abuse. Id. at 200-12

The Settlement of the Defamation Case

Ultimately, Cassell, Edwards, and Dershowitz agreed to settle their defamation case. That settlement included both a public statement and confidential monetary payments. As part of the settlement, Cassell and Edwards withdrew their allegations against Dershowitz in the defamation case contained in the then-pending summary judgment motion. McCawley Decl., Exhibit 12, Notice of Withdrawal of Summary Judgment Motion. As explained in the notice of withdrawal of this motion, "the withdrawal of the referenced filings is not intended to be, and should not be construed as being, an acknowledgement by Edwards and Cassell that the allegation made by Ms. Giuffre were mistaken. Edwards and Cassell do acknowledge that the public filing in the Crime Victims' Rights Act case of their client's allegation against Defendant Dershowitz became a major distraction from the merits of the well-founded Crime Victims' Rights Act by causing delay and, as a consequence, turned out to be a tactical mistake." Id. All these actions settling the Florida defamation case took place in Florida.

KARL HAUSHOFER
GEOPOLITIK & LEBENSRAUM

After retiring from the German army with the rank of Major General in 1919, Haushofer forged a close friendship with Rudolf Hess, who became his personal assistant. He became a teacher of politics and philosophy to both Hess and Hitler while they were in Landsberg Prison following the failed Beer Hall Putsch of 1923. Every Wednesday between June 24 and December 12, 1924, Haushofer travelled from Munich to Landsberg and offered hours of intense personal mentoring to Hess and Hitler, whom Haushofer called his "young eagles." Historian Joachim Fest stated that bringing Haushofer and Hitler together was the most important personal contribution that Rudolf Hess made to the creation of National Socialism.

#PizzaGate Part 1

So what exactly is #Pizzagate?

Pizzagate is an investigation branch derived from one of the Podesta Mails revealed by Wikileaks and related to the #SpiritCooking stuff, in which some anons noticed a weird codeword used in them.
(if you don't know what #SpiritCooking is, I suggest you to use the #hashtag and look for it, it's all over twitter and the web)
The messages in these mails were cryptic and not a normal way in which people refer to their food, making them too suspicious to pass or discard, that's why anons from everywhere reunited their effort to look for conections, names, compromising pictures, properties, any kind of link or tie to the Podestas and their inner circle of friends family, etc, but before passing to the investigations and name correlation let's read some of the leaked mails with criptic messages that gained our attention:

Yep, it's just a handkerchief and she THINKS (means she's not sure?) it has a MAP on it and it's Pizza-related.

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

In subsequent years, the group was vilified by conservative and religious critics, who claimed the Illuminati continued to operate in secret, and were ultimately responsible for the French Revolution. Weishaupt himself wrote that "The great care of the Illuminati, after the publication of their secret writings, was to persuade the whole of Germany that the Order no longer existed." Describing future plans for the Order, Weishaupt wrote: "By this plan we shall direct all mankind. Occupations must be allotted and contrived, that we may in secret, influence all political transactions." To hide their subversive activities, the highest members of the Order began to masquerade as humanitarians and philanthropists. The Order eventually moved their headquarters to London, where it began to grow again. Weishaupt told Illuminati members to infiltrate the Blue Lodges of Freemasonry and to form secret circles within them. Only Freemasons who proved themselves as Internationalists (Globalists) and who were also atheists would be initiated into future incarnations of the Illuminati.

Before the Federal Reserve Act was sent to Wilson for his signature, a copy was given to another representative of Wellington House and advisor to Wilson, Colonel Edward Mandel House, and another copy to banker J.P. Morgan, who, in this endeavor, represented the interests of the Rothschild international banking dynasty. Wilson's measures, all influenced by a tide of propaganda emanating from Wellington House, would further the destruction of the American middle class and act as instruments of slavery fastened around their necks without them truly becoming aware of it. In his book, The New Freedom, Wilson wrote: "We stand in the presence of a silent revolution. We are upon the threshold of a time when the systematic life of the country will be sustained at every point by government activity. Now we have to determine whether it shall be directed from government itself, or whether it shall be through instrumentalities which have already constituted themselves and which stand ready to supersede government."

CARBONARI

The Carbonari had a high degree of success in organizing political pressure and revolutionary violence across Europe. The Carbonari used popular religious symbolism instead of esoteric symbols, making it more acceptable in the Catholic and Eastern Orthodox countries where it operated. It recruited its membership largely from the middle classes, although it also employed a strategy of infiltration by recruiting bureaucrats, policemen, and soldiers. This made it easier for the Carbonari to counter efforts to suppress them, since police and soldiers tasked to hunt them down were, as often as not, Carbonari members themselves.

HOUSTON STEWART CHAMBERLAIN: ARYANISM, GOTTMENSCHEN & UNTERMENSCHEN

Houston Stewart Chamberlain (September 9, 1855 – January 9, 1927) was a British-German author who promoted German ethno-nationalism, anti-Semitism, and "scientific" racism. His best-known work, a two-volume book called The Foundations of the Nineteenth Century, was published in 1899 and became highly influential in the Pan-Germanic völkisch movements of the early 20th century. Chamberlain's work would later influence the anti-Semitism and racial policies of the Nazi Third Reich. Chamberlain has been referred to as "Hitler's John The Baptist."

he and Virginia Roberts were together in the presence of Prince Andrew?

MR. PAGLIUCA: Objection to the form and foundation.

A. I can't speak to what Jeffrey would say.

Q. Has he talked to about Virginia Roberts' statement that she was in the presence of Prince Andrew?

MR. PAGLIUCA: Objection to the form and foundation.

A. I have not discussed individual presences with Virginia. That's not -- I'm only concerned with what I know to be the stuff about me. So my focus has always been the lies and the obvious lies as something I can personally attest to. I cannot possibly talk for anything else.

Q. Has Jeffrey Epstein said to you anything along the lines of Virginia is lying when she says she met Prince Andrew?

MR. PAGLIUCA: Objection to the form and foundation.

A. Again, I'm not talking about what she says as regards to other people. I can talk to things as regards to me.

Q. I'm asking if Jeffrey ever said that to you?

A. I don't recollect specific conversations along those things.

Q. You don't recollect him saying that to you?

A. I don't recollect him saying to me that Virginia didn't meet Prince Andrew. I'm sure that wouldn't be a conversation that we would have. It doesn't effect me whether -- so I'm really only concerned about the lies that were told as regards to me.

Q. Can Jeffrey Epstein confirm or deny whether you sent Virginia to give Glenn Dubin a massage?

MR. PAGLIUCA: Objection to the form and foundation.

A. I can't say what Jeffrey would say, I can tell you I didn't. I can't tell you what anybody else.

Q. Have you discussed with him Virginia's allegation that she gave Glenn Dubin a massage?

MR. PAGLIUCA: Objection to the form and foundation.

A. I didn't know that she did say that.

Q. Do you know whether Jeffrey Epstein has ever sent anybody to Glenn Dubin to perform a massage for him?

MR. PAGLIUCA: Objection to the form and foundation.

A. I couldn't possibly recollect whether he did anything like that.

Q. Did you ever send anybody, not Virginia, anybody else over to Glenn Dubin's home for a massage?

A. Not to the best of my knowledge.

Q. Do you know one of Alexander Dixon's friend by the name of Anuska DiGeorgio?

A. I do recollect a person of that name.

Q. How do you know her?

A. I don't recollect.

Q. Did you meet her through Jeffrey?

A. I don't recollect.

Q. Do you recall when you met her?

A. I do not recollect.

Q. How many times have you seen Anuska DiGeorgio in your life?

A. The only reason I remember is because it's an unusual name but I couldn't tell you anything else.

Q. You didn't see her on a regular basis, she wasn't one of your friends?

A. No.

Q. Was Anuska DiGeorgio a masseuse?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you have knowledge of whether she had a sexual relationship with Jeffrey Epstein?

A. I have no knowledge of that.

Q. When was the last time you spoke with her?

A. A very long -- I have no idea.

Q. Would it be years?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you remember about Anuska DiGeorgio?

CHINESE COMMUNISM

Chen Duxiu

Li Dazhao

The Chinese Communist Party (CCP) is the founding party and sole ruling party of the People's Republic of China. It was founded on July 1, 1921 by Chen Duxiu and Li Dazhao with the help of the Far Eastern Bureau of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and Far Eastern Bureau of Communist International. Both Marxism and the Bolshevik Revolution heavily inspired the CCP. Chen Duxiu and Li Dazhao were among the first Chinese intellectuals to publicly support Leninism and the idea of a Socialist world revolution. Both regarded the Bolshevik Revolution in Russia as a ground-breaking event, believing it to herald a "new era" for the world. Chen Duxiu served as the first General Secretary of the CCP from 1921 to 1928, and was referred to as "China's Lenin."

Like.. Don't mention it to anyone though. Because I don't know who's doing it yet. It's the creepiest shit ever, but it could literally be anyone doing it. I don't know who it is. I'm not trying to report anything officially right now. I just want a web of people who are fully aware that I did not kill myself, becasue there is some protection to be had by multiple people knowing full well that you did not kill yourself. I'm not fucking walking outside in the dark, even if they send me anoymous messages taunting me to. I'm currently in a mode where I am not going to be at home alone. If my parents leave the house, I leave the house. I am not going to be here alone.

Amy Eskridge 8:42 AM

I think I MIGHT know why this particular thing is happening right now, but I still can't quite be sure, because I'm still not quite sure of "who" is doing it. It's just super creepy. The creepiest shit ever for me, which is saying a lot. It's just the same old shit, but like times a hundred. I think it's maybe happening because I just entered my next proposal and whitepaper writing phase vert recently for various domestic agencies, and it's the best shit I've ever written. I think that's why now. Attempt to drive me crazy with endless shit and try to relentlessly taunt me into killing myself or try to lure me outside, BEFORE I send this newest shit to my Col at DARPA or my program director at NASA. If they can successfuly taunt me into killkng myself tomorrow, my most recent best work ever would die with me. I think THAT is why. But can I tell any of these agencies that I am currently being aggressively taunted into killing myself right now though? Nope, I can't. It would immediately disqualify me from obtaining any new security clearance in the future, the moment that it gets reported. Which is maybe actually the whole point of the exercise. Taunt me into reported something that gets me balcklisted from clearances. That might be the point that would achieve their goal. I don't want it to be reported. I just want the people closest to me to be able to vouch for this happening later, if something were to happen.

THE ONLY SOLUTION TO HUMAN SLAVERY IS A SPIRITUAL SOLUTION

To solve the problem of human Slavery, which is the result of immoral actions and driven by immoral beliefs such as Nazism and Communism, the human species requires a complete revolution of Conscience, based upon Principles. The word principle is derived from the Latin noun principia, meaning "first; chief; most important." Principles are the FIRST and MOST IMPORTANT of all Truths. Moral Principles must first be learned, then taught to others, and eventually made common sense knowledge among the human population, before any true positive change can be manifested in human society.

NAZI EUGENICS

Those initially targeted for murder under Nazi eugenics policies were largely people living in private and state-operated institutions, identified as "life unworthy of life." They included prisoners, degenerates, dissidents, and people with congenital cognitive and physical disabilities – people who were considered to be "feeble-minded." By 1934, more than 5,000 people per month were being forcibly sterilized in Germany. By the end of the Nazi regime, over 200 Hereditary Health Courts were created in Germany, and under their rulings, over 400,000 people were sterilized against their will, and over 300,000 were murdered under the Aktion T4 (Action T4) euthanasia program.

ENACTING THE SOLUTION: DOING THE ONE GREAT WORK

The One Great Work of Ending Slavery can only be accomplished once enough people learn the knowledge of Objective Morality and Natural Law, then teach it to others. A massive effort of Moral Education must be conducted, by widely and freely communicating and publishing that critical knowledge via modern forms of media, for ALL human beings to learn.

NAZI EUGENICS

THE KAISER WILHELM INSTITUTE

Named after the last German emperor, Kaiser Wilhelm, the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute of Anthropology, Human Heredity, and Eugenics was founded in 1927 in Berlin, Germany. Significantly influenced by American eugenics ideology and programs for two decades, the founding and building of the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute was partially funded by the Rockefeller Foundation. Throughout the Nazi era, the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute was strongly associated with the theories of Nazi Eugenics and "racial hygiene" advocated by its leading theorists Eugen Fischer, Fritz Lenz, and Otmar von Verschuer.

THEOSOPHY & THE TEACHINGS OF HELENA PETROVNA BLAVATSKY

The main tenets of Theosophy as taught by Blavatsky are the same tenets found in many other occult traditions. Chief among these is the belief of the presence of a "divine spark" within every person which, with the proper discipline and training, can lead to spiritual illumination or "enlightenment." Theosophy's adherents consider themselves "searchers after truth," who are dissatisfied with the world, and are dissenters of the creeds of organized religion. Theosophists admit the existence of a God, but not necessarily of a personal God. To most Theosophists, God is Nature and Spiritual Law.

DDees.com

Plaintiff asks this Court to infer the existence of an undisclosed "email" account for Ms. Maxwell in the 2000-2002 timeframe based on witness accounts that Jeffrey Epstein had a "messaging system" on a private server. Of course, there is a big difference between having a private email account (gmail, aol, yahoo, etc.) and communicating through a private messaging system on an employer's sever, as described by Mr. Alessi ("It was a server. I think it was --the office would have, like, a message system between him, the houses, the employees, his friends. They would write a message on the computer. There was no email at that time.").[4] To the extent there was a private messaging system used by Mr. Epstein's household employees maintained on a private server by Mr. Epstein, information from that system is not available to Ms. Maxwell. Ms. Maxwell has not been employed by Mr. Epstein for over 10 years and has not had any access to Mr. Epstein's server through Citrix or otherwise since at least the end of her employment with him.

"Whether a party subject to a document request can be compelled to comply depends on two preliminary questions: (1) assuming the requested documents exist, does the party have possession, custody or control over them, and (2) if the party has such possession, custody or control, can the party be compelled to conduct a reasonable search for and, if found, to produce the documents." Gross v. Lunduski, 304 F.R.D. 136, 142 (W.D.N.Y. 2014). Ms. Maxwell is not in the possession, custody or control of the server or any information it may contain. "Where

[4] It appears this is what was also being described by Mr. Banasiak in the deposition from another case, a full copy of which has never been produced in this litigation. Indeed, Mr. Banasiak has not been identified as a person with relevant or discoverable information in any of the last three of Plaintiff's Rule 26 Disclosures. In the cited testimony, Mr. Banasiak appears to have discussed accessing a private messaging system maintained on Mr. Epstein's private server using Citrix, a program that allows such access to authorized users. Because Plaintiff has failed to disclose the transcript being quoted, Ms. Maxwell cannot fully decipher the obviously edited testimony quoted in the Motion, does not know what timeframe Mr. Banasiak was referring to regarding the computers or using Citrix, and cannot respond to the claims made regarding the nature of any inference that could be drawn from Mr. Banasiak's selected testimony. The entire argument and reference to the transcript must be ignored and stricken based on Plaintiff's failure to produce in discovery the transcript she relies on.

ANTI-CHRIST

My personal concept of an Anti-Christ is a being who is responsible for the spread of false and harmful (if acted upon) information across a significant portion of the human population, and the subsequent ubiquitous spread of that deceptive information throughout the majority of humanity. The resultant behavior conducted by the population leads human society into chaos and degradation, and away from the collective evolution of humanity through the attainment of higher consciousness (often referred to as "Christ Consciousness"). Deceivers of this kind do not even necessarily do this with conscious intention, although many do. Some Anti-Christs are "useful dupes," tasked with the charge of being the messenger or pen-man, so that the true architects of evil remain hidden, or occulted.

II. FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

A. Abundant Evidence Supports Ms. Giuffre's Sworn Testimony That Alan Dershowitz Sexually Abused Her

Dershowitz says he needs to see several documents because they will somehow "demonstrate that the allegations of sexual misconduct . . . are nothing more than a recent fabrication . . . ." DE 364 at 2. To the contrary, they will in no way prove the allegations are a "fabrication," given the mountain of evidence supporting Ms. Giuffre's sworn testimony.

Ms. Giuffre has not made vague assertions, but described in detail what Dershowitz did to her and where.[3] In response to Ms. Giuffre's sworn testimony, Dershowitz does not argue that any witnesses will be able to prove his innocence. Instead, he tries to build a circumstantial case that he could not have committed the sexual abuse. Dershowitz now claims, for example, that at the time of the abuse, he was merely "acquainted with Mr. Epstein through academic events . . . ." DE 364 at 4.[4] But in 2005 (before news of Epstein's criminal prosecution broke), Dershowitz stated "I'm on my 20th book . . . The only person outside of my immediate family that I send drafts to is Jeffrey."[5] Dershowitz has also been quoted as saying that, even if Epstein went bankrupt, "I would be as interested in him as a friend if we had hamburgers on the boardwalk in Coney Island and talked about his ideas."[6]

Dershowitz also claims that he never saw "Epstein in the presence of underage girls." DE 364 at 3.[7] This lack of observation is remarkable given that Epstein brazenly and repeatedly

Planetary machines were in use at a very remote period, and appear to have consisted for many centuries of moveable spheres having the earth in their centre: thus we read of the Chinese spheres said to have been made some 2000 years before the Christian æra, and more recently of the spheres of Archimedes and Posidonius, concerning which Cicero, speaking of the Epicurean philosophy, has the following remarkable passage:—

'If the sphere, lately made by our friend Posidonius, which marks the course of the sun and moon and the five wandering stars, were to be transported into Scythia or Britain, who, even in those barbarous countries, would doubt whether reason had presided over its construction? Yet these people (the Epicureans) doubt whether the universe, whence all things arise and are made, is not the effect of chance or of some necessity rather than of reason and a divine mind; and they regard Archimedes as more deserving of praise in imitating the changes of the sphere than nature in producing them.' SATANISM & THE DARK OCCULT

Through the power differential they gain by way of manipulating those who remain in ignorance of this critical hidden knowledge, this small minority of social engineers who are "in the know" wish to permanently rule the masses of humanity and effectively "become God on Earth." It is important to understand that, contrary to popular belief, the overwhelmingly vast majority of Satanists do NOT worship an externalized deity known as "Satan" in the Christian tradition, but instead see Satanism as an ideological way-of-being in the world, and view the ego-driven self as the "God" of their religion.

THE WAY OF HERMES

[illegible]

In many shamanic societies, if you came to a medicine person complaining of being disheartened, dispirited, or depressed, they would ask one of four questions. When did you stop dancing? When did you stop singing? When did you stop being enchanted by stories? When did you stop finding comfort in the sweet territory of silence?

and a primary co-conspirator and participant in his sexual abuse and sex trafficking scheme").

Numerous other witnesses, with knowledge of Defendant's activities, have testified to the same:

- See Schultz Declaration ("Schultz Decl.") at Composite Exhibit 1, Excerpts from May 18, 2016, Deposition of Johanna Sjoberg at p. 34:20-35:1. "Q. And did you -- what did you understand her to mean? A. [Maxwell] was implying that I did not get Jeffrey off, and so she had to do it. Q. And when you say "get Jeffrey off," do you mean bring him to orgasm? A. Yes." . . . "How long did you work for Jeffrey and Ghislaine? A: I believe it was five years, 2001 to 2006. Q. And how many massages did Epstein receive per day on average? THE WITNESS: Three." Id. at pg. 30:15-25. . . "Q. Did Jeffrey ever tell you why he received so many massages from so many different girls? A. He explained to me that, in his opinion, he needed to have three orgasms a day. It was biological, like eating." Id. at p.32: 9-16.

- See Schultz Decl. at Composite Exhibit 2, Excerpts from June 24, 2016, Deposition of Tony Figueroa at pg. 200:5-18; 96:8-15. "Q. . . . when Ghislaine Maxwell would call you during the time you were living with Virginia, she would ask you what specifically? A. Just if I had found any other girls just to bring to Jeffrey. Q. Okay. A. Pretty much every time there was a conversation with any of them it was either asking Virginia where she was at, or asking me to get girls." "Q What has -- what is that? A. That her [Virginia] and Maxwell and Jeffrey would obviously be doing stuff, all three of them together. Like I said that they would all go out to clubs to pick up girls and try to find them to bring back for Jeffrey. And then she told me about how, like I said, her and Ms. Maxwell and Jeffrey were all intimate together on multiple occasions."

- See Schultz Decl. at Composite Exhibit 3, Excerpts of June 21, 2016, Deposition of Detective Recarey at pg. 29:11-20. "Q. "Okay. During your investigation, what did you learn in terms of Ghislaine Maxwell's involvement, if any? THE WITNESS: Ms. Maxwell, during her research, was found to be Epstein's long-time friend. During the interviews, Ms. Maxwell was involved in seeking girls to perform massages and work at Epstein's home."

- See Schultz Decl. at Composite Exhibit 4, Excerpts from June 10, 2016, Deposition of Rinaldo Rizzo at pg. 52:8. "A. What happens next when Ghislaine Maxwell and Jeffrey Epstein and a 15-year-old girl walk into Eva Anderson's home? . . . "A. She proceeds to tell my wife and I that, and this is not -- this is blurting out, not a conversation like I'm having a casual conversation. That quickly, I was on an island, I was on the island and there was Ghislaine, there was Sarah, she said they asked me for sex, I said no. And she is just rambling, and I'm like what, and she said -- I asked her, I said what? And she says yes, I was on the island, I don't know how I got from the island to here. Last afternoon or in the afternoon I was on the island and now I'm here. And I said do you have a -- this is not making any sense to me, and I said this is nuts, do you have a passport, do you have a phone? And she says no, and she says Ghislaine took my passport. And I said what, and she says Sarah took her passport and her phone and gave it to Ghislaine Maxwell, and at that point she said that she was threatened." Id. at pg. 56:2-24.

Very strange indeed. It looks like that's just a thin concrete pad, the kind they'd put a small building on. But you'd indicated there are underground facilities in the area. Are there any large cracks you could look into to gauge the thickness of the pad? Or maybe you can see the thickness along the edge?

Also, how small or focused was the thermal image heat signature? Small and focused could imply that the heat source is embedded in the cement. If it was coming from equipment in an underground room, then I'd expect the heat to dissipate in the room and so the heat signature would be less focused.

The signature was about 2.5 square feet or so.

The concrete above this point was about 7 inches thick, compared to 4 elsewhere. Could be due to chance or an uneven gravel bed at pour, but i think too many strange characteristics are stacking up to chock off as coincidence

I did attempt to excavate the underside of the pad, and got really close, maybe 2 feet away from the hole i drilled. It was hot under there. Almost steaming Like compost, but there clearly was no microbial activity in the gravel bed below the pad. The dirt underneath is volcanic red dirt, so no bioactivity there

In the aftermath of World War II, the territory occupied by the Soviet Red Army formed various Soviet satellite states throughout Central and Eastern Europe, which became known as the Iron Curtain nations. Both the Soviet Union and the United States emerged from World War II as global superpowers, and subsequently entered a period of international tension known as the Cold War. The Soviet Union was a transcontinental country that spanned much of Eurasia from 1922 to 1991. The flagship Communist state, it was a union of fifteen nations. In practice, both its government and its economy were highly centralized until its final years. It was a one-party state governed by the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, with the city of Moscow serving as its capital. It was the largest country in the world, covering over 8.6 million square miles and spanning eleven time zones.

GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (DAP)

Dietrich Eckart (March 23, 1868 – December 26,1923) was a German völkisch journalist and political activist who was one of the founding members of the German Workers' Party. Eckart was a key influence on Adolf Hitler in the early years of the Nazi Party. He was a participant in the failed Beer Hall Putsch in 1923 and died on 26 December of that year, shortly after his release from Landsberg Prison. Eckart was elevated to the status of a major thinker upon the establishment of Nazi Germany in 1933, and was acknowledged by Hitler to be "the spiritual co-founder of Nazism," and "a guiding light of the early National Socialist movement."

THEODOR FRITSCH

REICHSHAMMERBUND & GERMANENORDEN

In 1893, Fritsch published his most famous work, The Handbook of the Jewish Question, which leveled a number of conspiratorial charges at European Jews and called upon Germans to refrain from intermingling with them. The book was read by millions of Völkisch Movement sympathizers. The ideas espoused by Fritsch's work greatly influenced Adolf Hitler and the Nazis during their rise to power after World War I.

In 1902, Fritsch founded an anti-Semitic journal called The Hammer, which became the basis of the Reichshammerbund in 1912.

REICHSHAMMERBUND & GERMANENORDEN

Theodor Fritsch (October 28, 1852 – September 8, 1933) was a German publisher and journalist. His anti-Semitic writings heavily influenced popular German opinion against Jews in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Fritsch was a believer in the absolute superiority of the Aryan Race. His opinion was radicalized by the changes brought on by rapid industrialization and urbanization of the Second Industrial Revolution. Fritsch called for a return to the traditional values and customs of the past, which he believed exemplified the essence of the German people.

(along with other young girls) to such powerful people were to ingratiate himself with them for business, personal, political, and financial gain, as well as to obtain potential blackmail information.

One such powerful individual that Epstein forced then-minor Jane Doe #3 to have sexual relations with was former Harvard Law Professor Alan Dershowitz, a close friend of Epstein's and well-known criminal defense attorney. Epstein required Jane Doe #3 to have sexual relations with Dershowitz on numerous occasions while she was a minor, not only in Florida but also on private planes, in New York, New Mexico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands. In addition to being a participant in the abuse of Jane Doe #3 and other minors, Deshowitz was an eye-witness to the sexual abuse of many other minors by Epstein and several of Epstein's co-conspirators. Dershowitz would later play a significant role in negotiating the NPA on Epstein's behalf. Indeed, Dershowitz helped negotiate an agreement that provided immunity from federal prosecution in the Southern District of Florida not only to Epstein, but also to "any potential co-conspirators of Epstein." NPA at 5. Thus, Dershowitz helped negotiate an agreement with a provision that provided protection for himself against criminal prosecution in Florida for sexually abusing Jane Doe #3. Because this broad immunity would have been controversial if disclosed, Dershowitz (along with other members of Epstein's defense team) and the Government tried to keep the immunity provision secret from all of Epstein's victims and the general public, even though such secrecy violated the Crime Victims' Rights Act.

Ghislaine Maxwell was another person in Epstein's inner circle and a co-conspirator in Epstein's sexual abuse. She was someone who consequently also appreciated the immunity granted by the NPA for the crimes she committed in Florida. In addition to participating in the 32. At Tibur or Tivoli near Rome, in the gardens of Hippolitus d'Este, Cardinal of Ferrara, there are the representations of sundry birds sitting on the tops of trees, which by hydraulick art, and secret conveyances of water through the trunks and branches of the trees, are made to sing and clap their wings; but at the sudden appearance of an owl out of a bush of the same artifice, they immediately become all mute and silent. It was the work of Claudius Gallus, as Possevinus informs us. Hist. Man. Arts, c. 3. p. 37.

33. At Dantzick in Poland, there was set up a rare invention for weaving of four or five webs at a time without any human help. It was an engine that moved of itself, and would work night and day. This invention was suppressed, because it would have ruined the poor people of the town, and the artificer was secretly destroyed, as Lancelotti, the Italian Abbot, relates from the mouth of M. Muller, a Polonian, who had seen the device. Hist. Man. Arts, c. 7. p. 35.

Ukraine is the most fertile land in the world, the bread basket of Europe. But when the Ukrainians tried to assert independence from the USSR, the Bolsheviks, led by Stalin, exterminated them through hunger. In 1932-33, an artificial famine was brutally enforced, and 10 million innocents and their animals starved to death. Even as word got out, America and the world did nothing to stop it. This unspeakable political crime against humanity is the genocide known as...

A. I don't recall.
Q. Did it change over the years or did the payment remain the same?
A. I believe over the course of time it increased a little bit.
Q. Was that the -- was that payment the payment that -- was the payment made with respect to the jobs, the work you were performing for Jeffrey, was that your sole income at that time?
MR. PAGLIUCA: I object to the form. I'm also going to instruct you not to answer about sources of -- your personal sources of income outside of Mr. Epstein at all.
MS. McCAWLEY: What's the basis for that?
MR. PAGLIUCA: It's confidential, it's not part of this lawsuit.
MS. McCAWLEY: We have a protective order and it is part of this lawsuit with respect to our damage claims.
MR. PAGLIUCA: It's not and, in fact, you are not entitled to ask financial information of a defendant in this kind of case, in a defamation case unless and until there is a finding that you are entitled to punitive damages. That is clear in New York case law, both state and Federal.

MS. McCAWLEY: We disagree on that point and we will come back to that.
Q. From the source of payment from the source of Jeffrey, from your work, can you give me a range on that, do you know was it over $100,000?
A. I just testified I don't recall.
Q. You don't don't know if it was $500,000?
A. It was less than that.
Q. Somewhere between 100 and 500, would that be fair to say?
A. I believe it was between 100 and $200,000.
Q. Did Jeffrey during the time that you were working for him purchase a town home for you?
A. The subject of the townhouse is, I worked for it and I had a loan, we did loans.

Q. So a loan through Jeffrey?
A. I don't recall the exact transaction.
Q. Did he purchase for you a helicopter during the time you were working for him?
A. It was his helicopter.
Q. When did you obtain your pilot license?
A. I believe it was '98 or '99.
Q. Was that for both airplanes and helicopters or just helicopters?
A. Just helicopters.
Q. Have you ever flown President Clinton on your helicopter?
A. That is another one of Virginia's lies.
Q. The question is have you ever done that?
A. I have never flown President Clinton at any time ever, in any helicopter, in any place, any time, in any state, in any country, at any time anywhere.

Q. Have you ever had dinner with President Clinton at Jeffrey's home, at any of Jeffrey's homes?
A. No, I don't believe so.
Q. Have you traveled on Jeffrey's planes with President Clinton?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. Would that have been in 2002?
A. It's very hard for me to recollect exact dates but that sounds about right.
Q. Was that during the time that Virginia was working for Jeffrey?
A. I don't know that Virginia ever did work for Jeffrey. I don't exactly know if she testified to her so-called duties, we know she is a serial liar so I can't testify to what she did or didn't do. So I object to that characterization of her. So repeat the question, please.

No indication of a power source nearby?

[-] throwawaywtfwila [S] 2 points 6 months ago*

There are high voltage power lines that do not correspond to the city grid (meaning that they are totally disconnected from the power lines that feed the meters on all the nearby properties) that run behind the property. One of the neighbors is Perhaps the wealthiest man in the state, and coincidentally has a steel frame building behind his residence that these high voltage power lines go into.

There are also several electrical conduits that run from a multi breaker box setup at the meter, which run right by the point location but are very certainly are supposed to not be connected to anything.

Here is where things get somewhat unbelievable.

The neighbor on the opposite side has a large pile of very thick, very big broken up fiberglass sections that can be nothing else but a giant fake rock face. This location is on the western slope of koko head in Hawaii kai, Honolulu.

This whole mountain used to be military area during, before and slightly after ww2 and i have no doubt there are underground facilities that were carved out of the volcano. Whether there are any there on those properties is the question.

/u/de_hatron and /u/clevererer : any thoughts on the heat signature? I don't think that there would be any heat generated by disused electrical in those conduits unless they were actually connected to something that is drawing current, or there were devices below the pad, perhaps in a underground space that vents under the pad to disrupt the heat signature to anything like a helicopter with a flir camera.

Edit, the pad is located on the edge of a terraced earthen ledge, so i suppose the signals could be exiting the earthen side and not the hot point location

[-] Clevererer 1 point 6 months ago

Do you have any photographs of the pad or the general surroundings? Those could be helpful.

I agree that the heat signature would only come from active electronics.

If you look closely you can see cracks running from the point location. There are no other cracks on the entire pad, which is about 6-700 square feet several girls at any one time. She confided in me about her casual "friendship" with Donald. Mr Trump definitely seemed to have a thing for her and she told me how he kept going on about how he liked her "pert nipples".

Donald Trump liked flicking and sucking her nipples until they were raw. One evening when we were showering together she showed me her nipples. They looked incredibly painful as they were red and swollen and I remember wincing when I looked at them. I also know she had sexual relations with Trump at Jeffery's NY mansion on regular occasions as I once met Jen for coffee, just before she was going to meet Trump and Epstein together at his mansion.

I will shortly start forwarding you, all the emails which I have managed to save. They include the following:

[redacted] I moved from Edinburgh to New York in September 2006, where shortly after I was introduced to Jeffery Epstein by Natalie.

[redacted]. A couple months later, after he constantly stalked me around Edinburgh, I moved to New York to get as far away from him as possible and to start a new life.

I will send you that photo, amongst others as soon as I am able to fly back to the UK next week as I definitely, 100% have it all in my little storage box. I also have other photo's of the Epstein girls and I, whilst on the Island including a couple of pictures of me with Sergey Brin and his then finance Anne Wojcicki. I met the pair when they visited the Island for the day as Sergey wanted try out his new kite surfing equipment as he had only just started kite surfing and was very eager to try out his new equipment with us girls.

In my secret box, I also have old sim cards which still contain old text messages and telephone numbers which I will have to send you next week once I have them. Hopefully Jens number will be there and I can trace her somehow, surely?

* Email exchanges with Sarah Kellen which includes flight tickets booked for me to St Thomas.

*Email exchanges with Lesley Groff ,which proves that I was asked to source girls from modelling agencies when I went home to see my family in Cape Town. How Jeffery used education as a way for me to trade my soul to the Devil and become a sex slave to pay for my studies at FIT in New York.

I was desperate to get qualified and get a proper career. The email also show's evidence that I had to become almost anorexic for Jeffery to even entertain the idea of him paying for my tuition. As you will see, Lesley Groff asked me to send her a picture for Jeffery.

I would like to point out that I had to regularly send nude photo's to Lesley so that Jeffery could check how my body looked and if I was putting on any weight.

* An email which was exchanged between [redacted] using his code name [redacted] via Sugar Daddie.com. I have other correspondence which I had with him in my storage box in England.

* Email exchanges between the girl Natalie Malyshev whom received funds from Jeffery for introducing me to him.

COMMUNIST LEAGUE

In June 1847, the first congress of the League of the Just took place in London. At this conference, the League adopted a new charter, and formally changed its name to the Communist League. The Communist League was structured around the formation of primary party units known as "communes," consisting of at least three but not more than ten members. These were in turn to be combined into larger units known as "circles." The agenda of the Communist League called for the overthrow of the bourgeoisie and establishment of the rule of the proletariat and the construction of a new society free of both private property and social classes.

Red Flag of the Communist League

ORDER FOLLOWERS

THOSE WHO ARE MOST CULPABLE FOR THE CREATION OF TOTALITARIAN REGIMES

The painful yet unwavering truth of the matter is that the ORDER FOLLOWER always bears MORE Moral Culpability than the Order Giver, because the Order Follower is the one who actually performs the immoral action, and in taking such action, actually brings the resultant harm into physical manifestation in the world. ORDER FOLLOWING is the pathway to every form of Evil and Chaos in our world. It should NEVER be seen as a "virtue" by anyone who considers themselves a moral human being. Order Followers have ultimately been personally responsible and morally culpable for every form of Slavery and every single totalitarian regime that has ever existed upon the face of the Earth.

NAZI "CHRISTMAS"

During the Third Reich, the Nazis distorted the Christian religious holiday of Christmas into a celebration of Nazi ideology. The Jewish origins of Jesus and the commemoration of his birth as the Jewish Messiah was troubling for some members of the Nazi Party and their racist beliefs. The Nazi regime wanted to transform the consciousness of the German people into a cohesive national romanticism. The Nazis intended to destroy Christianity in Germany and insert in its place a combination of the belief in the old Germanic Pagan gods and the new "gods" who ruled the Nazi Party. After taking power in 1933, Nazi ideologues sought to reject Germany's long-held Christmas traditions by renaming Christmas to Julfest ("Yule Festival"), propagating its Germanic origins as the celebration of the Winter Solstice, and turning it into a "Festival of Light."

PRESIDENTS OF ITALY, FRANCE, GERMANY AND SWITZERLAND ARRIVE TO WITNESS THE RITUAL

The government, when you cheat on your tax return:

The fourth key, and a most valuable one indeed, is the image of the Tree of Life which accompanied the Gra's 18th century commentary on the S.Y. (Figure 2). It is, in my opinion, the most accurate illustration of the S.Y. In practice, I have found the Gra Tree far more illuminating than the "Cube of Space"; though it took steady effort to reach this perception of the light it offers.

While I doubt that there is any way to arrive at a similar understanding other than through personal effort, it is equally true that reading the results of another's effort can help. At the least, it helps to broaden our perspective. To that end, I offer the following brief analysis of the S.Y. and the Gra's Tree of Life, culled from my copious personal study notes.

BOLSHEVISM

LENIN & THE BOLSHEVIK REVOLUTION

In March 1918, the Bolshevik party adopted the name Russian Communist Party. In December 1925, the party name was changed to the All–Union Communist Party. Finally, in October 1952, it was renamed the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. In Western political science and journalism, some authors analyze Bolshevism from the standpoint of similarities and differences with Fascism and Nazism, with some describing it as being synonymous with political extremism, ideological fanaticism, intolerance, and a propensity for violence. In 1925, philosopher and linguist Nikolay Trubetskoy described Bolshevism in the Eurasian Times newspaper like this: "The positive significance of Bolshevism may be that having removed the mask and showed everyone Satan in his undisguised form, it led many through confidence in the reality of Satan, to faith in God."

GIUSEPPI MAZZINI & YOUNG ITALY

Young Italy sought to unite revolutionary groups who wanted to achieve unification through force. Most of Mazzini's associates in Young Italy were members of the Carbonari, and borrowed much of the new organization's structure and technique from Carbonari traditions. From Mazzini's headquarters in Marseille, Young Italy established an extensive network of supporters throughout the Italian peninsula, distributed propaganda, and infiltrated the armed forces and government bureaucracies. Young Italy had over 60,000 members by 1833, with branches in Genoa and other cities. After imprisonment for his revolutionary activities, Mazzini reformed the Young Italy in London in 1834. Mazzini went on to create several organizations aimed at the unification or liberation of other nations, in the wake of Young Italy, including Young Germany, Young Poland, and Young Switzerland, under the support of the continent-wide Young Europe. The Young Europe movement inspired a group of young Turkish army cadets and students, who later named themselves the Young Turks.

A. Yes, typed-out messages.

Q. Just explain one example of how it would work. Let's say that Ghislaine wanted to send him a message on MindSpring. How would that work?

A. An example?

Q. Sure.

A. It got so ridiculous at the end of my stay, okay? That Mr. Epstein, instead of talking to me that he wants a cup of coffee, he will call the office; the office would type it; they would send it to me, Jeffrey wants a cup of coffee, or Jeffrey wants an orange juice out by the pool.

Q. He would call the office in New York. They would then type it in MindSpring?

A. Send it to me.

Q. How would you know to check for it? How would you know to look for this MindSpring?

A. Because I was in the office. I was there. I was there. And we have a signal when it come on and says, Hey, you've got mail.

Q. Okay.

A. Every day. Every day it was new things put in. That's why I left, too.

Q. Do you know who set up the mind spring system?

A. It was a computer guy. It was a computer guy who worked only for Jeffrey. Mark. Mark Lumber.

Q. Was he local to Palm Beach?

A. No. He was in New York. Everything was set up from New York. And Mark Lumber, I remember he came to Palm Beach to set up the system at the house.

II. MS. MAXWELL HAS DISCLOSED AND SEARCHED ALL EMAIL ACCOUNTS

a. All Devices Have Been Forensically Searched for Responsive Emails

As requested by Plaintiff and Ordered by the Court, Ms. Maxwell's computer and all of her electronic devices have been forensically imaged, searched for the search terms requested by Plaintiff, and all responsive documents produced. This expensive, costly and time consuming exercise in futility simply confirmed that all responsive documents, including all responsive emails, were produced in March and April 2016.

Most significantly, the devices were searched for all emails—whether saved or deleted – and irrespective of which account they came from; not a single responsive email was located from any Mindspring account and no emails were located from Earthlink or any other secret, hidden, "undisclosed" email account, as Plaintiff speculates must exist.

b. The MindSpring account

The first two accounts discussed in the Motion have already been fully discussed in prior briefings and at length in conferral conferences.[1] See DE 320. In addition to the search of Ms. Maxwell's computer and devices, the first account, [redacted] was forensically searched on its server using the search terms proposed by Defendants and as required by the Court. The search uncovered no responsive documents from any time period. See DE 320. This included both emails in the account, deleted emails, and any other information relating to the account retained on the MindSpring server. There can simply be no claim for an adverse inference where Plaintiff has already received exactly what she requested – a forensic search of the account for her own defined terms. It resulted in nothing.

[1] Plaintiff conveniently omits the fact that the EarthLink and MindSpring accounts were in an address book purportedly recovered from Mr. Epstein's home by the Palm Beach Police in 2005. Thus, there is no indication or inference that either of these accounts were created or used in the 2000 to 2002 time frame as Plaintiff claims.

SOVIET COMMUNISM

Accounting for deaths by political executions, gulags, forced resettlement, deportation, starvation, and malnutrition due to famine, at least 20 million people were killed by Stalin's Communist regime. All Communist states that were established during the 20th century, including the Soviet Union, followed the lead of Karl Marx in rejecting inalienable individual rights in favor of so-called "collective economic and social rights." Ultimately, Marxism legitimizes violence without limitation, because it embraces Moral Relativism and rejects moral and ethical principles as "constructs of the dominant class."

"JESUS IS A TRICK ON NIGGERS"

It's ironic how the Bible was handed to enslaved people as a tool of "salvation," while the same text was used to justify their bondage. Religion was weaponized—edited, cherry-picked, and forced—to control rather than liberate I'm not surprised the whole thing never added up 🤦🏾‍♀️

From a quick look at it, this was clearly a "Russian" operation. The perps financers lawyers bankers and all are super Zionist Jews. But let continue to not notice that. Look either you think Jews are just naturally perverts or you admit this was an Israeli operation.

KATIE JOHNSON Plaintiff v. DONALD J. TRUMP and JEFFREY E. EPSTEIN Defendant(s).	CASE NUMBER: ED CV16-00797 DMG (KSx) To be supplied by the Clerk of The United States District Court COMPLAINT FOR CLAIM RELIEF DUE TO: 1. SEXUAL ABUSE UNDER THREAT OF HARM 2. CONSPIRACY TO DEPRIVE CIVIL RIGHTS

11. On the third occasion involving the Defendant, Donald J. Trump, the Plaintiff, Katie Johnson, was forced to engage in an unnatural lesbian sex act with her fellow minor and sex slave, Maria Doe age 12, for the sexual enjoyment of Defendant Trump. After this sex act, both minors were forced to orally copulate Defendant Trump by placing their mouths simultaneously on his erect penis until he achieved sexual orgasm. After zipping up his pants, Defendant Trump physically pushed both minors away while angrily berating them for the "poor" quality of their sexual performance.

12. On the fourth and final sexual encounter with the Defendant, Donald J. Trump, the Plaintiff, Katie Johnson, was tied to a bed by Defendant Trump who then proceeded to forcibly rape Plaintiff Johnson. During the course of this savage sexual attack, Plaintiff Johnson loudly pleaded with Defendant Trump to "please wear a condom". Defendant Trump responded by violently striking Plaintiff Johnson in the face with his open hand and screaming that "he would do whatever he wanted" as he refused to wear protection. After achieving sexual orgasm, the Defendant, Donald J. Trump put his suit back on and when the Plaintiff, Katie Johnson, in tears asked Defendant Trump what would happen if he had impregnated her, Defendant Trump grabbed his wallet and threw some money at her and screamed that she should use the money "to get a fucking abortion".

13. On the first occasion involving the Defendant, Jeffrey E. Epstein, the Plaintiff, Katie Johnson, was forced to disrobe into her bra and panties and to give a full body massage to Defendant Epstein while he was completely naked. During the massage, Defendant Epstein physically forced Plaintiff Johnson to touch his erect penis with her bare hands and to clean up his ejaculated semen after he achieved sexual orgasm.

14. On the second occasion involving the Defendant, Jeffrey Epstein, the Plaintiff, Katie Johnson, was again forced to disrobe into her bra and panties while giving Defendant Epstein a full body massage while he was completely naked. The Defendant, Donald J. Trump, was also present as he was getting his own massage from another minor, Jane Doe, age 13. Defendant Epstein forced Plaintiff Johnson to touch his erect penis by physically placing her bare hands upon his sex organ and again forced Plaintiff Johnson to clean up his ejaculated semen after he achieved sexual orgasm.

Hello
We
My name is [redacted]. Ghislane is my older sister. The man in the photographs from the Navajo Nation was the code keeper got the vault accessable only by a general on an island in Akhail Beach India. He has the keys to all the rooms of Epstein's video tapes.

I filed a sexual Harrasement suit against him as a contractor for the FBI and a volunteer for Global Canada Mounties in conjunction with the mission unknown soldier where I was left to complete an investigation with the accounting department. It seems that my pay and per diem had been taken from [redacted].

She stole my Royalty card and Royal Navy badge to posinh as a nanny to Princess Beatrice. To even get that close in security to dancing with Prince Andrew, she needed I'd. What she did not know was my call sign was prince Andrew because my first mission was to save live in Canada and prince Andrew paid for to leave human trafficking. I witnessed Griuffe slap Beatrice as an infant and abused many kids. The ottoman pic was from a house she rented in my name and would find teenagers who were having a baby and then take the baby to try to sell it to adoptive parents. The parents were sending money to her as she kept the babies and the moms locked up while she went to Vale with Eric Trump an paidd for a car on my credit card.

As Trump was a government contact or over $25000 I filed a complaint of sexual Harrasement on my behalf and the children they assaulted at Tramps in the back room where I was drugged and taped by them. My rape kit was Juliet Doe. Another one was Washington DC and that was positive for Trump DNA too. Donald and Eric cornered me in a fitting room when I tried to save a woman from being raped.

I was choked with their bare hands that both tested positive for low grade fiberglass from a construction site they were getting paid from the gvt for high grade material that they also wiped my genitalia with their hands. It also tested positive for cociane.

Ghislane is my older sister and work to save me from human trafficking and worked out the arrangements with Prince Andrew paying Epstein and me being out of foster care to study as a nanny.

I have been on a long mission for Veterans Administration internal affairs and the Attorney General for retaliation as a whistle blower for my Harrasement suit and I think we ended the meeting with your ugly fat man offering me a job at Nellis after I finished the reserves as a consultant and called me in his office to tell me to give him a blow job as I had before To Marco Perez. The individual in your seeking info with his tongue elongeted. He would save up for months to use a Polaroid to take a picture of himself like paparazzi in front of his 11 year old sisters genetaila send other children in 1989 where he gave a DNA sample and was paid by Eric

SUGGESTED FIELDS FOR SPECIAL RESEARCH RELATIVE ARTICHOKE

I. CHEMICALS (Including Drugs)

It is believed that specific research should be undertaken to develop new chemicals or drugs or to improve known elements for use in the Artichoke work. A study should be made to determine what drugs are best suited for direct use on subjects along the lines of amytal and pentothal and which drugs are best for indirect or long-range approach to subjects. This second type of drug should be one that could be administered over a considerable period of time, possibly being placed in food or water and would either have an agitating effect (producing anxiety, nervousness, tension, etc.) or a depressing effect (creating a feeling of despondency, hopelessness, lethargy, etc.). This study should include chemicals or drugs that can effectively be concealed in common items such as food, water, coca cola, beer, liquor, cigarettes, etc. This type of drug should also be capable of use in standard medical treatments such as vaccinations, shots, etc.

While there are literally hundreds of chemicals or drugs that effect the mental processes of an individual, many of these chemicals or drugs could be eliminated by individuals having special knowledge in the chemical/drug field. It is known that the Army Chemical Warfare Service has made exhaustive studies along these lines and perhaps they could furnish us with many specific answers. Men like [redacted] could, undoubtedly, give pertinent information if they could be properly approached.

The Nephilim

And it came to pass, when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them, That the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose. And the Lord said, My spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years. There were giants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown.

- Genesis 6:1-4

The Nephilim were giants who were descendants of the Watchers. According to Genesis 6, they were the offspring of the sons of God and daughters of men. These "sons of God" were fallen angels (demons) who bred with human females or possessed human males who then yielded children with human females. Being of partial angelic heredity, the Nephilim were considered "mighty men who were of old, the men of renown."

Then said the Most High, the Holy and Great One spake, and sent Uriel to the son of Lamech, and said to him: 〈Go to Noah) and tell him in my name "Hide thyself!" and reveal to him the end that is approaching: that the whole earth will be destroyed, and a deluge is about to come upon the whole earth, and will destroy all that is on it. And now instruct him that he may escape and his seed may be preserved for all the generations of the world.' And again the Lord said to Raphael: 'Bind Azâzêl hand and foot, and cast him into the darkness: and make an opening in the desert, which is in Dûdâêl, and cast him therein. And place upon him rough and jagged rocks, and cover him with darkness, and let him abide there for ever, and cover his face that he may not see light. And on the day of the great judgement he shall be cast into the fire. And heal the earth which the angels have corrupted, and proclaim the healing of the earth, that they may heal the plague, and that all the children of men may not perish through all the secret things that the Watchers have disclosed and have taught their sons.

- Enoch 10:1-7

And the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation (oiketerion), he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day.

- Jude 1:6

The Greek word oiketerion has a dual meaning: It is saying these beings also traded their higher level "Heavenly Bodies" for 3 dimensional temporal flesh. They bred strange children – a genetically altered abomination, a Corrupted Seed.

(57) ABSTRACT

Physiological effects have been observed in a human subject in response to stimulation of the skin with weak electromagnetic fields that are pulsed with certain frequencies near ½ Hz or 2.4 Hz, such as to excite a sensory resonance. Many computer monitors and TV tubes, when displaying pulsed images, emit pulsed electromagnetic fields of sufficient amplitudes to cause such excitation. It is therefore possible to manipulate the nervous system of a subject by pulsing images displayed on a nearby computer monitor or TV set. For the latter, the image pulsing may be imbedded in the program material, or it may be overlaid by modulating a video stream, either as an RF signal or as a video signal. The image displayed on a computer monitor may be pulsed effectively by a simple computer program. For certain monitors, pulsed electromagnetic fields capable of exciting sensory resonances in nearby subjects may be generated even as the displayed images are pulsed with subliminal intensity.

14 tables and --
15 Q. Do you have any recollection of V.R. coming to 16 the house when Prince Andrew was there?
17 A. It could have been, but I'm not sure.
18 Q. Not sure. When Mr. Dershowitz was 19 visiting, --
20 A. Uh-huh.
21 Q. -- how often did he come?
22 A. He came pretty -- pretty often. I would says,
23 at least four or five times a year.
24 Q. And how long would he stay typically?
25 A. Two, three days.

1 Q. Did he have massages sometimes when he was 2 there?
3 A. Yes. A massage was like a treat for 4 everybody. If they want it, we call the massage and 5 they have a massage.
6 Q. Now, Mr. Trump had a home in Palm Beach,
7 correct?
8 A. Uh-huh.
9 Q. So he didn't come and stay there, did he?
10 A. No, never.
11 Q. He would come for a meal?
12 A. He would come, have dinner. He never sat at 13 the table. He eat with me in the kitchen.
14 Q. Did he ever have massages while he was there?
15 A. No. Because he's got his own spa.
16 Q. Sure.
17 MS. EZELL: I don't have any other questions
18 right now. I'd just like to reserve if something 19 comes up to ask. But, otherwise, you may go ahead.
20 MR. LANGINO: It is noon, so I don't know what 21 everybody else's schedule is. I don't know how 22 you're feeling.
23 THE WITNESS: I am fine.
24 MS. EZELL: I do have another question. May I
25 ask it?

1 MR. LANGINO: Go ahead. Sure.
2 BY MS. EZELL:
3 Q. You said that you set up the massage tables.
4 And would you also set up the oils and the towels?
5 A. Yes, ma'am.
6 Q. And I think I read one time you said they used
7 40 or 50 towels a day?
8 MR. CRITTON: Form.
9 THE WITNESS: That's correct. There was a 10 tremendous amount of work in the house, especially 11 laundry towels, because they were -- we have 12 towels, piles of towels. And they use in the pool.
13 There was a lot of people in the pool and there
14 were a towel that went in the floor, we have to go 15 and pick it up, wash it. So it was -- it was a lot 16 of towels, yes.
17 BY MS. EZELL:
18 Q. And did you ever have occasion to go upstairs
19 and clean up after the massages?
20 A. Yeah, uh-huh.
21 Q. Did you ever find any vibrators in that area?
22 A. Yes. I told him, yes.
23 MS. EZELL: And did you ask that? I'm sorry.
24 MR. CRITTON: Yes.
25 MS. EZELL: I don't know how I missed that.

1 BY MS. EZELL:
2 Q. Since I did miss it, if you don't mind, let me
3 just ask you again.
4 Would you describe for me what kinds of 5 vibrators you found?
6 A. I'm not familiar -- not too familiar with the 7 names, but they were big dildos, what they call the big 8 rubber things like that (indicating). And I used to go 9 and put my gloves on and pick them up, put them in the 10 sink, rinse it off and put it in Ms. Maxwell --
11 Ms. Maxwell had in her closet, she had, like, a laundry
12 basket, one of those laundry basket that you put laundry 13 in. She have full of those toys. And that was -- and 14 that was me being professional, leaving the room ready 15 for bed when he would come back to the room again.
16 Q. Okay.
17 A. That happened a few times, few times.
18 Q. Were there other sex toys that you found in 19 the area --
20 A. No.
21 Q. -- sometimes? You mentioned she kept them in 22 a basket in her closet?
23 A. She kept them in her basket. She had some 24 videos there and she have a costume there. I know that 25 she bought it, that she brought it with her.

5 Facts That Gun Control Advocates Hate

1

92% of mass shootings since 2009 occurred in "gun free" zones.

A 2013 U.S. Department of Justice study found that gun violence had fallen by nearly 50% since its 1993 peak.

The so-called "gun show loophole" is a myth. It does not exist. There is no loophole in federal law that specifically exempts gun show transactions from any other laws normally applied to gun sales. Not one.

Guns are used 2.5 million times a year in self-defense in USA.

The following countries enacted gun bans before committing genocide in the 20th Century: Ottoman Turkey, Soviet Union, Nazi Germany, China, Guatemala, Uganda, Cambodia.

"If violent crime is to be curbed, it is only the intended victim who can do it. The felon does not fear the police, and he fears neither judge nor jury. Therefore, what he must be taught to fear is his victim."

Lt. Col. Jeff Cooper, U.S.M.C.

HEINRICH HIMMLER
SS, AHNENERBE & TOTENKOPF

Himmler's interest in the occult heavily influenced the development of the racial policy of Nazi Germany, and he incorporated esoteric symbolism and rituals into every aspect of the SS. Chosen in 1932, the dual lightning bolt logo of the SS is a pair of Sig runes from the Armanen Runes created by Guido von List in 1906. The ancient Sowilō Rune originally symbolized the sun, but was renamed "Sieg" ("victory") in List's Runes. The Totenkopf (Death's Head) symbol had been chosen for the SS to mean solidarity to the cause, and a commitment unto death. It was the main symbol for the SS-Totenkopfverbände (SS Death's Head Units), which was the SS organization responsible for administering the Nazi concentration and extermination camps.

The SHORT PATH to Enlightenment

Introduction to

IMMEDIATE AWAKENING

Paul Brunton

Clinton added to what Houston said, talking in local colloquialisms. "Bottom line is, we've got control of the (drug) industry, therefore we've got control of them (suppliers and buyers). You control the guy underneath ya' and Uncle (Sam) has ya' covered. What have ya' got to lose? No risk. No one's gonna hang ya' out to dry. And whatever spills off the truck as it passes through (he laughed and snorted another line of coke) you get to clean up."

Hall smiled at his friend, which was apparently interpreted as consent. Clinton motioned for his aide to get his ledger. Overstreet began pulling out his paperwork, and Hall neatly cleared the table of the remaining coke lines.

Clinton gestured to me and told Houston, "Get her out of here".

Houston didn't move and laughed. "She's a Presidential Model. She's kept secrets bigger than yours."

Clinton responded, "I don't care. Get her the fuck out of here."

Hall's wife led me away and locked me in a back bedroom. After an indeterminate period of time, I heard her telephone Hillary at the guest villa. She then drove me up the mountain through the dark to meet with Hillary. Although I had previously met Hillary we had very little to say to each other--particularly since I was still dazed and tranced from the tortures I had endured at the CIA Near Death Trauma Center in Lampe. Hillary knew I was a mind-controlled slave, and, like Bill Clinton, just took it in stride as a "normal" part of life in politics.

Hillary was fully clothed and stretched out on the bed sleeping when Hall's wife and I arrived. "Hillary, I brought you something you'll really enjoy. Kind of an unexpected surprise. Bill ordered her out of the meeting and I took her to my bedroom and made an interesting discovery. She is literally a two-faced (referring to my vaginal mutilation carving) bitch."

"Hmm?" Hillary opened her eyes and sleepily roused herself. "Show me."

Hall's wife ordered me to take my clothes off while Hillary watched. "Is she clean?" Hillary asked, meaning disease free.

"Of course, she's Byrd's," she responded, continuing the conversation as though I were not there. "Plus, I heard Houston say something about her being a Presidential Model, whatever the hell that's supposed to mean."

"It means she's clean," Hillary said matter-of-factly as she stood up.

I was not capable of giving thought to such things back then, but I am aware in retrospect that all Presidential Model slaves I knew seemed to have an immunity to social diseases. It was a well known fact in the circles I was sexually passed around in that government level mind-controlled sex slaves were "clean" to the degree that none of my abusers took precautions such as wearing condoms.

Hall's wife patted the bed and instructed me to display the mutilation. Hillary exclaimed, "God!" and immediately began performing oral sex on me. Apparently aroused by the carving in my vagina,[2] Hillary stood up and quickly peeled out of her matronly nylon panties and pantyhose. Uninhibited despite a long day in the hot sun, she gasped, "Eat me, oh, god, eat me now". I had no choice but to comply with her orders, and Bill Hall's wife made no move to join me in my distasteful task. Hillary had resumed examining my hideous mutilation and performing oral sex on me when Bill Clinton walked in. Hillary lifted her head to ask, "How'd it go?"

Clinton appeared totally unaffected by what he walked into, tossed his jacket on a chair and said, "It's official. I'm exhausted. I'm going to bed."

The Healing Web

A majority of the 1st World is presently witnessing a catastrophic state of institutional failure in their primary state-sponsored Medical industries. Hospitals are being built at breakneck speeds to combat a global health crisis, but in reality, it's not actually a crisis at all, but in fact a masterfully orchestrated plan carried out by a sick Cabal of elite profiteers. Previously known as "Robber Barons," their wealth goes all the way back to Pharaoh. Over centuries, they've studied psychology, black magick and alchemy, and used their advanced occult knowledge against the common people.

In a way the Healing Web is comparing the worst of Big Pharma to the best of Holistic medicine. That may seem biased at first, but as you come to understand the full history, and that Medicine is partially being employed as a tool for mass extermination, Holistic philosophy is clearly the better choice of first resort. Diet modification alone could prevent or reverse a majority of diseases, but our institutions have misled us on some of the most fundamental aspects of health & nutrition. They have lied about what is unhealthy, while at the same time, they've taken naturally healthy foods and sapped the nutrition out of them through cooking & pasteurization. Other foods have been transformed into poison by adding preservatives, and sugar. Many personal physicians may mean well, but the core of the Medical Industry is frightfully corrupt. The interaction between Government, Big Pharma, Big Agra, and Big Food constitutes a perpetual genocide we've come to accept as the norm.

Thankfully, we still have a choice. Every condition would benefit from a multifaceted approach to treatment, such as a combination of detox, diet, exercise, immune support through supplementation, and energetic & spiritual healing. A holistic approach can even include a pharmacological treatment, with ancillary natural remedies to minimize the side effects.

What is the optimal diet for human health and longevity? Many are struggling to find an answer to this question. The debate has been heavily polluted with propaganda and misinformation from every angle. Clearly the Standard American Diet that most people grew up with was the wrong answer. Excess sugar and fried food have fueled one of the greatest unacknowledged epidemics man has ever known. Ninety percent of the regular grocery store is now the "poison" section. How can we navigate our way through this toxic labyrinth?

Before one heals, one must be willing to give up the things that are making him sick. Many are now rejecting the corporate food industry and the government endorsed "Food Pyramid." People are experimenting with different diets to find out what works best for them. One must choose the appropriate diet for their individual needs, at the appropriate time in their life. It would behove us to not be married to a singular idea that might not serve us indefinitely. One must listen to their body, and adapt to situations as they arise. With advanced training, the body can be reprogrammed to require less food, but this should be considered a skill to master, not a treatment for disease in a time of need. Be wary of lab-made "Frankenfoods" being promoted by notoriously unhealthy mega-corporations under the pretense of being more health conscious. These may be part of the New World Order's depopulation agenda.

We are living through a war against our personal health being led by the establishment. To survive, we must go back to what we know is real, natural, and tested by time; organic, sustainable farming, and raw or minimally processed food. We've developed a culinary culture that mandates overcooking everything, destroying beneficial enzymes, bacterial cultures, and proteins. This causes poor digestion and malabsorption of nutrients, which can have a negative domino effect leading to greater systemic illnesses. It's time to unlearn everything we've been taught by the agencies we thought we could trust.

The healing technologies being withheld from the public could extend life close to immortality. The prospect of eternal life may sound alluring, but does humanity have the maturity yet to adhere to a more ethical population regulation strategy that doesn't rely on mass deception? Are we as a species nothing more than a swarm of locust, pillaging one continent to the next, consuming planet after planet, leaving barren radioactive ruins in our path? Would we be considered a plague by the rest of the galaxy? Natural law dictates "Kill or be killed," but how should civilization fit into the picture? All energy and life-force is recycled from something that came before it. We are all one, and simultaneously individual refractions of Source. The Universe embodies the Eastern wisdom of Yin and Yang, not the New Age mantra, "Love & Light." Our mission, beyond survival, is to learn how to coexist in harmony with each other and all other sentient life in the universe, to create, and make progress without requiring endless consumption, the model of our present society.

Whats important is the next year is going to be WILD. Trump did win this election, but they will not give it to him because they can't have him as the most powerful person in the world for what's coming. The whole "most important election" wasn't bullshit. In 2018 we were contacted through extraterrestrial means. We didn’t know it at that point because it was different than other contacts we have found. Yes, we find signals of potential alien life all the time but its usually just crap or hackers trying to mess around. What was different this time is they broadcasted a message to us in OUR language, before it used to be frequencies or dialects that were completely useless to us. Here is the paraphrased message:

"This is to those listening on Earth. We have determined your life space has reached acceptable levels for galactic integration. Integration requires peace among beings and commune of all. This message is to prepare you of our arrival."

We originally played it off as someone hacked our software somehow and was trying to fuck with us. It’s happened before, but we are paid good money to sort through the bullshit and the smart college kids thinking they’re geniuses. We inspected where the signal was “coming from” and saw nothing nor did we get a further transmission. We got the same message two weeks ago, we keep a record of all recording and check for matches, and this one pulled a 100% match. This time we looked again. Sure as shit, there is something outside of our solar system and approaching. Intelligence estimates their arrival will be in about 6 months from when we received the message, putting it at end of April / early May.

Q. Up to New York?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you going to pdf them?
A. Yes.
Q. And did she have a fax machine -- not a fax machine, a copy machine in her office as well?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. So how would you generally do that? Would you do that through a Microsoft program?
A. Through Citrix.
Q. Through Citrix. All right. With Citrix, and that is, if you said you saw some names of individuals on her computer if you were just going to pdf some documents up to New York why would you of -- what would of caused you to have seen any names on her computer?
MS. EZELL: Objection to form.
THE WITNESS: All the calls that came to 358 El Brillo, they came through the telephone, they have a transcript somehow that they connect to the computer, so you can pull it and you register the time, who called, who didn't call, and you can pull this at your request. So I used to use that to go back to some calls that they were requesting, especially when the hurricane season happened.

BY MR. CRITTON:
Q. Okay. So if I understand, even the computer you used would have had that same feature?
A. No, no, it was totally different. Mine was slower and all the time was breaking down that's why we have the guy from Ohio came and fixed the computers.
Q. Okay. Were there other computers that you used that had that feature, that is that --
A. Only Sarah, Mrs. Maxwell, and the staff house.
Q. Staff house being yours?
A. The guest house, yes, my office.
Q. So you could go out to your guest house then and look for the same information?
A. No.
Q. All right. I don't understand but why don't we take a break because we're almost out of tape.
(Thereupon, a recess was had.)
THE VIDEOGRAPHER: We're back on the record with tape number three.

BY MR. CRITTON:
Q. Mr. Rodriguez, I was asking you about Ms. Maxwell's computer and you told me how you went on the computer.
If she was out of town would she take her computer with her?
A. No.
Q. It was something she left there?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. And when you went on to pdf, I think you said it was really one time that you saw the names of some of these girls?
A. Yes.
Q. And if I understand it correctly, it was -- did it have the name and then a phone number?
A. Yes.
Q. And was that something that was automatically downloaded from the system?
A. Yeah, from the phone system to the computer so we have a transcript.
Q. When you say a transcript, the fact that Sally Jones, phone number 561, whatever it was, called.
A. It was a transcript of the phone calls of the house, we can get it from the computer.

Q. Okay. And I'm distinguishing, transcript, it would tell you the name and phone number, it wouldn't tell you what was said?
A. It was the message also.
Q. Okay. Now I understand. And so Ms. Maxwell when you said she had the names of some of these girls who may have given massages, or at least were what you called earlier girls that gave massages, or females that gave massages, she would have had it because that was information that was downloaded from the Citrix system into her computer?
A. Yes.
MS. EZELL: Objection, form.
BY MR. CRITTON:
Q. Okay, I understand. Now, you said she also had some pictures. Is that that one time you also saw pictures?
A. Yes.
Q. And were you going through her computer at that time?
A. No.
Q. The question is, if all you were going to do was try to pdf some financial information to

The Battle of the Clouds: On July 28th, 1874, the little community of Saw Mill Run, near Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, met with disaster from a most singular phenomenon. Curious villagers and country folk looked at the sky and beheld something very strange. Over the northeastern horizon, slowly and majestically, sailed a black cloud ringed with a scarlet belt; and over the southwest horizon slowly sailed another black cloud—with a scarlet belt.

Onward they came towards each other, like two men-of-war approaching the scene of battle. As they drew nearer, they discharged flashes of lighting, and the whole effect was that of an eerie sea battle high in the air.

Nearer and nearer they drew, the violence of the flashes of lightning increasing the closer they approached, until, with one great flash, they collided, and rain fell in torrents. One hundred and fifty persons drowned and it is believed to be the most disastrous flood ever to befall that section of the country.

Rubbish in Space

These few chapters of observational material show that space contains a much greater amount and variety of material scattered between planets than most of us, including the astronomers, have known. Before true meteoric material (the now well-known iron and stone meteorities) were scientifically accepted there had to be innumerable cases where meteorites were truly seen to fall. These were collected by authoritative witnesses. That these meteorites had been identified by their testure and chemical elements, as well as their external appearance, was not enough to overcome bigotry, and more than one French scientist had to risk his professional standing before the Academy in Paris ere it was accepted by science that iron and stone did fall from the sky. This controversy was raging as recently as one hundred and fifty years ago, in spite of firm demonstrations by some isolated scientific observers one or two hundred years previously, and there were still holdouts until the end of the 19th century. So firm is astronomy in its entrenched dogma, that there are still some respected men who dispute that the Arizona meteor crater is meteoric in origin, or that the Carolina Bays were caused by anything but mysteriously formed whirlpools.

How to Develop Your Qi and Live Within Your Holy Spirit

This is the ancient secret breathing methods of the Celts, Vikings, Druids and the Egyptians. However, in modern terms the words from both Western science and Chinese medicine are used in the following, modern explanation.

"Breath Work" or "Qi Gong" breathing power is a simple technique. Simple techniques are easy to learn. So, it has also been a very secret technique among both martial artists and monastic communities because it gives great power to those who practice it – great power of Mind, great power of Spirit and great power in physical prowess. Simple techniques that are easily learned are also easily concealed. Even in the various modern Qi Gong books and videos, either this secret technique is unknown to the teachers or they are purposely keeping it hidden from the audience. There are 10,000 methods of Qi Gong movements but only one, foundational breathing secret. The 10,000 methods can be taught, but without this one, simple basic secret, you will spend 10,000 years looking for your Qi. But with this, the original secret method, you can become a master of all forms of Qi Gong very quickly.

Everyone knows that we breathe through our lungs. Pause to take a deep breath now and use your Mind and Inner Eye to look inside your lungs as you inhale. You may want to do this several times and study carefully your own breathing. After all, your breathing keeps you alive. So, should you not take a little time to study how your breathing does this? Think about it as you breath and look inward. Study how the air flows from your nose into the very most bottom of your lungs. This is what the Buddha did before he was enlightened. This is what Jesus and Odin did as they pondered Life and the Universe.

However, most people breath incorrectly. The causes for this error are explained in How the Jews Betrayed Mankind, Volume 3, The Blood-Suckers of Judah. But we don't need to know the complicated causes of the problem in order to correct this problem.

When we simply breathe through our lungs, yes, the blood is oxygenated. But breathing only through the lungs is a shallow breathing method that does not thoroughly oxygenate the blood, not does shallow breathing clear out the waste gases such as carbon dioxide. Routinely breathing with your chest and rib muscles does not pull the air deeply into the very bottom of the lungs.

If you look at a little baby, you will see that they do not breathe with their lungs; they breathe with their abdomen. It is the rising and falling of the diaphragm in the abdomen that moves the air into and out of the lungs. Even the modern physicians know this. But what the Western physicians do not know, is the secret of moving their breath with their diaphragm, directed by the Mind and in tune with their acupuncture meridians. The method is very simple. Don't worry! If a baby can do it, so can you. After all, you will be re-learning something here that you already knew long ago when you, too, were a little child.

When people breathe only through their lungs, their chest muscles do most of the work and their diaphragm is rather passive. So, their chest rises and falls, but their abdomen doesn't move much at all. Lung breathing is similar to a bucket pump that lifts water with atmospheric pressure. (see Figure_135_Bucket_Pump) As a piston moves in a tube, the displacement of air creates a vacuum, which causes atmospheric pressure to push the water up the tube. In a bucket pump, it is the pressure of the atmosphere that pushes the water, not the mechanical action of the pump. Once the water reaches the plunger via atmospheric pressure then the piston can lift it.

When breathing with your chest muscles, all that you are doing is moving the lungs like bellows and moving air in and out. Moving air back and forth in the lungs with chest-breathing allows the blood cells to pick up oxygen and give up carbon dioxide which keeps your body alive – but not alive to its fullest potential or highest level of health and power. Just the chest muscles around the ribs can accomplish this. And this is how most people breath, living their lives at one-tenth power. However, when you breathe using your diaphragm, then your full power as a Human Being is energized.

Breathing with the chest muscles is like a bucket pump or lift pump that works the lungs alone but the technique of breathing with the diaphragm is like a double-acting piston pump which both pushes and pulls against the fluids in the circulatory systems as well as moving the lungs for oyygen exchange. (see Figure_136_Double-action_Piston_Pump)

Please understand that the human body has tens of thousands of little tubes, veins, arteries, capillaries and lymph channels, suffusing the entire body from head to toe. All of these tubes are fitted with thousands of one-way flapper valves located all along their lengths. In this way, fluids only flow in one direction and the circulation of fluids (blood and lymph, etc.) is accomplished. Circulation of fluids in the body is only possible because of these little one-way valves that prevent the fluids from backing up. Through its up and down pumping action during respiration, the diaphragm acts as a double-acting piston pump for all body fluids.

So, when the diaphragm is properly used in breathing, not only are the lungs moved to oxygenate the blood, but the mechanical pumping action of this diaphragm organ both pushes and pulls fluids throughout the body while the one-way valves prevent any back-flow. Thus, circulation of blood and lymph is induced. This lowers blood pressure by taking some of the work off the heart while thoroughly oxygenating the entire body and cleaning out toxins as the lymph and blood and intercellular fluids are efficiently pumped throughout the body.

In addition, when one's Mind concentrates on abdominal breathing while using the following secret technique, then your Qi (pronounced "chee") also moves and circulates throughout your entire acupuncture meridian system and nervous system. This gives great psychic, mental, mystic and spiritual power to each person who achieves it. Yet, it is all natural. We all had this power as children but it was soon forgotten after about five years of age.

Acupuncture meridians are unknown in Western medicine. And a lot of effort has been put into finding them anatomically and microscopically. The lack of success in finding them as demonstrable body organs is because they exist as a plexus of energy tubes created by the natural folds within the body rather than being actual dissectible tubes containing Qi flow. The meridians exist in the same way that a tube exists when you roll up a piece of paper and then pour water through the resulting tube. The water flows but does the tube actually exist? No, what exists is a flat piece of paper. But its shape as a tube allows water to be channeled by it. The water flows through the rolled up paper but it does not flow because of any actual pipe or tube in the paper. The shape of the paper channels the water, not an actual tube within the paper. So when a Western physician dissects a cadaver looking for acupuncture meridians and then claims that he has "scientifically proven" that they do not exist, all that he is doing is unrolling the paper and then claiming that it is impossible for water to be channeled by a flat piece of paper. The meridians are folded within the body. When you dissect the body, you unfold the meridians. It's as simple as that. They are a plexus of energy channels within the natural folds and bends and fascia of the body. But when physicians look for them by dissection, they don't find them because they have undone the skein and unrolled the tubes. They exist as a shape and as an energy channel, not as an organ. As a shape within your body, they channel the electromagnetic energies of your Qi flow.

The ancient people knew this as they sat on a mat or sat upright quietly in the forest. Without the interference of TV sets and jet planes flying overhead, they could tune into their innermost mystical Being. And you can, too.

This is another reason that the Western physicians as well and a majority of Chinese physicians do not have a thorough understanding of Qi (Life Force); it is something that you find within yourself. If you do not find it within yourself, then you won't be able to observe it within anyone else. (I am directing this to you Chinese physicians who have not found your own Qi even though you have intellectually achieved a license to practice acupuncture. You know that you are charlatans. S, start here and learn what you need.)

Here is how you can find your own Qi and be a master of both physical and esoteric knowledge and mystical powers, attain great skill in martial arts and sports, achieve complete understanding of all religions, and attain good health, long life and immortality. All you have to do is think wholesome thoughts, direct your Mind carefully and breathe! And it's all for free! Such a deal you won't find among the Jews who don't know it, nor among the Chinese who won't teach it even if they know it.

As explained in Volume 2 above, we are the result of millions of years of evolution wherein Humans have sat directly upon the ground for rest and for recharging our energies through direct contact with the energy fields of the earth. So, we have evolved special acupuncture points through which we absorb energy which is then channeled to the rest of our bodies.

One such point is the Yung-Chuan (bubbling spring) points (K-1) in the heart of the bottoms of the feet. This is the last point that touches the earth as we walk or run. Jewish shoe fashions constrict this point and prevent Qi absorption and circulation. So, Celtic slippers, American Indian moccasins or Chinese kung-fu shoes should be worn daily instead of Jewish shoe fashions. (See Volume III, for details.)

However, the two points that we will primarily use in this Qi Gong Lesson is the Hui-Yin point (Ren-1) in the center of the perineum, located between the anus and the scrotum in males and between the anus and the posterior labial commissure in females. (see Figure_137_Ren_Channel) The other point is the Du-1 point located midway between the tip of the coccyx and the anus. (see Figure_138_Du_Channel)

You don't need to look in a mirror and touch that lower area with your hands to find these points. There has been a lot of ignorant speculation by Western physicians, as well as by Chinese physicians who have no knowledge of their own Qi, as to how the acupuncture meridians were discovered. To cut through all of the theories, quite frankly, they were discovered in the same way that you will discover them, yourself, by using your Mind and your Breath and your inner perceptions and feeling them within yourself. Merely use your mind, go inside yourself by using your Inner Eye and gaze internally as you breathe.

Usually, people who have spent their lives sitting in chairs will find that they sit with their weight rotated forward on their hip bones with the weight balanced on the bottom hip bone tip of the ramas of ischium. This puts the body's weight directly upon the Ren-1 point and cuts off Qi flow. (The causes for this improper and unhealthy sitting posture are detailed in Volume 3, The Blood-Suckers of Judah.) What you should try to do, is roll back on the bottom of your hip bones until the tip of your spine makes contact with the sitting platform whether such a platform is a chair or the floor. You will feel a triangular area formed by the bottoms of both hip bones and the tip of your spine. The small of your back will straighten, your anus will be at the center of the triangle and both your Ren-1 and your Du-1 point will be in light contact with the sitting platform, preferably on the ground or on a mat or a blanket on the ground or on the floor. But a firm chair is also okay).

First, sit and use your Inner Eye to study your breath as you inhale and exhale. This is how the Aryan Buddha, Gautama Buddha, became enlightened, merely by studying his inward and outward breath. As you sit calmly, you may look inward using the Eye of Odin Technique (Buddha's Third Eye as explained in Chapter 4) or merely close your eyes to concentrate your Mind on your breathing. Do not practice on a full stomach. Mentally, avoid the five poisons of hate, lust, malice, envy and greed. Be positive in feelings of love, compassion and goodness. Once your Mind is calm and you can observe your breathing with your Inner Eye, begin to use the following secret breathing technique. There is both a beginner's and an advanced method for achieving this skill.

First, the beginner's method is to pull upward on your anus as you inhale. You do this with your interior muscles around your anus. Feel how your anus pulls upward as you inhale. As you pull up on your anus, your diaphragm descends and the air enters your lungs. Then, relax the muscles around your anus and the diaphragm automatically rises and air exits the lungs. Repeat this as often as you want to in order to understand the method. This pulling up on your anus as you inhale is just the beginner level of this technique to familiarize yourself with the feelings of these various movements. Practice this a few times and understand how this method affects your breathing. This technique is correct for learning but it tends to pull the Qi up into the hollow organs where it has little use. So, once you learn it comfortably, you should abandon it and move on to the advanced technique where you pull up on the two acupuncture points located on each side of your anus. These two points are indicated in the acupuncture maps in Figure_137_Ren_Channel and in Figure_138_Du_Channel.

The advanced breathing technique is identical to the above but with this one change. Instead of pulling up on your anus as you inhale, pull up on the acupuncture points of your perineum as you inhale. Your anus will still rise up and all of the other benefits will still occur but now, instead of the Qi entering the hollow organs of your intestines, it enters the acupuncture meridians through the Ren-1 point and through the Du-1 point. The Qi will then energize and suffuse your entire Being. This change in direction of how your Qi flows, is a result of applying the directing force of your Mind. It is your Mind that directs your Qi, but once you train yourself in proper breathing, your Qi will circulate on its own through proper breathing.

You may practice this breathing method whether sitting, standing, walking or lying down. Try to make it your normal way of breathing and you will find the secret of Life's True Knowledge and True Power. The breath should be slow, long and continuous, smooth and fine. It should be inaudible and internal. Huffing and puffing, is to be avoided. The inward breath and the outward breath should be of equal lengths.

But once you learn how to do it, there is more to this method. What you will want to do is direct the Qi with your Mind so that it circulates throughout your body just as the blood and lymph circulate. But the Qi circulates in the acupuncture meridians, the major ones being the Governing Vessel up the spine to the crown of the head and the Conception Vessel up the front of the abdomen and chest. Where these converge, you will discover both the ancient Egyptian secret of mystic breathing power as well as the rarely found Chinese kung-fu system known as the Triple Warmer meridian.

The Du Channel (Figure_138_Du_Channel) originates from the inside of the lower abdomen. Descending, it emerges at the perineum. The it ascends posteriorly along the interior of the spinal column to Du-16 at the nape of the neck, where it enters the brain. It further ascends to the vertex and winds over the forehead to the columella of the nose.[Essentials of Chinese Acupuncture, Foreign Language Press, Beijing, page-260] This is the first direction that you should direct your Qi.

Begin in this way: As you pull up on the Du-1 point as you inhale, feel your breath descend and fill the lower abdomen (tan tien, known as the "sea of Qi"). The breath should be full and natural and the whole abdomen should expand when you inhale even around your kidneys. Once you inhale into your abdomen, then push with the Du-1 point toward the small of your back at Du-4 (the Mingmen point). When this point is pinched from improper posture (as a result of wearing Jewish fashions) it can lead to stiffness of the back, lumbago, impotence, and seminal emissions. So, let the curve of your back straighten up as you sit by tucking your tailbone under. Try it a few times. Pull up on your Du-1 point behind your anus as you inhale, filling the abdomen with Qi, then from the Du-1 point push the Qi toward the Du-4 point on your spine at the small of the back. Then relax. When you push your Qi using both muscular force and mental intent, you should use only the amount of force that you use in blinking your eyes. In other words, you use force, but not very much force. It is a very gentle pushing power that you use, like gently pushing air or liquids through a tube. You want to direct the energy, not force it.

Do this exercise as many times as you wish without tiring yourself. Then, when you can feel a warm flow of your Qi to Du-4, do the same method and direct your Qi to a higher point on your spine. Practice until you can direct your Qi to the crown of your head (the Du-20 or Bai Hui point). Then direct your Qi to flow with a single breath all the way from your Du-1 point, up your spine, over the top of your head, along the ridge of your nose entering your gums to the center of your palate. Touch the top of your palate with your tongue tip to connect this Qi flow to your Triple Warmer channel and inhale as the Qi descends down your esophagus and returns to your abdomen (Tan Tien, or Sea of Qi). In this technique, you attain knowledge of the ancient Egyptian breathing technique that brings you into union and unity. (see Figure_35_Union)

Next, you will learn to direct your Qi up the front of your body through the Ren Channel. The Ren Channel arises from the lower abdomen and emerges from the perineum. It runs anteriorly to the pubic region and ascends along the interior of the abdomen, passing through Ren-4 and the other points along the front midline to the throat. Running further upward, it curves around the lips, passes through the cheeks and enters the infra-orbital region of the eyes. (St-1) [Essentials of Chinese Acupuncture, Foreign Language Press, Beijing, Page-272]

Using this same method, pull up on the Ren-1 point on your perineum as you inhale, only this time as you exhale, direct your Qi to the Ren-2 point just at the line made by the top edge of your pubic hair region (symphysis pubis). When you can feel this occur, relax, inhale using the up-pulling method, then push the Qi from the Ren-1 point to ever higher points on the Ren Channel. Little by little you teach yourself how to direct your Qi to a higher point along your midline Ren channel. As you feel the Qi flow upward to your throat and then to your Ren-24 point on your chin, it will flow around your mouth and then upward to the edge of your eye sockets. As it flows around your mouth, you should feel the corners of your mouth turn upward in a gentle Buddha smile as the tension of your face relaxes and any facial tension and wrinkles disappear.

You can touch with your fingers and feel a tiny little indentation along the bottom edge of your eye socket. This is the point where the Qi enters and suffuses into your body from the Ren Channel. From the edges of your eye sockets, the Qi enters the interior of your body, connects to the top of your palate where you have the tip of your tongue touching, and descends down your esophagus back to your abdomen. This is Qi circulation of your Ren Channel.

Now, combine these two methods into one. Pull up on both points as you inhale, then as you exhale and push from both of these perineum points, push your Qi simultaneously up both the Ren and Du Channels. When the Qi meets at the top of your palate, inhale an pull the Qi down to the Tan Tien in you abdomen. When you achieve this, you have achieved one of the most sought after techniques of Qi Gong and martial arts skills – the Micro-Cosmic Orbit of the Qi.

The next step is to achieve macro-Cosmic Orbit circulating your Qi up both channels, down your esophagus to the Ren-1 point and then pushing it along the front of the legs to the tip of the big toe. Then as you inhale, pull the Qi along the sole of the feet and up the back of the legs to the Du-1 point and then direct it up the spine. In this way, your Qi circulated from the back of your heel to the top of your head with every breath.

Later, as you push the Qi up your spine to the points between your shoulder blades, you can then direct it with your mind along the outside of the arms to the finger tips and then inhale it back along the inside of the arms to the spine.

The goal of these breathing exercises is to be able to have conscious control over your breathing and the internal power of your Qi. Once you can control your Qi and move it at will, you will be able to heal yourself of illnesses and old age as well as heal others of their diseases through the "laying on of hands" technique of the early Christians. Once you attain a knowledge of your own Qi (Holy Spirit), all of the religions of the world open to you like a lotus flower and you can see the false from the true. You will see with your own spiritual eyes that Judaism and Islam are false.

While sitting in whatever meditation posture suites you, concentrate deeply as you visualize inwardly your Qi as a flow of light or a warm energy emanating from your Dan Tien area. Inhale through your nose and feel the energy of the air descend down the front interior of your body to the dan tien. When the abdomen absorbs this air-energy, breath it upward through the spine up the neck, into the brain and outward from the third eye as rays of light. Then repeat. Once you become adept with your Qi Gong, you will be able to breathe through the skin and absorb the Qi into the bone marrow.

NOTE: whenever you are advised to push or to pull the Qi in your body, use only the force that you would use in blinking your eyes. If you are using any more force than this, you are doing the exercises incorrectly. Remain relaxed with your mind in control. If you find your thoughts racing, concentrate on your breathing and let the thoughts disappear on their own. Do not strain or use muscular force. When you finish the meditation session, take a few minutes to cool down by massaging your Dan Tien in a circular fashion an equal number of times clockwise and counter clockwise, to relax and let the Qi dissipate. Rub your palms together to make some heat and place these over your eyes. Then open your eyes and wait until all perspiration evaporates before getting up.

IF YOU ARE IN A HURRY TO GET RESULTS, YOU WILL FAIL TO GET RESULTS. If you take your time and take one step at a time, as if preparing yourself for a long voyage and making sure that you have everything that you need, you will succeed. Don't rush. Be thorough in your understanding of each technique before moving on to the next one.

Sit in whatever meditation posture you find comfortable and relax. Look at the tip of your nose and then look through the Eye of Odin or the Buddhist Third Eye as described in the main section of this book. By concentrating your mind on the various techniques, thoughts will disappear and you will find a peaceful mind. Concentrate your mind in the lower Dan Tien as you breathe.

Use abdominal breathing to inhale deeply into your abdomen. The abdomen moves outward as the air enters your lungs. Inhale evenly for five or six seconds and exhale evenly for an equal length of time or an equal number of heart beats. You choose a comfortable breath cycle and regulate it accordingly. If you can inhale slowly for 30 seconds and exhale for 30 seconds, that is okay. But set your own time. There is no rush. It is not a competition. Sit and breathe for 10 minutes or twenty minutes.

There are various meditation candles available that burn down at set times. Start with a ten minute candle. When you can sit and breathe without strain until it burns down, move up to a 20 minute candle. Or use a stick of incense as a timing device so that you aren't looking at a clock all of the time and breaking your concentration.

Here is the Egyptian Great Hymn to Khnum (the soul or ba of the gods and the Breath and Qi of Life)

> "Another hymn to Khnum-Re,
> God of the potter's wheel,
> Who settled the land by his handiwork;
> Who joins in secret,
> Who builds soundly,
> Who nourishes the nestlings by the breath of his mouth;
> Who drenches this land with Nun,
> While round sea and great ocean surround him …
> He has fashioned gods and men,
> He has formed flocks and herds;
> He made birds as well as fishes,
> He created bulls, engendered cows...

WOTANISM & ARMANISM

List believed that ancient German society had been led by a hierarchical system of initiates, the Armanenschaft, an ancient brotherhood with a hierarchy of three degrees (similar to the Blue Lodge degrees of Freemasonry). He believed that the Armanenschaft had societal control over the ancient German people, acting as teachers, priests, and judges.

THEODOR FRITSCH

REICHSHAMMERBUND & GERMANENORDEN

In 1912, Fritsch also established the secret society known as the Germanenorden. The Germanenorden was a clandestine (occult) group for leading members of society who wished to work in secret, rather than the Reichshammerbund, which operated in the open. Members of both the Reichshammerbund and the Germanenorden formed the Thule Society in 1918, which eventually sponsored the creation of the Nazi Party.

And over the course of that 10-year period of time while Ms. Maxwell was at the house, do you have an approximation as to the number of different females -- females that you were told were massage therapists that came to the house? THE WITNESS: I cannot give you a number, but I would say probably over 100 in my stay there." Id. at pg. 30:15-25 "Q: Did you go out looking for the girls -- A. No. Q. -- to bring -- A. Never. Ms. Maxwell, Mr. Epstein and their friends, because their friends relayed to other friends they knew a massage therapist and they would send to the house. So it was referrals."

In response to Ms. Giuffre's assertions about Defendant recruiting of females for sexual purposes, Defendant has made the sweeping claim that Ms. Giuffre's assertions are "entirely false" and "entirely untrue." Complaint, DE 1, at ¶ 31. Accordingly, this Court directed as follows:

> Defendant is ordered to answer questions relating to Defendant's own sexual activity (a) with or involving Jeffrey Epstein ("Epstein"), (b) with or involving Plaintiff, (c) with or involving underage females known to Epstein or who Defendant believed or intended might become known to Epstein, or (d) involving or including massage with individuals Defendant knew to be, or believed might become, known to Epstein. Defendant is also directed to answer questions relating to her knowledge of sexual activities of others (a) with or involving Epstein, (b) with or involving Plaintiff, (c) with or involving underage females known to Epstein or who Defendant believed were known or might become known to Epstein, or (d) involving or including massage with individuals Defendant knew to be or believed might become known to Epstein. (FN. Each of the aforementioned lists are disjunctive.) The scope of Defendant's answers are not bound by time period, though Defendant need not answer questions that relate to none of these subjects or that is clearly not relevant, such as sexual activity of third-parties who bear no knowledge or relation to the key events, individuals, or locations of this case.

See Schultz Decl. at Exhibit 6, Sealed June 20, 2016, Order at p. 10 (Emphasis added).

Despite this instruction from the Court, during her deposition, Defendant refused to answer many questions related to "sexual activity with or involving Jeffrey Epstein, with or involving Plaintiff . . . or involving or including massage with individuals Defendant knew to be or believed were known to might become known to Epstein." The result was that at a number of

If one appears before any court in the interest of another and moves the court to action with respect to any matter before it of a legal nature, such person appears as an "advocate", as that term is generally understood.[16] The phrase "as an advocate in a representative capacity," as used in the statute regulating the practice of law, implies a representation distinct from officer or other regular administrative corporate employee representation.[17]

In England and her colonies a "barrister" is a person entitled to practice as an advocate or counsel in the superior courts.[18] A "solicitor" is a person whose business it is to be employed in the care and management of suits depending in courts of chancery.[19] In the great majority of the states of the Union, where law and equity are both administered by the same court, it has naturally come about that the two offices of attorney at law and solicitor in chancery have practically been consolidated, although in the federal equity practice the term "solicitor" is in general use; but in some states the office of solicitor in chancery is a distinct and separate office from that of attorney at law.[20]

A client is one who applies to a lawyer or counselor for advice and direction in a question of law, or commits his cause to his management in prosecuting a claim or defending against a suit in a court of justice;[21] one who retains the attorney, is responsible to him for his fees, and to whom the attorney is responsible for the management of the suit;[22] one who communicates facts to an attorney expecting professional advice.[23] Clients are also called "wards of the court" in regard to their relationship with their attorneys.[24]

ANTI-CHRIST

My personal concept of an Anti-Christ is a being who is responsible for the spread of false and harmful (if acted upon) information across a significant portion of the human population, and the subsequent ubiquitous spread of that deceptive information throughout the majority of humanity. The resultant behavior conducted by the population leads human society into chaos and degradation, and away from the collective evolution of humanity through the attainment of higher consciousness (often referred to as "Christ Consciousness"). Deceivers of this kind do not even necessarily do this with conscious intention, although many do. Some Anti-Christs are "useful dupes," tasked with the charge of being the messenger or pen-man, so that the true architects of evil remain hidden, or occulted.

A speaking machine, invented in Germany, pronounced distinctly, mamma, papa, mother, father, summer. The instrument consists of a pair of bellows, to which is adapted a tube terminating in a bell, the aperture of which is regulated by the hand, so as to produce the articulate sounds. This machine was exhibited at the Royal Institution in 1835, by Professor Wheatstone.

Von Kempelen, the inventor of the Automaton Chess-player, also constructed a speaking automaton, which he made pronounce several sentences, amongst the best of which were, "Romanorum imperator semper Augustus;" "Leopoldus secundus;" "Vous êtes mon ami," "Je vous aime de tout mon cœur." It was some years, however, before he could accomplish more than the simple utterance of the sounds, o, ou, and e. Year after year the inventor devoted to this machine, but i, or u, or any of the consonants, refused to obey his summons. At length he added at the open extremity of the vocal tube an apparatus similar in action and construction to the human mouth with its teeth; when he succeeded not only in making it pronounce the consonants, but words, and even the sentences quoted above. He had previously imitated the tongue and its actions. The fact is interesting, not only as a rare instance of human ingenuity, but also as exhibiting in a most striking light the beautiful adaptation of parts to their respective functions, and that so perfect are the contrivances of Nature for particular ends, that in order to arrive at anything like an imitation of these functions, we must follow closely the method she employs.

In 1843 there was exhibited before the American Philosophical Society, a speaking machine of various movements, by means of keys, and thus made to enunciate various letters and words; in enunciating the simple sounds, could be seen the movements of the mouth, the parts of which were made of caoutchouc. The inventor, Mr. Reade, however, in a frenzy, destroyed this machine, which had taken him sixteen years to construct.

Three years later, in 1846, there was exhibited

NAZI "CHRISTMAS"

Nazi ideologists claimed that the Christian elements of the holiday had been superimposed upon ancient Germanic traditions. They argued that Christmas originally had nothing to do with the birth of Jesus, but instead celebrated the Winter Solstice and the "Rebirth of the Sun." They claimed that the Swastika was an ancient symbol of the big dipper in its four positions during the equinoxes and solstices, and that the figure of Santa Claus was a Christian re-invention of the Germanic god Wotan (the Norse god Odin). Nazi Yule Festival posters were made to depict Odin as the "Solstice Man," riding a white horse, sporting a thick grey beard, wearing a slouch hat, and carrying a sack full of gifts.

PRUSSIAN "EDUCATION" SYSTEM & OUTCOME-BASED "EDUCATION"

The basic foundations of the Prussian Education System were laid out by Frederick II, King of Prussia from 1772 to 1786. Frederick II and others who furthered the Prussian System sought to take education out of the hands of family and transfer it to the State. Since independently-educated individuals could not always be counted on to submit to government objectives, the Prussian System sought to create obedient soldiers for the Prussian army, obedient workers for Prussian mining, obedient civil servants for the Prussian government, obedient clerks for industry, and citizens who thought alike about all major political issues. Subsequent nation-states that adopted the Prussian model used this system to build a powerful, controlling State apparatus. Variations of the Prussian Education System were adopted by both Germany and Russia, before, during and after their totalitarian regimes of Nazism and Communism.

THE NAZI "FINAL SOLUTION": MASS HUMAN SACRIFICE

The Schutzstaffel's Einsatzgruppen (Mobile Killing Units) were first deployed in 1941 and were initially organized to facilitate mass shootings. They soon employed the technique of mass murder by poisonous gas. Their victims were forced into specially-designed vans or trucks and killed with the vehicle's engine exhaust before being transported and dumped into mass graves. In early 1942, the highest levels of the Nazi government decided to murder all Jews throughout Europe. Nazi extermination camps were usually located on rail lines to make it easier to transport victims to their deaths, but in places that were remote enough to avoid notice by local populations. Victims were deported by trains to extermination camps, where most were killed with poison gas. Victims were typically deported to the camps in overcrowded cattle cars, with as many as 150 people forced into a single boxcar. Upon arrival, victims were stripped of their remaining possessions, forced to undress, had their hair cut off, and were forced into gas chambers. Death from the poisonous gas was agonizing and could take as long as 30 minutes. Toward the end of the Nazi regime, Zyklon B gas eventually became the preferred killing method in extermination camps.

Truly free markets

- Unregulated markets outside of the state's control are known as gray markets; informal, parallel or circular economies; the underground; or Second Realms.
- Anyone can start to sell a product or service without restrictions or asking permission.
- Local cash-in-hand word-of-mouth markets work this way, as well as online classifieds and darknet markets.
- Opsec and risk management are important, but gray markets have operated successfully since decades, even in authoritarian countries.

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

In December 1920, the Nazi Party had acquired a newspaper, the Völkisch Observer, of which its leading ideologist Alfred Rosenberg became editor. Others to join the Nazi Party around this time were Heinrich Himmler and World War I flying ace Hermann Göring. On July 29, 1921, Adolf Hitler officially replaced Anton Drexler as party chairman and was granted absolute power in the party as its sole leader. Hitler soon acquired the title Führer ("Leader") and it was accepted that the party would be governed by the Führerprinzip ("Leader Principle"). Under this principle, the party was a highly centralized entity that utilized a strict top-down hierarchy with Hitler at the apex.

RUDOLPH HESS

In 1919, Hess enrolled in the University of Munich, where he studied geopolitics under Karl Haushofer, a proponent of the concept of Lebensraum ("Living Space"), which became one of the pillars of Nazi ideology. Hess joined the Nazi Party on July 1, 1920, and was at Hitler's side for the failed Beer Hall Putsch on November 8, 1923. While serving his prison sentence for the attempted coup, Hess assisted Hitler with Mein Kampf, which became a foundation of the political platform of the Nazi Party.

SABBATEAN FRANKISM

Jacob Frank

Sabbatean Frankism has been described by some researchers as "the historical roots of Cultural Marxism," and by others as "the paradigm of the modern Left." Communism, Socialism, Fascism, Corporatism, and Critical Theory are all ideologically linked to Sabbatean Frankism, in that they all seek the inversion of moral values, and to replace them with irrational, destructive impulses and the Satanic world-view that "everything is permitted." Some researchers have postulated that Karl Marx himself may have subscribed to Sabbatean-Frankist ideology and purposefully built upon their ideas as a mechanism to ideologically subvert, and eventually destroy, Western civilization. As an ideology of inversion and destruction, Sabbatean Frankism parallels the famous quote from John Milton's Paradise Lost: "Better to reign in Hell, than serve in Heaven." This is the very essence of the world-view and ideology of all Dark Occultism.

OCCULT STRUCTURE OF OUR WORLD

Dark Occultists have completely infiltrated and permeated all institutional walks of life on Earth. They maintain their control over the human population through their manipulation of these institutions. This is not only possible, but relatively easy for them to accomplish, since the structure of all these institutions is based upon hierarchy and compartmentalization.

VÖLKISCH MOVEMENT

The Völkisch Movement was inspired as early as 1853 by French aristocrat and racialist author Arthur de Gobineau, who had written an essay on the inequality of races, in which he had made claims for the superiority of the Nordic-Aryan race, and warned of its eventual submergence by non-Aryans. This notion, along with the ideas about the biological struggle of Social Darwinism, was taken up at the turn of the 20th century by völkisch propagandists who claimed that Germans could defend their race and culture only by remaining racially pure.

Philippe Buonarroti (November 11, 1761 – September 16, 1837) was an Italian utopian socialist, Freemason, conspirator and secret society leader. Buonarroti's ideology proposed a strategy that would revolutionize society in stages, starting from monarchy and proceeding to liberalism, then to radicalism, and finally to communism. In 1786, he was initiated into Freemasonry, and joined a Masonic Lodge that was under the direct control of the Bavarian Illuminati occult order.

Laboratory to Combat Human Trafficking

We are deeply saddened to share the news that Monica Petersen, a former LCHT research intern (2014), passed away in Haiti this week. Monica was a passionate social justice champion who supported the anti-trafficking movement in Colorado in so many ways. She recently graduated from DU's Korbel School, and was a past Research Fellow and Assistant Director at the Human Trafficking Center; she also served on the Colorado Human Trafficking Council's Data & Research Task Force. We remember Monica as an outspoken professional who never grew tired in confronting institutions or holding up the voices of those who weren't being heard. Her own experience in the Child Welfare system led her to a deep belief in a survivor-informed approach to combat human trafficking.

We are awaiting details on a memorial service for Monica. As we grieve this loss, we encourage you to message us any memories or thoughts you have about her life that you'd like us to share with her family. Rest in peace dear friend, Monica.

What fascinates me is that hardly anyone is wondering what we're actually doing on this planet. Most accepted the work-eat-entertainment-sleep cycle as life and have no desire for a deeper understanding of our purpose in this universe.

CometPingPong Comet PingPong Bathroom (self.pizzagate)

submitted 9 hours ago * by HumanHologram

Guys! This is freaking me out!

A few years ago, WAYYYY before the pizza gate thing blew open, I went to DC on a business trip and afterward, my colleagues took us all to Comet Ping Pong in DC.

I couldn't put my finger on it then, but looking back I now am beginning to understand what was so weird.

The bathrooms there are almost "hidden", and I remember leaving my group to go use the John. But once I found them, it seemed like they were all full (each single-door unit is "mixed use"). Well, I waited for a sec when from behind one of the doors a lady and her daughter emerge. I can't explain it but they gave me the weirdest look, like was I supposed to meet them or something? Or had I caught them in the middle of something? It just felt very odd. After that, they disappeared on their way, and I did my business.

Now I'm thinking the bathrooms might be hidden doorways to the sex rooms. Has anyone gone on location and checked for secret doors in the bathrooms?

Very weird.

KARL MARIA WILIGUT

IRMINISM, WEWELSBERG & THE OCCULT PURGE

Wiligut's knowledge of occultism eventually garnered him the attention of the head of the SS, Heinrich Himmler. Shortly after being introduced to Himmler in September 1933, Wiligut was inducted into the SS. In the spring of 1935, Wiligut was transferred to Berlin to serve on Himmler's personal staff. In September 1936, Wiligut was promoted to the rank of SS-Brigadeführer. Wiligut acted as Heinrich Himmler's personal counsellor on magical and religious subjects, and eventually became known as "Himmler's Rasputin."

ANTI-CHRIST

My personal concept of an Anti-Christ is a being who is responsible for the spread of false and harmful (if acted upon) information across a significant portion of the human population, and the subsequent ubiquitous spread of that deceptive information throughout the majority of humanity. The resultant behavior conducted by the population leads human society into chaos and degradation, and away from the collective evolution of humanity through the attainment of higher consciousness (often referred to as "Christ Consciousness"). Deceivers of this kind do not even necessarily do this with conscious intention, although many do. Some Anti-Christs are "useful dupes," tasked with the charge of being the messenger or pen-man, so that the true architects of evil remain hidden, or occulted.

ERIK JAN HANUSSEN

Erik Jan Hanussen (June 2, 1889 – March 25, 1933), was an Austrian hypnotist, mentalist, occultist and astrologer, who instructed Adolf Hitler on how to achieve dramatic effect and elicit emotional responses during his speaking performances. Hanussen taught Hitler a set of occult speaking techniques that later became known as Neuro-Linguistic Programming (NLP), which uses word choice, tone, cadence and body language to subtly influence thought at the subconscious level. Hitler took regular lessons in speaking and in mass psychology from Hanussen. Hanussen met with Hitler shortly before the elections of November 1932, during which Hanussen taught Hitler his crowd control techniques of using hand gestures and dramatic pauses.

One of the best biblical analogies I've seen yet..

Good thing God didn't ban rocks after Cain killed Abel. Otherwise David would have been defenceless against Goliath.

GIUSEPPI MAZZINI
& YOUNG ITALY

Mazzini's thought was characterized by a strong religious fervor. He was a believer in "divine providence," described himself as a Christian, emphasized the necessity of a "relationship with God," and vehemently denounced atheism. His motto was "God and the People." Simultaneously, Mazzini rejected the concept of the "Rights of Man," arguing instead that individual rights were a "duty to be won" through work, sacrifice and virtue, rather than rights being intrinsic to humanity. His ideology polarized his contemporaries. For some, he was a god-like figure, and he was denounced by others as a traitor. Some praised Mazzini as the "Savior of Italy" while others called him the "Evil Genius of Italy," and claimed that he was attempting to "impose a new religion" on the population of Europe. Karl Marx did not agree with Mazzini's ideological world-view. Marx believed that Mazzini's point of view had become reactionary and the proletariat had nothing to do with it. Mazzini's socio-political thought has been referred to as Mazzinianism, a term later used by Benito Mussolini and his Fascist regime to describe their political ideology and spiritual conception of life. The 20th century activist Albert Charles Brouse argued that "Socialism is found in its entirety in the doctrine of Mazzini."

ARIOSOPHY, THEOZOOLOGY, ORDO NOVI TEMPLI & OSTARA

Liebenfels' occult secret society, which he established on December 25, 1900, was called Ordo Novi Templi, the Order of the New Templars. Ordo Novi Templi used esotericism to justify violence such as the castration of those they deemed "racially inferior" to establish a fascist state. It was modeled after the Catholic military order of the Knights Templar and similar in its hierarchical structure to the Order of Cistercians, of which Liebenfels had been a member.

NATURAL LAW is a set of universal, inherent, objective, non-man-made, eternal and immutable conditions which govern the consequences of the behaviors of beings with the capacity for understanding the difference between harmful and non-harmful behavior. Amy Eskridge 3:58 AM

Even just this evening. I received a message saying that they were looking right at my best friend, that she was right in front of them. A little over an hour later, I recieved a text from her. She had just gone to dinner with a friend and made a point of making sure her car was locked, because she was aware of this stuff going on. She came back to her car to find it unlocked. Well, fuck

- MAY 26 Amy Eskridge sent the following messages at 1:55 AM

Amy Eskridge 1:55 AM

I dunno, that's the most likely culprit according to both my ex-CIA guy and the Ret General I work with who ran counter terrorism for STRATCOM. So they are coming from experience with these types of issues, they are familiar with the technical details of my work, and they personally know me. They both think it's a private industrial source who has hired contractors to follow me around and harass me, and have left a trail of bread crumbs to make me think it's Russia. That's their assessment. It's really not good over here right now.

Amy Eskridge 2:11 AM

I explained the recent events to my ex-CIA weapons guy, whiteboad briefed him on my most recent work and flipped him through my most recent technical notebook pages. He stared down at one page for a long time, then looked back up at me and was like "Well, THIS is definitely why. Makes perfect sense to me, well worth the budget for the right entity." Then he told me to not let that notebook out of my sight, because there's obviously a decent budget behind following me around to look for an opportunity to swipe it off a table. I was like... yeah, no shit. I've only been screaming this problem from the mountain tops and have been literally begging for help for a good long while now.

Amy Eskridge 2:13 AM

It's pretty bad when the old spooks around you start getting pretty fucking spooked.

The world's top anti-virus microbiologists are being killed off. By 2005, 40 were dead. Today, over 100. Many murdered, the rest died under very suspicious circumstances. It is known they were all working on highly sensitive or government-funded research projects tied to bio-weapons and viral pandemics.

Are these silenced 'whistleblowers' who knew too much?
Why isn't the mainstream media reporting on this story?

warming involves the seeding of the atmosphere with metallic particles. One technique proposed to seed the metallic particles was to add the tiny particles to the fuel of jet airliners, so that the particles would be emitted from the jet engine exhaust while the airliner was at its cruising altitude. While this method would increase the reflection of visible light incident from space, the metallic particles would trap the long wavelength blackbody radiation released from the earth. This could result in net increase in global warming.

It is therefore an object of the present invention to provide a method for reduction of global warming due to Isreal in the past as well. Like I met some guy for the first time, and he totally intel bombed the fuck out of me. I dunno, some guy twice my age. He told me that a bunch of people had been watching me for a very long time, and that he had personally been aware of my surveillence data for many years. He quoted me a bunch of obscure shit about my life just to prove it, even including obscure facts from my childhood. He quoted my dad's entire NASA resume to my face, even including my dad's unpublished work over several decades. He basically intel bombed the fuck out of me just to get my attention, and then issued me a 6 month ultimatum, that I had better publish our shit within that time span or his group would enagage "Plan B" and would publish all our surveilled work out from under us under a different name, and would patent it all to take all the intellectual property rights from us. He then described to me how our prototypes worked in great detail, just to prove that he actually had the surveillence. Then he ended it by telling me that I had something between my L3 and L4 vetebrae that I needed to have checked out. I did not know whether to believe him or not, other than of course he was correct about all the intel he quoted me. The only thing I wasn't sure about was whether he was right about something between my L3 and L4. But I did request my old MRI records shortly after that encounter. And there actually was something between my L3 and L4. It was in the original radiology notes that you can only get by requesting the records, my doctor had actually never mentioned it to me. But he was right. It was there, exactly where he said it would be. He was an Isreali. When I background checked him, he had multiple Vice President positions at multiple shell companies owned by George Soros, and all of those companies shared the same street address as the office for the Soros Fund Management office in New York, even down to the same suite number. And this fucking Isreali Soros guy did in fact know things from my radiology records that had never been mentioned to me. Just like my dental x-rays have apparently been pretty recently requested by some company address listed in my records as my employer in Isreal. Holy fuck. I don't know what to make of any of that, other than it all seems pretty absurd. Like I actually try to live a pretty normal life as much as I can, I really don't go into my routine dental appointments expecting to find that I have an Isreali employer documented in my records. It's just.... it's just absurd. Of course that 6 month ultimatum that he gave me, paired with that absolutely massive intel bomb that he dropped on me to prove

I dunno, it was creepy enough for me to tell several other people, like... "hey, if anyone reports that I killed myself, I fucking did not." Some of them were like... "yeah, I know, they did that to me to. Yep. Someone is absolutely tyring to taunt you into killing yourelf, it's real. Just don't do it." With pretty nuanced advice on how to navigate it. That's absurd. It's fucking disturbing that I can report this current thing to my inner circle of scientists in the US, and some of them are like "yep, that happened to me, they are gonna ask you to kill yourself and taunt you for awhile about it, just don't do it, those guys are assholes." What the actual fuck? Who are these fucking pricks, and how common is this exaclty? What the hell?

Amy Eskridge 2:51 AM

After the past three days of this being relentless and almost constant... my current best guess is that some US based contracting group has been hired to attempt to harass me to death. My ex-CIA weapons guy on my team saw my hands when they were burned really badly a couple months ago, and he saw that window pane in person. He said he had built things like that, and that it was most likely an RF k-band emitter run by 5 car batteries strung together from inside an SUV. When I asked who would do something like that, and his honest answer was... "I hate to tell you this, but it's most likely domestic, most likely a contractor who sees your IP as capabale of eating their lunch." That seems like the worst case scenario to me.

Amy Eskridge 2:52 AM

There's probably a pretty short list of US contractors who would do something this dirty.

CULTURAL MARXISM & THE FRANKFURT SCHOOL

In the 20th century, dogmatic proponents of the the world-views of Secular Materialism and Postmodernism within the Frankfurt School declared war on the very ideas of truth and objective reality, re-packaging and vilifying them as being the "oppressive tools of capitalism." The Frankfurt School made it culturally fashionable within the politics and culture of Western civilization to disregard any verifiable aspects of human reality that did not conform to, and promote, Marxist causes and ideology. BRUISES UNDER EYES

Also known as Periorbital Ecchymosis , or Raccoon Eyes.

Raccoon eye/eyes (also known in the United Kingdom and Ireland as panda eyes, though that term commonly refers to excess or smeared dark make-up around the eyes or to dark rings around the eyes) or periorbital ecchymosis is a sign of basal skull fracture or subgaleal hematoma, a craniotomy that ruptured the meninges, or (rarely) certain cancers.[1][2] Bilateral hemorrhage occurs when damage at the time of a facial fracture tears the meninges and causes the venous sinuses to bleed into the arachnoid villi and the cranial sinuses. In layman's terms, blood from skull fracture seeps into the soft tissue around the eyes. Raccoon eyes may be accompanied by Battle's sign, an ecchymosis behind the ear.
These signs may be the only sign of a skull fracture, as it may not show on an X-ray. They may not appear until up 2–3 days after the injury.
It is recommended that the patient not blow their nose, cough vigorously, or strain to prevent further tearing of the meninges.

Raccoon Eyes always requires urgent medical attention

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

Zwack's house was searched by police in October 1785 and his papers were seized. Documents, papers and correspondences were discovered, including over 200 letters written between Weishaupt and the members of the Areopagite, which dealt with Illuminati matters of the highest secrecy. The following year more information was seized from houses of other Illuminati members, which contained their secret codes and symbols, calendar timetables, geographical locations, insignias, ceremonies of initiation, recruiting instructions, statutes, a partial roster of members, and nearly 130 official seals from the government which were used to counterfeit state documents.

Not coincidentally, Woodrow Wilson was the first American president to publicly denounce capitalism and proclaim himself in favor of a Socialist One-World Government.

THE EDDA SOCIETY

Guido von List and his followers believed that the Icelandic Eddas were chronicles of the ancient Aryans. List's occult system was elaborated upon by Rudolf John Gorsleben. After World War I, Gorsleben travelled to Munich, where he became involved in the Thule Society and German politics. Through his periodical Aryan Freedom, Gorsleben disseminated his occult racist ideas, which centered upon the concept of racial purity and the reactivation of the occult powers that every Aryan possessed but which had become atrophied. With these magical powers once more at their fullest, the Aryans would hold complete sway over the processes of nature, and would thus be in a position to dominate and rule the world.

CHINESE COMMUNISM

Since the collapse of the Soviet Eastern Bloc and the dissolution of the Soviet Union in 1991, the CCP has emphasized its relations with the ruling parties of remaining Socialist nations of the world, and has established relations with social democratic parties throughout all of Europe. The CCP's current world-view continues to see human society as being organized into two opposing camps, Socialist and capitalist, and insists that Socialism, on the basis of materialism, will eventually triumph over capitalism. The CCP also supports globalization, arguing that Globalism is not an intrinsically capitalist ideology. Xi Jinping, the current leader of the Chinese Communist Party, remarked on what he called the "inevitability of Socialism," stating: "[Western nations'] theory that capitalism is the ultimate [force] has been shaken, and socialist development has experienced a miracle. Western capitalism has suffered reversals, a financial crisis, a credit crisis, a crisis of confidence, and their self-conviction has wavered. Western countries have begun to reflect, and openly or secretively compare themselves against China's politics, economy and path." As of 2023, the CCP has more than 98 million members, making it the second largest political party in the world.

- Small businesses have more flexibility (easier to ignore state regulations).
- Closer relationship between buyer and seller, supply and demand.
- Direct trade & "be your own boss" contributes to fairer wages and better working conditions (= no greedy CEOs).

ANTI-CHRIST

My personal concept of an Anti-Christ is a being who is responsible for the spread of false and harmful (if acted upon) information across a significant portion of the human population, and the subsequent ubiquitous spread of that deceptive information throughout the majority of humanity. The resultant behavior conducted by the population leads human society into chaos and degradation, and away from the collective evolution of humanity through the attainment of higher consciousness (often referred to as "Christ Consciousness"). Deceivers of this kind do not even necessarily do this with conscious intention, although many do. Some Anti-Christs are "useful dupes," tasked with the charge of being the messenger or pen-man, so that the true architects of evil remain hidden, or occulted.

GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (DAP)

Karl Harrer

In 1918, Rudolf von Sebottendorf wished to extend the influence of the Thule Society to the working classes. He asked journalist Karl Harrer to form a workers' ring. Harrer and fellow Thule Society member Anton Drexler formed the Political Workers' Circle. The group met every week throughout the winter of 1918 for discussions about nationalism and anti-Semitism. At the instigation of Anton Drexler, this workers' ring became the Deutsche Arbeiterpartei (German Workers' Party or DAP) on January 5, 1919.

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

In September 1921, the Sturmabteilung (SA / Storm Battalion / Storm-Troopers / "Brownshirts") was founded as a paramilitary wing of the NSDAP and began violent attacks on other German political parties. In 1922, the NSDAP formed its official youth organization for the children of party members called Jugendbund der NSDAP (Youth League of the NSDAP), which was a predecessor to the Hitlerjugend (Hitler Youth).

JOSEPH GOEBBELS

Goebbels converted May 1st from a workers' rights holiday into a day celebrating the Nazi Party. May 1st is Beltane (also called Walpurgisnacht) the highest Sabbat (holy day) of the occult solar calendar. He also organized and spoke at many book-burning ceremonies, where huge crowds of Nazis gathered to burn books which were viewed as being subversive, or representing ideologies that were opposed to Nazism. This proved an effective information control technique within Nazi Germany. If they could never read opposing views, most Germans could never come out of the mindset programmed into them by Nazi propagandists.

WHAT IS COMMUNISM?

Communism is a sociopolitical and economic ideology within the socialist movement, whose goal is the creation of a socio-economic order centered around "common ownership" of the means of production, distribution, and exchange that allocates products to everyone in the society based on need. It has been historically symbolized by the emblem of the hammer and sickle, representing the combined strength of workers and food producers.

Them: How much freedom do you really need?

Me:

IT'S ALWAYS BEEN THIS WAY, AND IT'S NO DIFFERENT TODAY

The Milgram Experiments were a series of social psychology experiments on obedience to authority figures, conducted by psychologist Stanley Milgram. They measured the willingness of participants to obey an authority figure who instructed them to perform acts conflicting with their personal conscience. Participants were led to believe that they were assisting an unrelated experiment, in which they had to administer electric shocks to an unseen "learner." These fake electric shocks gradually increased to levels that would have been fatal had they been real. The experiment found that a very high proportion of subjects would fully obey their given orders, with every participant going up to 300 volts (which could permanently damage a human being's central nervous system), and at least 65% going up to the deadly 450 volts. The experiments began three months after the start of the trial of German Nazi war criminal Adolf Eichmann. Milgram devised this psychological study to explain the psychology of genocide and answer the question: "Were the accomplices of the Holocaust 'just following orders,' or were they morally culpable for their actions?" The Milgram Experiments were repeated many times around the world, right up to contemporary times, with statistically identical results.

Automata and Androides.

Automata, or self-moving machines, have been brought to a perfection, which, in former ages, would have been considered as supernatural. The highest class of automata are those which represent human figures, and hence are called Androides. Of these, Kempelen's automaton-chess-player was long considered as the triumph of arts. Some reasonable doubts, however, have recently been started as to its being an automaton: indeed there are strong reasons to believe that the movement of the chessmen, though apparently mechanical, are directed by human agency, and that a person of dwarfish size is actually concealed in the machinery.

Plato and Aristotle both allude to Androides—certain statues made by Dædalus, which could not only walk, but which it was even necessary to tie in order to prevent them from moving. This, however, was one of the obscure fictions of the ancients, and it has only been within the last two or three centuries that mechanism has attained great perfection. In the early part of the last century, M. Camus constructed for the amusement of Louis XIV., when a child, a carriage, drawn by two horses, containing the figure of a lady, with a coachman driving, and a footman and page behind When placed upon the table, the coachman smacked his whip, the horses proceeded, moving their legs naturally; and when the carriage arrived opposite the King's seat, it stopped, and the page getting down, opened the door; the lady alighted, and with a curtsey presented a petition to the King. After a short pause she curtsied again, and re-entered the carriage. The page remounted, the coachman flogged his horses, the carriage moved on, and the footman, running after it, jumped up behind.

M. Vaucauson, we are told, made an artificial duck, which not only moved its wings, quacked, drank water, and ate corn, but, what is more, digested it! The same artist, in 1738, exhibited in Paris two very remarkable automata; the first was a flute-player, in a sitting posture, who performed twelve tunes; the second was a standing figure, which played on a shepherd's pipe, held in its left hand, while with the right hand it beat upon a tabor.

M. Maillardet, a Swiss artist, (now living, we believe) has also executed two or three celebrated figures. One of these is a lady at her piano-forte. She executes eighteen tunes by the actual pressure of her fingers on the keys; and while all the natural notes are thus

UKRAINIAN AZOV BATTALION

The Azov Battalion (Azov Assault Brigade) is a formation of the National Guard of Ukraine founded in May 2014 as a volunteer paramilitary militia. The Azov Battalion has drawn attention for its association with Neo-Nazi ideology and its use of symbols that are incontrovertibly linked to Nazism. The Azov Battalion has also been widely accused of participating in many actions of human rights violations over the last decade. Ukraine, as part of the Eastern Front theater of war during World War II, was geographically and ideological divided in the war's aftermath. Nazi troops, who had made significant incursion into the western half of Ukraine during the war, largely decided to stay and resettle there after the Nazi military surrender, primarily to avoid war crimes tribunals at Nuremberg. This puts into perspective the Azov Battalion's Neo-Nazi ideology and its continued use of prominent Nazi symbols.

ARIOSOPHY, THEOZOOLOGY, ORDO NOVI TEMPLI & OSTARA

In 1905, Liebenfels published a book called Theozoology, in which he advocated sterilization and forced labor of "lower races" and glorified the Aryan Race as Gottmenschen ("God-men"). Through Theozoology, Liebenfels distorted occult, spiritual, and even biblical teachings to justify his esoteric racial ideology. He taught that the biblical Eve had procreated with demons to give birth to what he described as the "lower races." In 1905, Liebenfels founded Ostara, a magazine through which he promoted Ariosophy and Theozoology. Liebenfels claimed that Ostara had over 100,000 subscribers, including Adolf Hitler himself. Liebenfels claimed he was visited by Hitler in 1909, and supplied him with two missing issues of Ostara.

JACOBIN CLUB

In July 1794, the National Convention of France pushed Robespierre and his Jacobin allies out of power and had Robespierre and 21 of his associates executed. In November 1794, the Jacobin Club officially disbanded. Jacobin rhetoric would lead to the increasing secularization of Europe throughout the 1800s. The political rhetoric espoused by the Jacobins would lead to the development of the modern leftist movements throughout the 19th, 20th, and 21st centuries, with Jacobinism being the political foundation of almost all leftist schools of thought, including socialism and communism. Georges Valois, founder of the 20th century French fascist party Faisceau, claimed that the roots of fascism also stemmed from the Jacobin movement.

> Q. What is MindSpring?

> A. It was a server. I think it was -- the office would have, like, a message system between him, the houses, the employees, his friends. They would write a message on the computer. There was no email at that time.

> Q. And so was part of your daily routine to go to your computer and check to see if you had MindSpring messages?
>
> A. No. That was at the end of my stay. That was the very end of my stay. I didn't get involved with that too much. But it was a message system that Jeffrey received every two, three hours, with all the messages that would have to go to the office in New York, and they will print it and send it faxed to the house, and I would hand it to him.
>
> Q. Did it look like the message pads that we've been looking at?

> A. No, no, nothing like that.

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

The Blutfahne, or Blood Flag, was the flag that was carried during the failed November Beer Hall Putsch of 1923, during which it became soaked in the blood of a fallen member of the Sturmabteilung. When the Munich police fired on the Nazis, the flag bearer Heinrich Trambauer was hit and dropped the flag. Andreas Bauriedl, member of the SA, who was marching alongside the flag, was killed and fell onto it, staining the flag with his blood. The Blood Flag subsequently became one of the most revered objects of the Nazi Party and an object of pseudo-religious ritual. All new Nazi flags needed to be "consecrated" in a ritualized manner by being touched to the Blood Flag.

p. Dershowitz had told the Palm Beach Police Department that he was going to make Epstein available to answer questions about sex abuse of underage girls, but then repeatedly rescheduled those meetings, ultimately never producing Epstein – a pattern of deception that appeared to be designed to deliberately delay the investigation;

q. Dershowitz's pattern of avoiding depositions (and helping Epstein avoid questioning) was consistent with a pattern of other persons who were involved in Epstein's international sex trafficking organization evading efforts to obtain information from them;

r. Ms. Giuffre had alleged abuse by other powerful friends of Epstein, including Prince Andrew, and there was a photograph showing Prince Andrew with his arm around Ms. Giuffre apparently taken in London (where she said the sex abuse had taken place).

Sealed Exhibit 1, Depo. of Paul Cassell (Oct. 16 & 17, 2015), at 61-117.

22. Ms. Giuffre was not a party to the litigation between Dershowitz, Mr. Edwards, and me.

23. During the course of the litigation, however, Dershowitz sought to obtain discovery from Ms. Giuffre. In particular, Dershowitz sought to obtain from Ms. Giuffre (a non-party to the action) all of her emails with the media. The Court denied his discovery request. Attached hereto as Sealed Exhibit 2 is a true and correct copy of the court's order denying that discovery.

24. Dershowitz produced many documents in the course of discovery in that case – and, ironically, he placed many document under a protective order in Florida. Attached hereto as

MAIN TENETS OF SATANISM

2. MORAL RELATIVISM

Moral Relativism is the ideology that there is no objective difference between right behavior and wrong behavior, so human beings may arbitrarily "create" or "decide" what "right" and "wrong" are for themselves, based upon their own whims and preferences. In other words, that which human beings consider "right for themselves" is what is "morally right," and that which human beings consider "wrong for themselves" is what is "morally wrong."

COMMENTARY BY AHRIMAN

In cities, the prisoners' mass work detail takes place from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. within slave compounds known as "offices"; therein hypnotic Muzak is broadcast to keep the slave-workers subdued.

After work detail, the prisoners are allowed to spend their work allowance on various forms of drugs[17] which keep their minds distracted from understanding the ineluctable depths of their enslavement. After ingesting the drugs, workers return to sleep in their cells, also known as apartments. See Clock; Gum; Office Building; Work.

GIUSEPPI MAZZINI
& YOUNG ITALY

In 1860, Mazzini had formed a secret society called the Oblonica, (derived from the Latin noun obelus: obelisk). Within this group, Mazzini established an inner order which eventually evolved into La Cosa Nostra – the Italian Mafia – with many of its members coming to America during the 1890's with the beginning of Italian immigration. Mazzini was certainly an occultist, and became involved in Freemasonry earlier in his life. In the 1830s, he made efforts to carry on the activities of the infamous occult order, the Bavarian Illuminati through the Alta Vendita Lodge, the highest Masonic Lodge of the Carbonari. In 1834, a few years after the death of its first grand master, Adam Weishaupt, Giuseppi Mazzini was appointed head of the Order of the Illuminati.

Influenced by Liebenfels' Ariosophy, the Austrian industrialist Johann Walthari Wölfl founded an occult society called the Lumenclub in Vienna, Austria on November 11, 1932. Lumenclub overlapped in membership with Ordo Novi Templi. It's ideological sympathy toward Nazism was beyond question, and it acted as a growth center for the Nazi Party, which had been banned in Austria. Lumenclub and Ordo Novi Templi were both later suppressed by the Gestapo under the Nazi regime, a fate which they shared with many other esoteric groups.

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

Weishaupt was preparing to set his plans into motion for the French Revolution, which was planned for 1789. In July 1785, he instructed Bavarian lawyer and one of the Illuminati's most prominent leaders, Xavier Zwack, to put their plans in book form. Zwack's document contained a history of the Illuminati and many of their ideas for expansion and future endeavors. A copy was sent by courier Jacob Lanze to Illuminati members in Paris and Prussia, but after leaving Frankfurt on horseback, Lanze was struck by lightning and killed. Authorities found the document and turned it over to the Bavarian government.

control is contested, the party seeking production of documents bears the burden of establishing the opposing party's control over those documents." Alexander Interactive, Inc. v. Adorama, Inc., No. 12 CIV. 6608 (PKC) (JCF), 2014 WL 61472, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 6, 2014). Plaintiff has made no showing that Ms. Maxwell has any control over the hypothetical documents she suspects may be on Mr. Epstein's private server. As has been made clear by Mr. Epstein's refusal to produce any documents in this matter or provide any testimony, instead invoking his Fifth Amendment privilege, there is no manner in which Ms. Maxwell could require Mr. Epstein to provide any information on Mr. Epstein's private server. Notably, no such "messages" were located on any of Ms. Maxwell's devices or within her email accounts.

Simply put, there are no emails from any accounts, systems or electronic storage devices over which Ms. Maxwell has possession, custody or control that have not been searched and from which responsive non-privileged documents produced.

III. SANCTIONS AGAINST MS. MAXWELL NOT WARRANTED, RATHER COSTS OUGHT TO BE AWARDED TO HER

Plaintiff completely fails to identify which, if any, of the Rules of Civil Procedure she relies on to claim any right to request sanctions, let alone to receive an adverse inference instruction. The argument appears premised on a claim that Ms. Maxwell has not complied with the Court's Order – a completely inaccurate claim:

On June 20, 2016, this Court ordered:

> Defendant is ordered to collect all ESI by imaging her computers and collecting all email and text messages on any devices in Defendant's possession or to which she has access that Defendant used between the period of 2002 to present. Defendant is further directed to run mutually- agreed upon search terms related to Plaintiff's requests for production over the aforementioned ESI and produce responsive documents within 21 days of distribution of this opinion.

This was done. Plaintiff then expanded her request, imposed additional search terms, and added conditions concerning the manner in which she wanted devices searched. On August 9,

JOSEPH GOEBBELS

Joseph Goebbels (October 29, 1897 – May 1, 1945) was the chief propagandist for the Nazi Party, and Reich Minister of Propaganda from 1933 to 1945. He was one of Adolf Hitler's closest and most devoted followers. Goebbels was known for his skills in public speaking and his deeply virulent anti-Semitic beliefs, which were overtly evident in his publicly voiced views. He advocated progressively harsher discrimination, including the extermination of Jews throughout the Third Reich.

COMMUNISM DID NOT FALL WITH THE BERLIN WALL

Communism is still alive and well throughout the entire world. Driven largely by Marxist Socialism, there is an international network of Communist organizations with tens of millions of members operating throughout the world today. Communists, Socialists, and those who support the ideologies which have led to the extermination of tens of millions of people in the 20th century alone, are everywhere among us, and still cling to this destructive cult with absolute religious fervor.

The Prison Industrial Complex imprisons more black men today than were slaves in 1850.

ORDER FOLLOWERS

THOSE WHO ARE MOST CULPABLE FOR THE CREATION OF TOTALITARIAN REGIMES

The painful yet unwavering truth of the matter is that the ORDER FOLLOWER always bears MORE Moral Culpability than the Order Giver, because the Order Follower is the one who actually performs the immoral action, and in taking such action, actually brings the resultant harm into physical manifestation in the world. ORDER FOLLOWING is the pathway to every form of Evil and Chaos in our world. It should NEVER be seen as a "virtue" by anyone who considers themselves a moral human being. Order Followers have ultimately been personally responsible and morally culpable for every form of Slavery and every single totalitarian regime that has ever existed upon the face of the Earth.

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

By 1787, the Illuminati had secretly spread to France by French revolutionary leader Gabriel Mirabeau. Mirabeau introduced Illuminati principles at the Paris Masonic Lodge of Reunited Friends, which later became the Philalethes ("Searchers After Truth"). Noted members of the French Illuminati lodges included the Marquis of Gerardin, the Count of Saint Germain, Count Alessandro Cagliostro, and Johann Wolfgang von Goethe. The Marquis de Luchet wrote in his Essay on the Sect of the Illuminati in January 1789: "Deluded people. You must understand that there exists a conspiracy in favor of despotism, and against liberty, of incapacity against talent, of vice against virtue, of ignorance against light! Every species of error which afflicts the earth, every half-baked idea, every invention serves to fit the doctrines of the Illuminati. Their aim is universal domination." The Illuminati eventually infiltrated 266 Masonic lodges in France by 1789. Many French revolutionary leaders joined their ranks, including Maximilien Robespierre, who was alleged to have been chosen leader of the French Revolution by Adam Weishaupt himself.

j. Kellen, Mucinska, and Marcinkova were all covered by a highly unusual non-prosecution agreement (negotiated by, among others, Epstein defense attorney Alan Dershowitz) that provided immunity from prosecution for sex trafficking not only to Epstein but also to his "potential co-conspirators";

k. One of Epstein's household employees, Juan Alessi, said that Dershowitz visited Epstein's Palm Beach mansion four or five times a year, staying two or three days when he went there – and Alessi was able to identify a photograph of Ms. Giuffre as someone who was at the mansion as the same time as Dershowitz;

l. Another Epstein household employee, Alfredo Rodriguez, said that during the time of his employment (2005), Dershowitz visited Epstein's mansion at the same time as "massages" by underage girls were occurring in the mansion;

m. When Rodriguez was arrested by the FBI trying to sell Epstein's "little black book" of contacts and phone numbers, he appeared to have circled the name of Alan Dershowitz as someone who had information about Epstein criminal activities;

n. Dershowitz had indicated in 2003 that he was an extremely close friend of Epstein – indeed, that the only person outside his immediately family with whom he shared drafts of his books was Epstein;

o. Attempts had been made to depose Dershowitz or otherwise obtain information from him about his knowledge of Epstein's sexual abuse in 2009, 2011, 2013, and January 2015, and he had avoided all those efforts;

HEINRICH HIMMLER
SS, AHNENERBE & TOTENKOPF

Heinrich Himmler (October 7, 1900 – May 23, 1945) was the Reichsführer of the Schutzstaffel (Protection Squadron, SS) and a Reichsleiter (Reich Leader) of the Nazi Party. Himmler was one of the most powerful men in Nazi Germany, and became primarily known for being one of the main architects of the Jewish Holocaust. Himmler joined the Nazi Party in 1923, and joined the SS in 1925. He was appointed Reichsführer-SS by Adolf Hitler in 1929. Over the next sixteen years, Himmler developed the SS from a 290-man battalion into a paramilitary group with over a million members. As an occultist, Himmler viewed the SS as a "mystical inner order" of the Nazi Party, along the lines of the Teutonic Knights. From 1943 onwards, he oversaw all internal and external Nazi police and security forces, including the Gestapo. He also commanded the Waffen-SS, the military branch of the SS.

ANTI-CHRIST

My personal concept of an Anti-Christ is a being who is responsible for the spread of false and harmful (if acted upon) information across a significant portion of the human population, and the subsequent ubiquitous spread of that deceptive information throughout the majority of humanity. The resultant behavior conducted by the population leads human society into chaos and degradation, and away from the collective evolution of humanity through the attainment of higher consciousness (often referred to as "Christ Consciousness"). Deceivers of this kind do not even necessarily do this with conscious intention, although many do. Some Anti-Christs are "useful dupes," tasked with the charge of being the messenger or pen-man, so that the true architects of evil remain hidden, or occulted.

GUIDO VON LIST
WOTANISM & ARMANISM

Reflecting his beliefs that Monarchy was the preferred form of government by which humanity should be ruled, List envisioned a future world-wide monarchical state governed by the House of Habsburg, with a revived system of feudalism being introduced. In List's opinion, this new empire would be extremely hierarchical, with non-Aryans being subjugated under the Aryan population and opportunities for education and jobs in public service being restricted to those deemed racially pure. He envisioned this empire following the Wotanic religion which he promoted.

whilst he spanked his penis on her bottom.

She also had to have sexual intercourse with Clinton in Epstein's New York Mansion just off 5th Avenue on numerous occasions. It's the NY Mansion we spoke about yesterday. I too was forced by Epstein to visit regularly and if I didn't turn up he would personally come and find me where ever I was hiding. It still bewilders me how Epstein always seemed to know where I was if I didn't turn up at his NY residence.

When my friend had sexual intercourse with Clinton, Prince Andrew and Richard Branson, sex tapes were in fact filmed on each separate occasion by Jeffery. Thank God she managed to get a hold of some footage of the filmed sex tapes, which clearly identify the faces of Clinton, Prince Andrew and Branson having sexual intercourse with her. Frustratingly enough Epstein was not seen in any of the footage but he was clever like that!

After two hours of trying to convince my friend to come forward with me, I eventually managed to persuade her to send me some of the video footage which she kept, implicating all three all men mentioned above. I personally can confirm that I have, with my own two eyes, seen the evidence of these sexual acts, which clearly identifies Bill Clinton, Prince Andrew, Richard Branson having sexual intercourse with my friend. I will be more then willing to swear under oath and testify in court over these sex tapes. It will break your heart into a million tiny pieces Maureen when you watch this footage, and I know that what I watched yesterday, will haunt me for the rest of my life!

Unfortunately, I cannot send you the footage without her consent due to massive consequences to her safety but I can confirm that I do have footage in my possession. I have backed up the footage on several USB sticks and have securely sent them to various different locations throughout Europe with only one other person close to me, knowing where their locations are, just in case anything happens to me before the footage is released.

When my friend eventually had the courage to speak out and went to the police in 2008 to report what had happened, nothing was done and she was utterly humiliated by the police department where she went to report what had happened with Epstein, Clinton, Branson and Prince Andrew. She was made to feel like a dirty whore and a liar and wasn't taken seriously. When she then tried to sue Epstein for damages, she was severely bullied and threatened by his lawyer Alan Dershowitz whom she also had sexual relations with and who was also heavily involved in Epstein's paedophile Ring.

A couple months later, she was then approached, by Special Agents Forces Men sent directly by Hilary Clinton herself, in order to protect her presidential campaign in 2008. They heavily intimidated her, ruffled her up (luckily she took photos as evidence) and was then forced to sign a confidentiality agreement which ensures that she can never come forward publicly implicating her husband.

She was then given a substantial payout, directly from the Clinton Foundation to keep her quiet. She is 1000% certain that the FBI did a cover up and she has the individual names of Hilary's Special Agent Officers involved in intimidating her. She was then forced against her will to sign a legally binding confidentially agreement on Hilary's behalf for her eternal silence. If she breaks this agreement, she is dead.

She told me how it was a complete conspiracy as Alan Dershowitz, whom was one of the lawyers that represented Jeffery when he went to trail, made huge endorsements to the Clinton Foundation to help fund her 2008 presidential campaign.

I personally met Alan numerous times as Jeffery had sent him to my legal aid, to deal with a case I was going to open against [redacted] whom I met through the website SugarDaddie.com (he went under the name [redacted] the site). [redacted] also tried to rape me with his friend when we were at anchor on his boat in Miami.

Non-party, Sarah Ransome, by and through her undersigned counsel, hereby files this Reply in Support of Her Motion for Protective Order (DE 640) and Opposition to Defendant's Combined Motion to Compel Non-Party Witness to Produce Documents and Respond to Deposition (DE 655).

BACKGROUND

Non-party Sarah Ransome has already provided significant discovery in this case. She previously flew from Barcelona to New York, sat for a ten-hour deposition, and produced many relevant documents. Indeed, witness Ms. Ransome has provided more significant evidence, including photographic evidence and electronic communications, than Defendant has produced in the two years she has been litigating this matter. Defendant has not produced a single document prior to 2009 and not a single photograph, despite testimony that she was an avid photographer of the young girls at Epstein's mansions, including taking nude photographs.

Specifically, and by way of example, non-party Ms. Ransome produced the following types of highly relevant information about Defendant's involvement in the sex trafficking and abuse:

MW: What was it they couldn't believe you had made?

ALEFANTIS: Well, we make everything from scratch. Other restaurants, even good restaurants, will, like, not roast their own peppers. You can just buy the roasted peppers in a can. Or you can buy garlic oil. Some products you can get, and they're consistent and they're easy. But I didn't even know that existed actually until they said that. I was like, "What do you mean? There's another way? You can just buy these things?" Because a lot of restaurants will open a can and put it on. Like our sauce — we harvest a whole crop of organic tomatoes — 10 tons of tomatoes every year. Can them all, store them in the basement, have like a harvest party when it gets loaded in.

Guy was very enthusiastic. We had a really great long segment, and it aired, and we had a viewing party. The next day I'm exhausted, I come late, and there's literally a line from the front of the restaurant, down and around the corner.

[57] ABSTRACT

A method is described for reducing atmospheric or global warming resulting from the presence of heat-trapping gases in the atmosphere, i.e., from the greenhouse effect. Such gases are relatively transparent to sunshine, but absorb strongly the long-wavelength infrared radiation released by the earth. The method incudes the step of seeding the layer of heat-trapping gases in the atmosphere with particles of materials characterized by wavelength-dependent emissivity. Such materials include Welsbach materials and the oxides of metals which have high emissivity (and thus low reflectivities) in the visible and 8–12 micron infrared wavelength regions.

LEAGUE OF OUTLAWS

The League of Outlaws was a German revolutionary secret society founded in Paris in 1834 by a group of German exiles. Its founder, Theodor Schuster, drew most of his ideas from earlier secret societies such as the Carbonari and the Philadelphes, and from the writings of Filippo Buonarroti, the most influential revolutionist of the time. The League of Outlaws had a hierarchical structure derived from the Carbonari, and was among the first European revolutionary groups to push for a social revolution to abolish class barriers and eliminate worker exploitation. Theodor Schuster argued that the major divides in the Europe of his time were between classes – not nations – and proclaimed a future "cooperative republic," in which peasant cooperatives and government intervention would keep the influence of wealthy capitalists in check. The League of Outlaws thus pioneered the ideologies later claimed by Communist secret societies and regimes.

LEAGUE OF THE JUST

The League of the Just was a Communist secret society founded in 1836 by branching off from its predecessor, the League of Outlaws, formed in Paris in 1834 by Jacob Venedey and Theodore Schuster. The League of the Just was originally headquartered in Paris and was largely composed of German emigrants. Most members of the League of the Just were primarily tailors and woodworkers, whose stated goal was the millenarianist idea of the establishment of the "Kingdom of God on Earth," or the "New Jerusalem." Described as "utopian communists," most members of the League of the Just were followers of "The First Revolutionary Communist," Gracchus Babeuf. They predicted and anticipated a social revolution, which one of their leaders, Karl Schapper, described as "the Great Resurrection Day of the People."

NAZI INDOCTRINATION:
HITLERJUGEND & LEAGUE OF GERMAN MAIDENS

Members of the Hitler Youth were viewed as ensuring the future of Nazi Germany and they were indoctrinated into Nazi ideology, including racism. The boys were indoctrinated with the myths of Aryan racial superiority and to view Jews and Slavs as sub-humans. Members were taught to associate state-identified enemies such as Jews with Germany's previous defeat in World War I and its societal decline. The Hitler Youth were used to break up church youth groups, spy on religious classes and Bible studies, and interfere with church attendance. Education and training programs for the Hitler Youth were designed to undermine the values of traditional structures of German society. Their training also aimed to remove social and intellectual distinctions between classes, to be replaced and dominated by the political goals of Hitler's totalitarian dictatorship. Sacrifice for the Nazi cause was instilled into their training. The notion that "Germany must live, even if members of the Hitler Youth have to die," was hammered into them from an early age.

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

Weishaupt elaborated the Illuminati's plan to infiltrate and re-direct societal institutions, writing: "I propose academies under the direction of the Order. This will secure us the adherence of the Literati. Science shall here be the lure. We must acquire the direction of education, of church, management of the professorial chair, and of the pulpit." Weishaupt proposed training at special schools for future societal leaders, who would be placed into positions of power behind the scenes as "experts" and "advisors" to perpetuate Illuminati goals. To ensure that the activities of the Illuminati would remain secret, warnings regarding the consequences for betraying the Order were included in their initiation ceremonies. A sword was pointed at the initiate and they would be told: "If you are a traitor, learn that all our Brothers are called upon to arm themselves against you. Do not hope to escape or find a place of safety. Wherever you are, the rage of our Brothers will pursue you, and torment you to the innermost recesses of your entrails."

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

Headquartered in Munich, Germany, and beginning with only five members (Adam Weishaupt, Franz Massenhausen, Max Merz, "Agathon" Bauhof and Andreas Sutor), the Illuminati became fully operational by the summer of 1778. Other lodges were eventually created in Ingolstadt, Heidelberg, Upper Bavaria, and Frankfurt. Originally, the Order had three degrees: Novice, Minerval and Illuminated Minerval. Select members became members of the Areopagus, the Order's ruling council. Some members, called Insinuants, were permitted to recruit for the Order. All members were required to adopt classical code names from history. A system of mutual espionage kept Weishaupt informed of the activities of all his members. Their rituals and ceremonies were similar to that of the Freemasons. Describing the Illuminati, Weishaupt wrote: "The great strength of our Order lies in its concealment, let it never appear, in any place in its own name, but always covered by another name, and another occupation. The Order wishes to be secret, and to work in silence." Few knew the true direction and agenda of the Order. Only those within the inner circle, known as the Areopagite (Tribunal, Ruling Council), were aware of their true purpose. Weishaupt described to all other members that their ultimate objective was the creation of a One-World Government to "prevent future wars."

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

On the night of November 8, 1923, the Nazis used a patriotic rally in a Munich beer hall to launch an attempted putsch (coup d'état). This so-called "Beer Hall Putsch" failed within one day, when German military commanders refused to support it. Hitler and a number of his supporters were arrested and tried for treason in March 1924. Hitler and some of his close associates were convicted, but given very lenient prison sentences. While he was in Landsberg Prison, Hitler wrote his political manifesto, Mein Kampf ("My Struggle"). The Nazi Party was officially banned in Germany on November 9, 1923. However, it continued to operate under the name German Party (Deutsche Partei or DP).

UN Declares War on 'Dangerous' Conspiracy Theories: 'The World Is NOT Secretly Manipulated By Global Elite'

NAZI INDOCTRINATION:
HITLERJUGEND & LEAGUE OF GERMAN MAIDENS

The Hitler Youth maintained training academies comparable to preparatory schools, which were designed to nurture future Nazi Party leaders. It appropriated many of the activities of the Boy Scouts movement, including camping and hiking. Over time, it changed in content and intention, and many activities began to closely resemble military training, with weapons familiarization, assault courses, and fighting tactics becoming parts of its curriculum. The aim was to turn the Hitler Youth into motivated soldiers. The ultimate goal of all the Nazi youth organizations was to instill into their youth the ideologies of blind obedience and unwavering loyalty to the Nazi cause. Hitler once remarked about his vision for the future of young Germans by saying: "We seek a youth that has closed their hearts to pity."

A. No, he worked for Mr. Epstein. He will maintain all the computers.

A. No, ma'am.
Q. Do you know whether at that time Mr. Epstein had an office in Palm Beach?
A. Not outside the house, no.
Q. Do you have any knowledge of whether or not the video equipment was -- and I don't know the technical term, forgive me, but was it the kind of equipment that would record for a certain amount of time and then record over that film?

How did you know then that the young technidan from Ohio maintained the computers and the video equipment?

Several articles have pointed out that the mining activity at Morne Bossa over the last two decades oddly corresponds to the first & second coups of former President Aristide. Haitian mining laws were revised during both coups when Aristide was ousted from office. Bill Clinton's administration backed those coups throwing Aristide out.

This article makes a great point: "It doesn't matter that there aren't many mineral resources left, the problem is that the land is believed to hold easy riches."

There may or may not be great wealth in the gold, silver, and supposed oil in Haiti. Haiti is just one more Third World dime piece for the Clintons & their multinational cronies. A couple billion here, there, everywhere adds up. And the crony connections are something straight our of a movie dramatization!

Now, for the last 6 months, Haiti is in the midst of new Presidential elections & the ensuing chaos appears that it could only be instigated from outside Haiti, albeit with plenty of willing allies in the Haitian elite (racism is so complex in this country). In her role as Secretary of State, Hillary Clinton ensured Martelly won the rigged elections in 2010. Though little attention has been given to her email scandal with huge gaps around correspondence in Haiti. Now, we

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

On September 9, 1785, three more ex-members of the Illuminati, Cossandey, Grunberger, and Renner, appeared before a Bavarian Court of Inquiry, where they supplied Illuminati membership lists, and revealed their aims and goals to be: 1.) abolition of the Monarchy, 2). abolition of private property, 3). abolition of inheritance, 4). abolition of patriotism, 5). abolition of the family through the abolition of marriage, morality, and the institution of communal education for children, and 6). abolition of all religion. The purposes of these six points of abolition were to divide humanity politically, socially, and economically, and to weaken countries to create an International One-World Government with centralization of all political power.

Subject: Comet Ping Pong and OBAMA...and Podesta?.

John,

Hello. Some young lawyer type friends of mine are hosting an Obama Fundraiser at Comet Ping Pong on Thursday Night and then watching the debate. Should be about 150 people and they are raising between 25 and 35 thousand dollars. Would you be willing to stop by around 8 o'clock or so and make a little speech. They (and I) would be thrilled to have you of course. I understand if you are not available.

Also, I saw that you are reading at Politics & Prose soon. What can we do afterward? Would you like to have a dinner at my places?!?

Big or small. What do you think?

See you soon.
Yours, James Alefantis

Moloch

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

For other uses, see Moloch (disambiguation).

Moloch (Masoretic מֹלֶךְ mōlek; Greek Μολόχ) is the Biblical name of a Canaanite god associated with child sacrifice.

The name Moloch results from a dysphemic vocalisation in the Second Temple period of a theonym based on the root mlk "king". There are a number of Canaanite gods with names based on this root, which became summarily associated with Moloch, including Biblical מַלְכָּם Malkam "great king" (KJV Milcom), which appears to refer to a god of the Ammonites, as well as Tyrian Melqart and others.

Rabbinical tradition depicted Moloch as a bronze statue heated with fire into which the victims were thrown. This has been associated with reports by Greco-Roman authors on the child sacrifices in Carthage to Baal Hammon,[1] especially since archaeological excavations since the 1920s have produced evidence for child sacrifice in Carthage as well as inscriptions including the term MLK, either a theonym or a technical term associated with sacrifice. In interpretatio graeca, the Phoenician god was identified with Cronus, due to the parallel mytheme of Cronus devouring his children.

Otto Eissfeldt in 1935 argued that mlk was not to be taken as a theonym at all but as a term for a type of fire sacrifice, and that lĕmōlek* "as a molk-sacrifice" had been reinterpreted as the name of a Canaanite idol following the Deuteronomic reform under Josiah (r. 640–609 BC). According to Eissfeldt, this 7th-century reform abolished the child sacrifice that had hitherto been an acceptable part of the cult of Yahweh.

Moloch has been used figuratively in English literature from John Milton's Paradise Lost (1667) to Allen Ginsberg's "Howl" (1955), to refer to a person or thing demanding or requiring a very costly sacrifice.

Saturn and Satan

Saturn has also been associated with Satan and this, for numerous reasons. First, many authors argue that the word Satan is derived from the word Saturn. Second, Saturn is associated with the color black as well as Satan. Third, Ancients considered Saturn to be the farthest planet from the sun , the latter being associated with the principle of Good. (Note that Pluto never was considered a planet). Saturn is consequently the celestial body that is the less exposed to the sun's divine light and thus associated with the coldness of the principle of Evil. Finally, the "great god Pan", the horned deity, represented Saturn in ancient paganism. This half-man half-goat creature is considered the ancestor of our modern depictions of Satan.

THE NAZI "FINAL SOLUTION": MASS HUMAN SACRIFICE

After Germany invaded Poland in September 1939, occupation authorities began to establish urban ghettos to segregate Jews. Following the invasion of the Soviet Union by Nazi Germany via Operation Barbarossa in June 1941, the systematic murder of Jews by the Nazis began in full force, with around 1.5 million Jews shot by German forces and local collaborators. These executions often took place a few kilometers from a town. Victims were rounded up, marched to the execution site and shot, their bodies falling into previously-dug mass grave sites. Executions were public spectacles, and the victims' property was looted both by Nazi occupiers and local inhabitants. As the Nazis occupied other European nations, citizens from across Europe were sent to concentration camps, which interned prisoners from every nation occupied by the forces of the Third Reich. Some Nazis found the method of execution by shooting both psychologically distressing and logistically inconvenient, which influenced the Nazi's decision to switch to other killing methods.

I was once in a deeply depressed state, I did things out of routine and habit. Not for real joy, or enjoyment.

Days bled together.

I was on autopilot, simply moving through space and time without cognitive thought. In fact, my thoughts were a source of agony.

I knew precisely that the place I was in was of my own choosing, yet at the same time I felt anchored. Unaproachable to even myself.

For some time I existed there, deeply anchored in the dark. Shrouded, hidden, alone. Accompanied by a chorus of negative voices, each giving a voice to my own negative thoughts.

Then one day, as if the sun finally rose after an endless night. I began to climb out.

My will, that which seemed non-existent, began to grow. The darkness slowly illuminated, until I was warmed in a surrounding light.

My vision, became crystal clear. My purpose set before me. And so, I took my first real steps.

ORDER OF THE BLACK SUN

Inside Heinrich Himmler's Schutzstaffel, which he himself described as a "mystical inner order" of the Nazi Party, was embedded another occult order and secret society, Die Schwarz Sonne (The Black Sun). The Black Sun was an "inner order within an inner order" – the occult brotherhood that truly directed the Third Reich. Himmler most likely based The Black Sun order upon the beliefs of the man known as his "personal Rasputin" and his "private magus" – his mentor and counselor on matters of the occult – Karl Maria Wiligut. Wiligut believed that a burnt-out star, or "Black Sun," called Santur was once the center of our solar system, and was a source of mystical power to the ancient Aryan people. Other esoteric groups within Nazi Germany referred to this ancient force as the Vril.

DEFINITION OF RELIGION

The word religion is etymologically derived from the Latin verb religare, meaning "to bind; to hold back by tying; to thwart from forward progress."

Religion is a mental, spiritual and sociological control system based in unchallenged, erroneous and dogmatic belief, which is specifically designed to hold back the progress of human consciousness by preventing it from recognizing and accepting reality and truth.

GERMANIC OCCULT REVIVAL
OF THE LATE 19TH & EARLY 20TH CENTURIES

The late 19th and early 20th centuries saw a general occult revival on the European continent, specifically the regions including Germany and Austria. Among the occult traditions that influenced this revival were Astrology, Runes, Freemasonry, Rosicrucianism, Theosophy and Anthroposophy.

1 New York what were you doing getting to names and 2 phone numbers and then pictures of girls?
3 A. I was trying to get some information. I
4 was working the computer and I just happen -- they 5 have the icon of the file and I open and it was 6 right there, so I was not looking but, you know,
7 it was already accessible to me.
8 Q. And how many photographs did you then 9 scroll through to look at?
10 A. Probably 30.
11 Q. Okay. And why?
12 A. Just curiosity, sir.
13 Q. So again, you never told anyone other 14 than your wife?
15 A. No.
16 Q. Correct?
17 A. Yes, correct.
18 Q. Of the pictures that you saw, if I 19 understood it correctly, some of those were 20 pictures of -- well, I think you said some of them
21 reflected parties or banquets?
22 A. Yes.
23 Q. I think you described some of the 24 pictures gatherings that appeared to be either in 25 Russia or Eastern Europe?

1 A. Yes.
2 Q. All right. And then you talked about a 3 picture of two girls in the shower that you didn't 4 know the girls. Correct?
5 A. Yes.
6 Q. That's correct?
7 A. That's correct.
8 Q. All right. And that in all of the 9 photographs that you saw the individuals seemed to 10 be having a good time?
11 A. Yes.
12 Q. All right. Would it be a correct
13 statement that in none of the photographs did 14 anyone seem to be distressed or disturbed or show 15 any type of negative emotion, at least from what 16 you observed?
17 A. That's correct.
18 MS. EZELL: Objection, form.
19 BY MR. CRITTON:
20 Q. And in terms of the photographs that you
21 did see, were any of the photographs that you saw,
22 did they appear -- did they appear to have been of 23 women that you had seen fly in with Mr. Epstein on 24 his plane?
25 A. Yes.

1 Q. Okay. Were any of the photographs that
2 were in -- again, I'm talking about Ms. Maxwell's
3 computer now, were those photographs of 4 individuals who were any of the girls or ladies
5 that came over to give massages?
6 A. No. They stay at the house.
7 Q. Okay. So the photographs that you saw on 8 Ms. Maxwell's computer of females in any state of 9 undress or at parties or at banquets, those were 10 all of individuals who would fly in with Mr.
11 Epstein at various periods of time that had 12 traveled with him?
13 A. That's correct.
14 Q. Okay. Those are the girls that you told 15 us I think at your last deposition and reaffirmed 16 here today, those girls all appeared to be in 17 their 20's?
18 A. Yes, sir.
19 Q. All right. Now, you were also asked some 20 questions, a lot of questions about surveillance.
21 And if I understood your testimony, and this is 22 where it goes back to what do you know, what don't 23 you know, what were you speculating on, what did 24 you know at the time, what do you know now, at 25 least I need you to distinguish that for me so

1 that I know what you knew at the time, and as 2 distinct from what you may have read in the 3 newspaper or been told by some lawyer or someone
4 else that may not be accurate. Okay?
5 A. Yes, sir.
6 Q. With regard to the -- with regard to 7 surveillance equipment, if I understood your 8 testimony today is you were completely unaware of 9 the existence of any surveillance equipment in the 10 house during the 2004/2005 time period that you
11 worked there. Is that correct?
12 A. Yes.
13 Q. And therefore, where it was, what may 14 have existed, whether it in fact actually did 15 exist, whether anyone maintained it, you have no
16 personal knowledge whatsoever. Is that true?
17 A. That's true.
18 MR. WILLITS: Object to the form.
19 BY MR. CRITTON:
20 Q. You talked about pictures of two women
21 who you saw in the house who were nude, one was 22 Nadia?
23 A. Yes.
24 Q. And you knew Nadia was someone who was in 25 her 20's?

Interest over time

- sworn testimony from another of Epstein's household employees (Alfredo Rodriquez) that Dershowitz was present alone at the home of Epstein, without his family, in the presence of young girls;
- invocations of Fifth Amendment rights to remain silent by three of Epstein's identified co-conspirators (Sarah Kellen, Nadia Marcinkova, and Adrianna Mucinska) when asked questions about whether Dershowitz had been involved with massages by young girls;
- refusals by Jeffrey Epstein to discuss Dershowitz's involvement but instead to invoke his Fifth Amendment right.

Id. at 26-38.

Several months later, on April 7, 2015, the Court (Marra, J.) denied Jane Doe 3 and Jane Doe 4's motion for joinder. McCawley Decl., Exhibit. 4, Order denying Jane Doe 3's motion to join. With regard to the eight separate issues as to which the allegations against Dershowitz were relevant, the Court addressed only the first (establishing "victim" status) and found that the "factual details regarding with whom and where the Jane Does engaged in sexual activities are immaterial and impertinent to this central claim (i.e., that they were known victims of Mr. Epstein and the Government owed them CVRA duties), especially considering that these details involve non-parties who are not related to the respondent Government." Id. at 5.[4] Accordingly, the Court struck the factual details from the victims' pleading as unnecessary at that time. The Court specifically recognized, however, that the details could be reasserted by the parties to the action – i.e., Jane Doe 1 and Jane Doe 2 – if they could "demonstrate a good faith basis for believing that such details are pertinent to a matter presented for the Court's consideration." Id. at 6. Following the Court's ruling, additional litigation has proceeded in the CVRA case.

The Dershowitz case

[4] In asserting that the non-parties were "not related to the respondent Government," the Court did not address Jane Doe 3's argument that Dershowitz, as one of Epstein's defense counsel, had helped negotiate the non-prosecution agreement and helped to arrange to keep it secret from the victims.

pop up a sexual game in which a group of guys and girls gather round and the men sit down with thier pants around their ankles. The women then can do anything to the men but touch their penis. The object is to see who "pops up" last. the women are competing to see who can turn the men on the quickest. Or you can play it reversed where the last guy to become aroused wins.

Hey everyone! Let's play pop up!

19. Rather than try these questions in the media, Mr. Edwards and I filed a defamation action in Florida against Dershowitz. We were represented by well-known Florida attorney Jack Scarola.

20. During the course of the defamation action, I explained the significant work – far in excess of one hour – that Mr. Edwards and I had done to investigate Ms. Giuffre's sworn allegations that Dershowitz had repeatedly sexually abused her. I explained that work at length in my deposition in the case. Attached hereto as Sealed Exhibit 1 is a true and correct copy of the first day of my deposition testimony in the case. Pages 61-117 explain some of the work that Mr. Edwards and I did to corroborate Ms. Giuffre's allegations before filing them in the CVRA case.

21. My deposition testimony includes the following information that Mr. Edwards and I relied upon in believing the truth of Giuffre's allegations:

a. The Palm Beach Police Department put together an 87-page report based on witness interviews and other evidence documenting sexual abuse of dozens of minor girls occurring in Epstein's Florida mansion – a location where Ms. Giuffre said Dershowitz had abused her;

b. The Palm Beach police report showed the sexual abuse was occurring on a daily basis and, indeed, in some cases as much as two or three times in one day in circumstances that would have made it obvious to a visiting guest that young girls were coming to the home for sexual purposes;

c. Flight logs for Epstein's private jet showed that Epstein (accompanied by Ms. Maxwell) flew Ms. Giuffre to the New York City area, a location where Ms. Giuffre said Dershowitz had abused her;

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

On September 1, 1939, Nazi Germany invaded Poland, beginning the global conflict of World War II. Officially, Nazi Germany lasted only 12 years, finally coming to an end when the Instrument of Surrender was signed by a representative of the German High Command on May 8, 1945, which officially ended the war in Europe. The formal abolition of the Nazi Party took place on October 10, 1945, which was followed by the trials of major war criminals before the International Military Tribunal in Nuremberg. Since its inception, the Nazi Party was ultimately responsible for the deaths of 20 million people.

SUBLIME PERFECT MASTERS

One of the principal secret societies founded by Phillipe Buonarroti, the Sublime Perfect Masters, took shape in Geneva in 1809 as an inner circle of revolutionaries drawn from the Philadelphes, another secret society of the time, and from liberal Masonic circles. Unlike the Philadelphes, which focused its efforts on the destruction of Napoleon, the Sublime Perfect Masters set their sights on the more ambitious goal of launching revolutions throughout Europe to bring about socialist governments and the abolition of private property.

ARIOSOPHY, THEOZOOLOGY, ORDO NOVI TEMPLI & OSTARA

In 1905, Liebenfels published a book called Theozoology, in which he advocated sterilization and forced labor of "lower races" and glorified the Aryan Race as Gottmenschen ("God-men"). Through Theozoology, Liebenfels distorted occult, spiritual, and even biblical teachings to justify his esoteric racial ideology. He taught that the biblical Eve had procreated with demons to give birth to what he described as the "lower races." In 1905, Liebenfels founded Ostara, a magazine through which he promoted Ariosophy and Theozoology. Liebenfels claimed that Ostara had over 100,000 subscribers, including Adolf Hitler himself. Liebenfels claimed he was visited by Hitler in 1909, and supplied him with two missing issues of Ostara.

State monopoly on markets

- State regulations censor what can be sold (bans), who can sell (permits) and for what price (price controls).
- In a free market, supply & demand determine what is sold and, along with reviews, keep customers safe.
- State regulations harm people:
  - Difficult to access affordable medicine.
  - Banned from working if you don't have ID.
  - High taxes make it difficult to afford rent/food, while funding war, corporate bailouts & corruption.
  - Zoning laws prevent affordable housing.
  - Threats of violence for harmless actions (= victimless crimes).

THE NAZI "FINAL SOLUTION": MASS HUMAN SACRIFICE

The word holocaust (etymologically derived from the Greek adjective ὅλος [holos]: "whole," and the Greek adjective καυστός [kaustos]: "burned," thus "burned entirely, immolated") has become the most common word used to describe the Nazi extermination of Jews and other undesirables (such as Slavs, Poles, Romani, and others) during the Third Reich. The Nazis themselves used the phrase "Final Solution" to describe their genocidal actions. An estimated 250,000 Germans were directly involved in killing Jews. An additional 250,000 were involved in the organization and planning of exterminations. Genocide required the active and tacit consent of millions of Germans and non-German collaborators alike. German SS, police, and regular army units rarely had trouble finding enough men to follow their orders to shoot Jewish civilians, even though punishment for refusal to do so was either very light or altogether absent.

Third Dimension:

The Sphere of the mind or sphere of true consciousness. Comprised of infinite thoughts categorized by focus into conscious, subconscious, and unconscious.

First Dimension:

the stelloctahedron of fact/fiction. simple probability in the form of clear possibility

Fourth Dimension:

the hypersphere of awareness of time. This has scale correspondence to the sphere of the mind.

Fifth Dimension:

the torus of access to unconscious memory

Ninth Dimension:

Implosion of concentration. Links to the first dimension.

Sixth Dimension:

the externally projected hypersphere of active consciousness. Interacts with probabilities in event to create new possibilities.

GERMANIC PAGANISM

These commonalities include myths regarding the creation and destruction of the world, a general belief in an afterlife, and a wide pantheon of gods, goddesses and supernatural beings. Themes of Astro-Theology also figured heavily into these traditions, evidenced specifically by the names of some of its most important deities.

LOUIS AUGUSTE BLANQUI

BLANQUISM & PUTSCHISM

Blanqui did not believe in the preponderant role of the working class, nor in popular movements. He thought that revolution should be carried out by a relatively small group of highly organized and secretive conspirators, who would establish a "temporary dictatorship" by force. Having seized power, the revolutionaries would then use the power of the State to introduce Socialism. This period of "transitional tyranny" would permit the implementation of a "New Order," after which power would be "handed to the people." Blanquism is considered a particular type of putschism – the view that political revolution should take the form of a putsch, or coup d'état. Blanqui was more concerned with the revolution itself than with the future society that would result from it. For Blanquists, revolution and the overturning of the bourgeois social order are ends sufficient in themselves.

NAZIS ON BECOMING "GOD":
A "NEW ORDER" OF MASTERS AND SLAVES

"I shall endeavor to squeeze out of this province (Poland) everything that is still possible to squeeze out. If the new food scheme is carried out in 1943, a half-million people in Warsaw and its suburbs alone will be deprived of food. Poland can only be administered by utilizing the country through means of ruthless exploitation, deportation of all supplies, raw materials, machines, factory installations, etc., which are important for the German war economy, availability of all workers for work within Germany, reduction of the entire Polish economy to absolute minimum necessary for bare existence of the population, and closing of all educational institutions, especially technical schools and colleges, in order to prevent the growth of the new Polish intelligentsia. Poland shall be treated as a colony. The Poles shall be the slaves of the Greater German Reich."

Action doesn't always have to be physical. MLK made his opponents do the work for him. By not using violence he made people see how horrible the treatment of African Americans was. "We will meet your physical force with soul force." The point is that he took action to change his situation, he didn't grumble to his friends about how unfair everything was.

sexual abuse of Jane Doe #3 and others, Maxwell also took numerous sexually explicit pictures of underage girls involved in sexual activities, including Jane Doe #3. She shared these photographs (which constituted child pornography under applicable federal laws) with Epstein. The Government is apparently aware of, and in certain instances possesses some of these photographs.

Perhaps even more important to her role in Epstein's sexual abuse ring, Maxwell had direct connections to other powerful individuals with whom she could connect Epstein. For instance, one such powerful individual Epstein forced Jane Doe #3 to have sexual relations with was a member of the British Royal Family, Prince Andrew (a/k/a Duke of York). Jane Doe #3 was forced to have sexual relations with this Prince when she was a minor in three separate geographical locations: in London (at Ghislaine Maxwell's apartment), in New York, and on Epstein's private island in the U.S. Virgin Islands (in an orgy with numerous other under-aged girls). Epstein instructed Jane Doe #3 that she was to give the Prince whatever he demanded and required Jane Doe #3 to report back to him on the details of the sexual abuse. Maxwell facilitated Prince Andrew's acts of sexual abuse by acting as a "madame" for Epstein, thereby assisting in internationally trafficking Jane Doe #3 (and numerous other young girls) for sexual purposes.

Another person in Epstein's inner circle of friends (who becomes apparent with almost no investigative effort) is Jean Luc Brunel. Epstein sexually trafficked Jane Doe #3 to Jean Luc Brunel many times. Brunel was another of Epstein's closest friends and a regular traveling companion, who had many contacts with young girls throughout the world. Brunel has been a model scout for various modeling agencies for many years and apparently was able to get U.S.

CHINESE COMMUNISM

Under the current rule of Xi Jinping, China has developed a Social Credit System, a national digital registry, which enables the CCP to track individuals and businesses, and "evaluate them for trustworthiness." The Social Credit System rewards citizens for actions the CCP condones, and punishes them for doing anything the CCP deems undesirable. Since 2014, the CCP has embarked on a campaign of genocide against Uyghurs and other ethnic minorities, detaining more than 1,000,000 in internment camps. Under Xi Jinping's modern Communist regime, China has been branded by Amnesty International as the "World's Worst Executioner." China often holds mass rallies to announce people being sentenced to death in medieval-style public trials. Chinese prosecutors litigating execution cases have a conviction rate of 99%, and doom thousands of political prisoners to execution every year.

The US has the 3rd highest murder rate in the world. If you remove:

1. Chicago
2. Detroit
3. Washington DC
4. St. Louis
5. Philadelphia

The US is then 189th out of 193 countries in the world. All five cities have strict gun control laws and are controlled by Democrats. Fact-check it.

GUN CONTROL IN SWEDEN:

To get a gun permit in Sweden, you must first take a year-long hunter training program and pass a written and shooting test. In addition to undergoing training, gun owners must store their firearms in a locked vault. Gun permits are denied to those convicted of a felony, domestic abusers, drunk drivers, or those under a restraining order. Sweden also has one of the lowest gun murder rates in the world. JOSEPH GOEBBELS

Goebbels converted May 1st from a workers' rights holiday into a day celebrating the Nazi Party. May 1st is Beltane (also called Walpurgisnacht) the highest Sabbat (holy day) of the occult solar calendar. He also organized and spoke at many book-burning ceremonies, where huge crowds of Nazis gathered to burn books which were viewed as being subversive, or representing ideologies that were opposed to Nazism. This proved an effective information control technique within Nazi Germany. If they could never read opposing views, most Germans could never come out of the mindset programmed into them by Nazi propagandists.

NAZI OCCULT TECHNOLOGY

Many researchers have speculated that Nazi technologists were working on classified advanced weapons projects including atomic weapons, missiles capable of reaching the United States, scalar weapons, and above all, time travel and anti-gravity devices. The most famous among these speculated programs was Die Glocke (The Bell), which was described as a piece of glowing, rotating machinery that possibly had some kind of anti-gravitational effect. Speculation continues today that The Bell may have been some sort of prototype for an anti-gravitational craft which would act as a "Wonder Weapon" to allow Hitler and the Nazis to turn the tide late in World War II.

Georgetown Law Faculty and Staff,

My parents are visiting this weekend, and I need to sell my enormous collection of beanie babies! I've approximately 480 little creatures of joy, and I'm selling each one for $20.00. You must buy all 480, though. It is a collection (not an auction)... They are very respectful and amicable with one another, and they are (for the most part) cat and dog friendly. Some are sassier than others, naturally.

Please let me know! My parents can't find out.

CONFIDENTIAL

whilst he spanked his penis on her bottom.

She also had to have sexual intercourse with Clinton in Epstein's New York Mansion just off 5th Avenue on numerous occasions. It's the NY Mansion we spoke about yesterday. I too was forced by Epstein to visit regularly and if I didn't turn up he would personally come and find me where ever I was hiding. It still bewilders me how Epstein always seemed to know where I was if I didn't turn up at his NY residence.

When my friend had sexual intercourse with Clinton, Prince Andrew and Richard Branson, sex tapes were in fact filmed on each separate occasion by Jeffery. Thank God she managed to get a hold of some footage of the filmed sex tapes, which clearly identify the faces of Clinton, Prince Andrew and Branson having sexual intercourse with her. Frustratingly enough Epstein was not seen in any of the footage but he was clever like that!

After two hours of trying to convince my friend to come forward with me, I eventually managed to persuade her to send me some of the video footage which she kept, implicating all three all men mentioned above. I personally can confirm that I have, with my own two eyes, seen the evidence of these sexual acts, which clearly identifies Bill Clinton, Prince Andrew, Richard Branson having sexual intercourse with my friend. I will be more then willing to swear under oath and testify in court over these sex tapes. It will break your heart into a million tiny pieces Maureen when you watch this footage, and I know that what I watched yesterday, will haunt me for the rest of my life!

Unfortunately, I cannot send you the footage without her consent due to massive consequences to her safety but I can confirm that I do have footage in my possession. I have backed up the footage on several USB sticks and have securely sent them to various different locations throughout Europe with only one other person close to me, knowing where their locations are, just in case anything happens to me before the footage is released.

When my friend eventually had the courage to speak out and went to the police in 2008 to report what had happened, nothing was done and she was utterly humiliated by the police department where she went to report what had happened with Epstein, Clinton, Branson and Prince Andrew. She was made to feel like a dirty whore and a liar and wasn't taken seriously. When she then tried to sue Epstein for damages, she was severely bullied and threatened by his lawyer Alan Dershowitz whom she also had sexual relations with and who was also heavily involved in Epstein's paedophile Ring.

A couple months later, she was then approached, by Special Agents Forces Men sent directly by Hilary Clinton herself, in order to protect her presidential campaign in 2008. They heavily intimidated her, ruffled her up (luckily she took photos as evidence) and was then forced to sign a confidentiality agreement which ensures that she can never come forward publicly implicating her husband.

She was then given a substantial payout, directly from the Clinton Foundation to keep her quiet. She is 1000% certain that the FBI did a cover up and she has the individual names of Hilary's Special Agent Officers involved in intimidating her. She was then forced against her will to sign a legally binding confidentially agreement on Hilary's behalf for her eternal silence. If she breaks this agreement, she is dead.

She told me how it was a complete conspiracy as Alan Dershowitz, whom was one of the lawyers that represented Jeffery when he went to trail, made huge endorsements to the Clinton Foundation to help fund her 2008 presidential campaign.

I personally met Alan numerous times as Jeffery had sent him to my legal aid, to deal with a case I was going to open against [redacted] whom I met through the website SugarDaddie.com (he went under the name [redacted] on the site). [redacted] also tried to rape me with his friend when we were at anchor on his boat in Miami.

American journalist Walter Lippmann and psychologist Edward Bernays were also prominent members of Wellington House. Bernays, the nephew of psychologist Sigmund Freud and author of the books Propaganda, Crystalizing Public Opinion, and Public Relations, pioneered the use of psychology and other social sciences to shape and form public opinion so that the public thought such manufactured opinions were their own. Bernays wrote: "If we understand the mechanism and motives of the group mind, it is now possible to control and regiment the masses according to our will without them knowing it." He called this technique "engineering consent." One of his best-known techniques of achieving this goal was the indirect use of what he called "third-party authorities" to shape desired opinions. He stated: "If you can influence the leaders, either with or without their conscious cooperation, you automatically influence the group which they sway."

Ms. Giuffre is still attempting to locate Ms. Taylor, but she is believed to reside in London.

COMMUNISTS BECOMING "GOD":

THE SOCIALIST "NEW ORDER" OF MASTERS AND SLAVES

Unemployment became a capital crime in the Soviet Union. Anyone who didn't show up to work could be thrown into a gulag. Soviet law labeled anyone who was unemployed as a person leading "a parasitic existence." The day you lost your job, you became a criminal, and you could be thrown into a forced labor camp for the offense. Even 20 minutes of lateness to work brought one into the realm of capital offense. Leaving work early could lead to up to four months in prison, and missing a shift would lead to six months of corrective labor. It was a crime to attempt to feed yourself from Nature. There were specific laws against collecting wild fruits, nuts, and berries. You could find yourself in a gulag for picking a single cherry off a tree.

For other uses, see Antinous (disambiguation).

Antinous (also Antinoüs or Antinoös; Ancient Greek: Ἀντίνοος; 27 November, c. 111 – before 30 October 130[1]) was a Bithynian Greek youth and a favourite, or lover, of the Roman emperor Hadrian.[2] He was deified after his death, being worshiped in both the Greek East and Latin West, sometimes as a god (theos) and sometimes merely as a hero (heros).[3] attraction for women, in contrast to much reliable early evidence that he was sexually attracted to boys and young men.[119] For centuries, pederasty had long been socially acceptable among Greece's leisured and citizen classes, with an older erastes (aged between 20 and 40) undertaking a caring sexual relationship with an eromenos (aged between 12 and 18) and taking a key role in their education,[20] and Hadrian took Antinous as a favoured servant when they were aged about 48 and 13. Such a societal institution of pederasty was not indigenous to Roman culture, although bisexuality was the norm in the upper echelons of

WTF? Further down the page:

Lambert believed that the sculptures of Antinous "remain without doubt one of the most elevated and ideal monuments to pederastic love of the whole ancient world",[20] also describing them as "the final great creation of classical art".[94]

That quote is from Royston Lambert who wrote a book about Antinous and Hadrian

So the same James Alefantis who posts these photos also uses "one of the most elevated and ideal monuments to pederastic love of the whole ancient world"

Yikes! Any other creepy associations:

Following his death, Hadrian deified Antinous and founded an organised cult devoted to his worship that spread throughout the Empire. Hadrian founded the city of Antinopolis close to Antinous's place of death, which became a cultic centre for the worship of Osiris-Antinous. Hadrian also founded games in commemoration of Antinous to take place in both Antinopolis and Athens, with Antin

John Podesta's taste in art

http://archive.is/GcyOg

If you've ever dreamed of strolling through a museum with a slice of pizza and glass of wine in hand, you need to befriend superlobbyist Tony Podesta. Known about town as a legendary political "fix-it" man, Podesta has turned his Kalorama home into a shrine to contemporary art, ranging from relatively under-the-radar artists such as Serbian painter Biljana Djurdjevic to those who are much better known (like French sculptor Louise Bourgeois).

IT'S ALWAYS BEEN THIS WAY, AND IT'S NO DIFFERENT TODAY

Most people today think in an overly optimistic and quite unrealistic fashion when attempting to compare the modern moral state of human beings to those who conducted and took part in the human atrocities of the Nazi and Communist regimes. The truth of the matter is far more sobering. The vast majority of people today are no different at all in their immoral state of consciousness when compared to the totalitarians of the past. They are cut from the exact same immoral cloth, and there is an abundance of evidence supporting this sad and unfortunate conclusion.

VÖLKISCH MOVEMENT

The Völkisch Movement was a German ethno-nationalist movement active from the late 19th century through to the Nazi era. Erected on the ideas of Blood and Soil (genetics and land), and Volkskörper (ethnic body of people) the Völkisch Movement was characterized by racism, romantic nationalism and anti-Semitism from the early 1900s onward. Throughout its entire history, the Völkisch Movement contained many Dark Occultists who twisted the philosophies of Theosophy and Anthroposophy into their own distorted ideologies of control, conquest, racism and genocide. From its inception, members of the Völkisch Movement generally considered Jews to be an "alien" people who belonged to a different race from Germans.

PRUSSIAN "EDUCATION" SYSTEM & OUTCOME-BASED "EDUCATION"

Horace Mann

In the 1840s, Horace Mann, secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Education, who later became known as known as the "Father of American Education," traveled to Europe to study the Prussian System. Mann was seeking a way to change what he deemed "unruly" children into "disciplined citizens." After assessing the Prussian model as an effective methodology to implement State-controlled education, Mann's next step was to sell the Prussian System to the American public in the name of "equality." This would be done by convincing each U.S. state to adopt a compulsory government school system to ensure a "uniform education" for the masses. The primary goal of this system was not intellectual development, but rather to condition the students for obedience, subordination and collectivism – in other words, Social Engineering. Understanding these origins of mass public education, it becomes exceedingly clear why "free education for all children in public schools" was a key plank of The Communist Manifesto.

HEINRICH HIMMLER
SS, AHNENERBE & TOTENKOPF

In 1935, Himmler and leading "Blood and Soil" ideologist, Richard Walther Darré founded an archaeological research and expedition society called the Ahnenerbe, which was dedicated to proving the genetic superiority and ancient origins of the Germanic race. Himmler regarded the Ahnenerbe as "an elite think tank" which would sweep away previous scholarship on the development of humanity and reveal that Hitler's ideas on the subject were true. Himmler also believed that the Ahnenerbe's investigations might reveal ancient secrets about agriculture, medicine, and warfare which would benefit Nazi Germany. It employed scholars from a wide range of academic fields, including archaeology, anthropology, ethnology, history, biology, zoology, botany, astronomy, medicine and more. The Ahnenerbe formed the basis for the depiction in the Indiana Jones franchise of Nazis searching for religious artifacts.

NATIONAL SOCIALIST GERMAN WORKERS' PARTY (NSDAP)

Adolf Hitler quickly became the NSDAP's most active orator, with huge crowds flocking to hear him speak. He soon became the party's most dominant figure. The NSDAP continued to attract new members, gathering over 2,000 members in its first year. On May 20, 1920, the symbol of the Swastika (originally a symbol used by various ancient cultures throughout the world to represent good fortune) was formally adopted as the party emblem.

In völkisch circles, the swastika was considered the symbol of the Aryan Race. It represented the replacement of the symbol of the Christian cross with allegiance to the National Socialist State.

7 I think we already talked about that.
8 I'm skipping ahead a little bit.
9 If Rodriguez needed to relay a message to

6 A. Yes.
7 Q. And what is your understanding as to how 8 Prince Andrew is associated with Jeffrey Epstein?
9 A. Because there were pictures with him

ANTHROPOSOPHY & THE TEACHINGS OF RUDOLF STEINER

During his life, Rudolf Steiner fiercely advocated for universal education and self-improvement as a pathway to positive social change. He was one of the most influential teachers of the occult tradition of Rosicrucianism. One of Steiner's core teachings was that social improvement and individual inner development must go hand-in-hand. He initiated educational, social, and artistic movements that still flourish around the world today, including Waldorf Education, biodynamic agriculture, and anthroposophical medicine and architecture.

Settling in Munich, Sebottendorf established an occult order known as the Thule Society in 1918 with fellow occultist Walter Nauhaus. The Thule Society quickly became an increasingly influential behind-the-scenes force of German politics. In classical literature and cartography, Thule represented the northern-most regions of Earth. THE TAVISTOCK INSTITUTE
& LENIN'S JOURNEY THROUGH EUROPE

Lord Walter Rothschild and members of the Rockefeller family demanded that they be allowed to send their representative Sydney Reilly to Russia to supervise the transfer of Russian natural resources and gold held in the Russian Central Bank to London. This was agreed to by Lenin. To seal the bargain, Lord Milner, on behalf of the Rothschilds, gave Lenin 60 million British pounds, while the Rockefellers contributed 40 million dollars to Lenin and the Bolsheviks. Fritz Platten was put in charge of the logistics of Lenin's journey, and oversaw it until the Bolshevik revolutionaries arrived safely in Petrograd, Russia.

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

In October 1783, Joseph Utzschneider, a lawyer who had left the Illuminati in August of that year, presented to Bavarian Duchess Maria Anna a document which detailed the activities of the Order. On June 22, 1784, the Illuminati was outlawed by edict of Duke Karl Theodore Dalberg, Elector of Bavaria, after discovering that the goals of the Illuminati were to "in time rule the world" by overthrowing all civil government. On March 2, 1785, Dalberg issued a proclamation identifying the Illuminati as a branch of Freemasonry, and ordered their lodges to be shut down. The government of Bavaria began a war against the Illuminati and initiated judicial inquiries. In an attempt to preserve the secrecy of their motives, the Illuminati's Areopagite burned many of their documents. However, the Bavarian government was able to seize many of their papers upon raiding their lodges.

After Hitler's rise to prominence in the 1920s, Liebenfels tried to be recognized as one of his ideological precursors. In the preface of issue #1 of the 3rd series of Ostara magazine, he wrote: "One shall remember that the swastika and fascist movements are basically offspring of Ostara." After Austria was annexed by Nazi Germany in 1938, Liebenfels hoped for Hitler's patronage, but Hitler banned him from publishing his writings, and copies of Ostara were removed from circulation. After the war, Liebenfels accused Hitler of having not only stolen but corrupted his ideas, and also of being of "inferior racial stock." Hitler never mentioned Liebenfels in any recorded conversation, speech, or document.

Marx was significantly influenced by the philosophy of Georg Wilhelm Friedrich Hegel, and embrace Hegelianism in his youth. While in Paris in 1844, Marx met Friedrich Engels, a lifelong friend and collaborator. After moving to Brussels in 1845, Marx and Engels were both active in the international political party known as the Communist League. FRIEDRICH ENGELS

Friedrich Engels (November 28, 1820 – August 5, 1895) was a German ideologue, political theorist, and revolutionary socialist. He was a businessman and the closest friend and collaborator of Karl Marx. Engels met Marx in 1844, and they jointly authored a number of works, including The Communist Manifesto in 1848, and worked as political organizers and activists in the Communist League and First International. Engel's writings on materialism, idealism, and dialectics supplied Marxism with its ontological and metaphysical foundation. Engels also helped Marx financially, allowing him to continue his writing after moving to London in 1849. After Marx's death in 1883, Engels compiled volumes II and III of Das Kapital, helped found the socialist organization Second International, and became the leading authority on Marxist political and economic theories.

Members of the Fabian Society have included noted political leaders of many other countries. Obafemi Awolowo, Premier of the Western State of Nigeria, was a Fabian Society member in the late 1940s. The founder of Pakistan, Muhammad Ali Jinnah, was an avid member of the Fabian Society in the early 1930s. Lee Kuan Yew, the first Prime Minister of Singapore, stated in his memoirs that his initial political philosophy was strongly influenced by the Fabian Society. Michel Aflaq, widely considered as the founder of the Arab Ba'athist movement, was a Fabian Socialist. And Salamah Musa of Egypt, a prominent advocate of Arab Socialism, was a member of the Fabian Society since 1909. 20th century members of the Fabian Society included UK Prime Ministers Ramsay MacDonald, Clement Attlee, Harold Wilson, Tony Blair and Gordon Brown. 229 members of the Fabian Society were elected to the British Parliament in the 1945 general election. The major influence of the Fabian Society on the Labour Party of the UK, and on the English-speaking Socialist movement world-wide, has made it one of the main inspirations of International Socialism.

KARL MARIA WILIGUT

IRMINISM, WEWELSBERG & THE OCCULT PURGE

Karl Maria Wiligut (December 10, 1866 – January 3, 1946) was a prominent Nazi occultist from Austria, and the leading figure of the religion of Irminism. Wiligut identified Irminism as the "true German ancestral religion," claiming that Guido von List's Wotanism and Armanen Runes were parts of a schismatic false religion. He claimed to worship the ancient Germanic god Krist, whom Wiligut claimed Christianity later appropriated as their own savior, Christ. Wiligut also claimed to be the descendant of an ancient line of god-kings dating back to 228,000 BC, and that he was able to see into the past lives of his ancestors. Wiligut believed that a burnt-out star, or "black sun," which he called Santur was once the center of our solar system, and was still visible in human antiquity. He believed Santur to be the source of power of the Hyperboreans (Far-North Aryans).

THE FABIAN SOCIETY
& INCREMENTAL SOCIALISM

The Fabian Society, founded on January 4, 1884 in London, is a British Socialist organization whose purpose is to advance Socialism via gradualism, rather than by revolutionary overthrow. This strategy is known as Incremental Socialism. The Fabian Society was historically related to radicalism, a left-wing political tradition. The Fabian Society has had a powerful influence on British politics, specifically upon the Labour Party of Great Britain, which grew out of it. The Fabian Society also founded the London School of Economics in 1895. The society now functions primarily as a political think tank, and is one of 20 Socialist societies affiliated with the UK's Labour Party.

"The idea that there is one Reality is a conspiracy to destroy Art."
—Robert Anton Wilson

THE FABIAN SOCIETY
& INCREMENTAL SOCIALISM

The Fabian Society was named after the Roman general Quintus Fabius Maximus, who was nicknamed "The Delayer." His "Fabian Strategy" sought gradual victory against a superior force through persistence, harassment, and wearing the enemy down over time, rather than through climactic battles. The logo of the Fabian Society, a tortoise, represented the group's strategy for a slow, imperceptible transition to Socialism. Its coat of arms, a "wolf in sheep's clothing," represented its preferred methodology of infiltration for achieving its goals." The wolf in sheep's clothing symbolism was later abandoned, due to its blatant connotations.

there were obviously new units in town if anyone had asked me. And I could have described their recent tactics in great detail well before anyone else knew, because I pretty much always get hit by the shittiest first wave of everything. But this new thing they have been doing is the creepiest shit I have ever seen, and that's saying a lot considering what I have seen. It's...a shit load of anonymous messages. Offering advice on how to kill myself. At night, while I'm in bed by myself. Phrased as these crazy creepy rhymes. Like: "take your pills and overdose and this will go away, take your pills and overdose and it will be ok." Like fucking creepy nursery ryhmes about how to kill myself. Goddamnit, it's the creepiest shit ever. It progressed from creepy rhyming advice on how to kill myself, to eventually morphing into other crazy messages that were clearly trying to lure me out of the house at night. Like: "I'm right out here, come out to the front door, open it. Walk past the pool. I'm in the barn, come out to the barn and find me." Creepy. Ass. Shit. Creepiest. Shit. Ever. I've lived through some fucking crazy Mossad level psyops. I've had my detailed medical records quoted to my face. This new shit is the creepiest shit ever. Like what would I fucking find if I was stupid enough to walk out to our barn in the middle of the night, just because some anonymous asshole asked me to? Fuck, no, I'm not going out there, stop asking. And asking me to come out to the barn... how the cameras are currently set up... you'd see footage of me walking out to the barn by myself, and you would not see anyone approaching the barn from the back. There would just be footage of me walking out there by myself on the cameras and then maybe my parents would find me hanging from the rafters in the morning. Goddamn, I'm not going out there, no matter how many times you send me messages baiting me to. It's the creepiest shit I have ever experienced, it has totally surpassed all of the previous insane creepy shit I've ever seen. No, I'm not going to take all my pills and overdose myself, no matter how many creepy rhyming messaged you send me asking me to, and I'm also not going to walk outside to the barn at night to come to you, fucking stop asking me to, goddamn it. I dunno. It's maybe the ground work to frame a suicide. Just ask McLandish. Oh wait, you can't, he's dead, of a supposed suicide. He was emailing me shortly before he died because we had both independently come to a lot of the same conclusions. Then he was dead. I'd love to know if he was being creepily taunted to kill himself before then, because it

After a short time, Alan Dershowitz entered the room, after which Jeffrey left the room and Nadia and I had sex with Dershowitz. A. Palm Beach and the Caribbean with Jeffrey, myself, possibly Sarah Kellen if I remember correctly, there was another girl, I'm pretty sure it was Sarah.

A. I'll continue with the list here. Nadia Marcinkova I was not sent to her, but she was a part of it with Jeff Epstein, Marvin Minsky, Tom Pritzker.

Q. Who is Tom Pritzker?

A. He, I don't know exactly what he does, but I think he's some kind of academic.

Q. Did you have sex with him?

A. Yes.

Q. How many times?

A. Off the top of my head, just once.

A. I believe Tom was at Mexico.

LOUIS AUGUSTE BLANQUI

BLANQUISM & PUTSCHISM

Louis Auguste Blanqui (February 8, 1805 – January 1, 1881) was a French socialist and political activist, notable for his revolutionary theory of Blanquism. Blanqui was a member of the Carbonari society since 1824, and took an active part in most political conspiracies of this time. Blanqui's uncompromising radicalism, and his determination to enforce it by violence, brought him into conflict with every French government during his lifetime, and as a consequence, he spent half of his life in prison. As a socialist, Blanqui favored what he described as a "just redistribution of wealth." However, Blanquism is distinguished in various ways from other socialist currents of the day.

The sworn testimony of Janusz Banasiak, another of Epstein's house managers, from the case L.M. v. Jeffery Epstein and Sarah Kellen,[1] gives a fuller representation of how Defendant, and others in Epstein's sex-trafficking ring, used their accounts on Epstein's mindspring server:

Q. Okay. Were you aware that Mr. Epstein used a Citrix program to link various computers? Did you know that?

A. Yeah, I use Citrix too in my computer for exchanging e-mails and get through Internet.

Q. That's not something that you were, you were privy to? You weren't, you weren't in the loop of the sharing of information in the house in terms of the computers being connected through any server?

A. I don't really know what, how, how to answer your question because Citrix is for the whole organization to exchange e-mail between employees.

Q. All right. You used the term?

A. So, even my computer is connected to Citrix. I can receive mail and I can e-mail information to employee within organization. But I don't know if you can see to each computer what is going on on another computer.

***

Q. You have used the term organization, you can share within the organization. What do you -- just so I can understand what you're calling the organization, what do you mean by that word?

A. People employed by Jeffrey Epstein. There are a few groups of people, his office in New York and I guess --

***

Q. Okay. The other people mentioned as co-conspirators are Sarah Kellen, Adriana Ross, and Nadia Marcinkova. So we'll get to them in a minute but first just so we stay on the track of who was in the organization, is Sarah Kellen, Adriana Ross and Nadia Marcinkova all people that you would also consider within the organization?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So, we just added three more names to it. Who else would you consider, Ghislaine Maxwell?

Bust of Antinous from Patras, (National Archaeological Museum of Athens)

Antinous (also Antinoüs or Antinoös; Ancient Greek: Ἀντίνοος; 27 November, c. 111 – before 30 October 130[1]) was a Bithynian Greek youth and a favourite, or lover, of the Roman emperor Hadrian.[2] He was deified after his death, being worshiped in both the Greek East and Latin West, sometimes as a god (theos) and sometimes merely as a hero (heros).[3]

Antinous became associated with homosexuality in Western culture, appearing in the work of Oscar Wilde and Fernando Pessoa.

Guys, I don't know if it will add anything, but the picture used in the instagram is Antinous.

He was brought very young from Greece to the court of Emperor Hadrian (of Hadrian's Wall renown), and became Hadrian's favourite.
He was described at the time as one of the most beautiful boys in the world, and has inspired cults after his death.

I've seen mentions on the internet of MODERN "gay cults" as well, inspired by the pederasty kind of relationship Hadrian and Antinous had.

After Antinous death, Hadrian commissioned thousands of statues of him. So he's easy to recognize.

Makes sort of sense to use him as a profile picture. Few people would know about him, but those that do would know who he is and at least partly the story behind him.

  The boots on the ground guerilla tactics are absolutely insane for any high value target that shows their face in public in Huntsville right now. I really don't think I have ever seen it be this bad before, and that's really saying something. I had heard there were new outside units deployed in town since just before the conflict started. Omg, I believe it, I can see it. The active warfare is currently in Europe, but I have seen it shockwave into the local coffee shops and bars, like it's just ridiculous to show up in public anymore if you're on a certain type of target list, like just freaking stay home. I've never seen anything like it.

The Russians are smart enough to not try to befriend me directly, they are more of the silently tailing on the ground types. But there are plenty others that will try to befriend you directly.

- MAY 11 Amy Eskridge 12:28 AM

  That's the main thing I've seen recently. The social engineering attempts in public are through the damn roof at the moment. It's always been kinda like that around here, but it's never been quite this bad. It's almost absurd. A group of anywhere between 2-6 people will walk into a location, usually about 30 mins after I sit down. Then the whole group will take turns one at a time rotating through the empty seat next to me, repeatedly asking me the same questions over and over again. I deflect one, then the next one sits down. They even all use the same opening line between them all, as if they all read the same briefing materials. I conspirators Sarah Kellen, Nadia Marcinkova, and Epstein. However, it is Defendant's representation that this account does not presently have responsive documents and was merely used for "spam."

C. Defendant's Non-Disclosed Email Account

If the Court accepts Defendant's claim that she used neither the earthlink.net account nor the mindspring.org "spam" account to communicate, logic dictates that Defendant must have had another email account - one that she actually used - from 2000 - 2002. Despite the Court's orders that Defendant produce responsive documents from all her email accounts from 1999 to the present, Defendant has neither disclosed nor produced from the email account that she actually used to communicate from 2000-2002. This refusal violates this Court's orders. Ms. Giuffre issued requests to Defendant on October 27, 2015. Nearly a year later, after this Court has specifically ordered Defendant to produce her responsive email from all her accounts, Defendant has produced none from this account. Not only has Defendant failed to produce emails from the account she actually used from 1999-2002, and she has not even disclosed what account it is.

II. ARGUMENT

A. An Adverse Inference Instruction is Appropriate

An adverse inference instruction is appropriate regarding documents from the email account Defendant actually used from 1999-2002. In light of this clear and persistent pattern of recalcitrance, the Court should instruct the jury that it can draw an adverse inference that the Defendant has concealed relevant evidence. Even if Defendant were, at this late date, to run Ms. Giuffre's proposed search terms over the data from the email account she used from 1999 - 2002 (which she refuses to disclose), such a production would be both untimely and prejudicial. Fact discovery has closed. Numerous depositions have already been taken by Ms. Giuffre without the benefit of these documents. The window for authenticating the documents through depositions

CHINESE COMMUNISM

Under the current rule of Xi Jinping, China has developed a Social Credit System, a national digital registry, which enables the CCP to track individuals and businesses, and "evaluate them for trustworthiness." The Social Credit System rewards citizens for actions the CCP condones, and punishes them for doing anything the CCP deems undesirable. Since 2014, the CCP has embarked on a campaign of genocide against Uyghurs and other ethnic minorities, detaining more than 1,000,000 in internment camps. Under Xi Jinping's modern Communist regime, China has been branded by Amnesty International as the "World's Worst Executioner." China often holds mass rallies to announce people being sentenced to death in medieval-style public trials. Chinese prosecutors litigating execution cases have a conviction rate of 99%, and doom thousands of political prisoners to execution every year.

Funding for Wellington House was provided by the British Royal Family, and later by the Rothschild banking family (to whom Lord Northcliffe was related through marriage), the Milner Group of Lord Alfred Milner, and Rockefeller family trusts.

PHILADELPHES

One of the most important political secret societies of the nineteenth century, the Philadelphes, began in 1797 as a student literary club in eastern France. It utilized rituals modeled on other fraternal secret societies, mainly Freemasonry. The Philadelphes took on a more political focus after Napoleon Bonaparte seized power in France in 1799. Two assassination attempts on Napoleon are tied to the organization. The Philadelphes also made several attempts to prepare for a full-scale rebellion against Napoleon, but none of them went very far.

IF THE SITUATION WAS HOPELESS THEIR PROPAGANDA WOULD BE UNNECESSARY

d. Epstein's flight logs appeared to be disguising the identity of all of the passengers on Epstein's plane by using such notations as "one female."

e. A very well-regarded Florida lawyer (Bob Josefsberg), who was selected by the U.S. Government to represent the victims of Epstein's sexual abuse, had found Ms. Giuffre to be credible and in 2009 filed a civil complaint for her alleging not only sex abuse by Epstein but also by "academicians" -- a group into which Dershowitz fell;

f. Shortly after Josefsberg filed the complaint for Ms. Giuffre alleging "academicians" had abuse her, one of Josefsberg's partners, Ms. Ezell, began conducting depositions in Epstein-related cases asking about Dershowitz's awareness of sexual abuse;

g. Dershowitz showed up on flight logs for Epstein's private jet, including a flight with an (apparently young) woman named "Tatiana" who did not appear to serve any business purpose for Epstein;

h. When asked about Dershowitz, Epstein took the Fifth rather than indicate that Dershowitz was not involved in any criminal activities – a fact from which an obvious adverse inference could be drawn that Dershowitz was, indeed, involved in Epstein's crimes;

i. In moving down from the top of Epstein's criminal conspiracy to the next echelon, three women – Sarah Kellen, Adrianna Mucinska, and Nadia Marcinkova – all took the Fifth when asked about Dershowitz's awareness of Epstein's sexual abuse of underage girls or whether Dershowitz was involved in massages with young girls;

Yeah, absolutely - I believe 100% that society will collapse from climate change within 20 years

In the wake of this specific deposition testimony from Ms. Sjoberg, during her own recent deposition, Defendant continued to refuse to testify about Ms. Sjoberg's massages and sexual activity with Epstein:

> Q. Did Mr. Epstein pay Johanna for the massages that she gave Mr. Epstein?
>
> Mr. Pagliuca: You just asked this question, and I told her not to answer. I will tell her not to answer again for the same reasons.
>
> Q. Do you know how much Mr. Epstein paid Johanna to give massages?
>
> Mr. Pagliuca: Same instruction to the witness. Why do you believe this is within the scope of the court's order?
>
> Mr. Boies: Because of the court's reference to massages, and because I think how much a girl who was hired to answer the phone was paid to give a "massage" goes to whether there actually was or was not sexual activity involved.
>
> Mr. Pagiluca: The witness has testified there wasn't.
>
> Mr. Boies: Perhaps it will surprise you, I think it should not, that I do not believe in my deposition I need to simply accept her characterization without cross-examination. Now that's something the judge can decide, but a question as to how much this young girl was being paid for a "massage," I think goes directly to the issue of sexual activity.

See Schultz Decl. at Composite Exhibit 7, Excerpts from July 22, 2016 Deposition of Ghislaine Maxwell at pg. 82:25-84:6.

Additionally, Defendant refused to answer questions concerning the sexual abuse involving herself, Mr. Epstein, and Annie and Maria Farmer, described in a Vanity Fair article:

> "What do you have on the girls?" [Epstein] would ask the question over and over again. What I had "on the girls" were some remarkably brave first-person accounts. Three on-the-record stories from a family: a mother and her daughters [Maria Farmer, Annie Farmer, and their mother] who came from Phoenix. The oldest daughter, an artist whose character was vouchsafed to me by several sources, including the artist Eric Fischl, had told me, weeping as she sat in my living room, of how Epstein had attempted to seduce both her and, separately, her younger sister, then only 16. He'd gotten to them because of his money. He promised the older sister patronage of her art work; he'd promised the younger funding for a trip abroad that would give her the work experience she needed on her resume for a place at an Ivy League university, which she desperately wanted - and would win. The girls' mother told me by phone that she had thought her daughters would

CULTURAL MARXISM & THE FRANKFURT SCHOOL

Gramsci argued that capitalist power through cultural hegemony needed to be challenged by building a Socialist counter-hegemony. To counter the notion that bourgeois values represented natural or normal values for society, Gramsci suggested that the working class could not dominate purely through force and coercion, but rather it needed to infiltrate existing culture, and to develop a Socialist counter-culture of their own. Gramsci felt that Socialists could do this by exerting intellectual leadership, and making alliances with a variety of societal forces, thus creating a nexus of institutions, social relations, and ideas.

NAZIS ON BECOMING "GOD":
A "NEW ORDER" OF MASTERS AND SLAVES

"We are the Master Race and must govern hard but just. I will draw the very last out of this country. I did not come to spread bliss. The population must work, work, and work again. We definitely did not come here to give out manna. We have come here to create the basis for victory. We are a master race, which must remember that the lowliest German worker is racially and biologically a thousand times more valuable than the population here."

JOSEPH GOEBBELS

Goebbels converted May 1st from a workers' rights holiday into a day celebrating the Nazi Party. May 1st is Beltane (also called Walpurgisnacht) the highest Sabbat (holy day) of the occult solar calendar. He also organized and spoke at many book-burning ceremonies, where huge crowds of Nazis gathered to burn books which were viewed as being subversive, or representing ideologies that were opposed to Nazism. This proved an effective information control technique within Nazi Germany. If they could never read opposing views, most Germans could never come out of the mindset programmed into them by Nazi propagandists.

What is an Artificial Person?

(artificial person; juristic person; legal entity; legal personality; person; ens legis; corporation; strawman)

STRAW MAN. A "front"; a third party who is put up in name only to take part in a transaction. Nominal party to a transaction; one who acts as an agent for another for the purpose of taking title to real property and executing whatever documents and instruments the principal may direct respecting the property. Person who purchases property, or to accomplish some purpose otherwise not allowed. - Black's Law Dictionary, 6th Edition, p. 1421

THE STATE and its public departments and Public Servants, are "artificial persons" created by the People for their common benefit. Each Public Servant of the People, employed by and for the People, "acts" as an "artificial person" in a "public capacity" denoted by their fictional job title while "on duty". When "off duty" they return to their "private capacity" denoted by their sovereign title (Given name).

CORPORATIONS are "artificial persons" created (registered) by government legislation as franchises that are presumed to provide a benefit to the State. All corporations, and all the legal fiction entities that are created by the State, are governed by prescribed statutory legislation relating to their limited purpose in society.

STRAWMEN are "artificial persons", each created as a third-party in a contract through which a man or woman consents to become fully liable as an "accommodation party" for an "accommodated party". This "strawman" has been "incorporated" into the State as a "corporation/trust" with a "tradename" (Given name + Family name) to serve as a "transmitting utility" providing the People's labour and property as "surety" for the national debt.

"[Very] soon, every American will be required to register their biological property in a National system designed to keep track of the people and that will operate under the ancient system of pledging. By such methodology, we can compel people to submit to our agenda, which will affect our security as a chargeback for our fiat paper currency. Every American will be forced to register or suffer not being able to work and earn a living. They will be our chattel, and we will hold the security interest over them forever, by operation of the law merchant under the scheme of secured transactions. Americans, by unknowingly or unwittingly delivering the bills of lading [Birth Certificate] to us will be rendered bankrupt and insolvent, forever to remain economic slaves through taxation, secured by their pledges. They will be stripped of their rights and given a commercial value designed to make us a profit and they will be none the wiser, for not one man in a million could ever figure our plans and, if by accident one or two would figure it out, we have in our arsenal plausible deniability. After all, this is the only logical way to fund government, by floating liens and debt to the registrants in the form of benefits and privileges. This will inevitably reap to us huge profits beyond our wildest expectations and leave every American a contributor to this fraud which we will call "Social Insurance." Without realizing it, every American will insure us for any loss we may incur and in this manner; every American will unknowingly be our servant, however begrudgingly. The people will become helpless and without any hope for their redemption and, we will employ the high office of the President of our dummy corporation to foment this plot against America." [Colonel Edward Mandell House to Woodrow Wilson (President 1913-1921)] of Egypt (C); when their resolved to abolish it, by his prudent remonstrances, prevailed on the Egyptians to lay it aside: but the river, unfortunately, did not rise that year to the accustomed height. The year following it was still worse; so that the people, apprehending a famine, began to murmur: whereupon the governor led all the inhabitants of the city, Turks, Jews, and Christians, to a mountain on the east of al Kâhira; and, after a pathetic exhortation, he obliged all that were present to offer up their prayers to God, for the obtaining his mercy; in which exercise they passed all the rest of that day, and the following night. The next morning, before day, some women came, with great joy, to acquaint the governor, that the Nile had risen in the night no less than twelve pikes; whereupon nothing was heard but the praises of God, and acclamations of the people. Coming down from the mountain, they erected an altar at the mouth of the canal, ten feet high, whereon they threw a great quantity of flowers, and a branch of olive; which last, as they say, took root there, as a more agreeable offering to God than the former innocent victim: they continue still to erect such an altar every year; and when they break down the dam, and the water enters the Khalij, it carries down the altar and flowers with it. The year when this event happened, the Nile rose two pikes higher than usual, and this extraordinary rise was attended with extraordinary plenty; since which time, a final stop being put to the above-mentioned inhuman practice, whenever the waters fail of their accustomed height, they have recourse to prayers on the same mountain[y].

Of the Nilometers.

THAT they may the better judge of the daily increase of the water, and the consequent plenty or scarcity of the ensuing year, the gradual rise of the river is very exactly measured, either by wells sunk, or pillars erected and divided for that purpose. There was one of the former, we are told, on the bank of the Nile, in the upper Egypt,

(C) It seems very strange, that such a practice should be suffered, not only during the time Egypt was subject to the Christian emperors of Constantinople, but while the Arabs were masters of it. Amosis, one of the antient Egyptian kings, is said to have abolished the human sacrifices offered to Juno, as will be observed hereafter; and it might be reasonably supposed, he also put a stop to those offered to the Nile.

near

near Syene[z]; and one of the latter was set up in Memphis[a]. A very antient column, which served for the same use, is also yet to be seen in the castle of Old Kâhira, said to be erected in the time of the emperor Heraclius. The present Nilometer (D), or Mikyâs, as the Arabs call it, is in the same castle; it is a large square reservoir, round which runs an handsome gallery, sustained by twelve marble pillars, which form arches, with a balustrade for the convenience of those who look into the water. In the midst of this bason, through which passes a canal drawn from the Nile, is an octagonal pillar, of white marble, divided into twenty-two equal parts; the first is again divided into twenty-four inches, but the second is not; however, the others are all marked to the top of the column. They are very careful, during the time of the inundation, to observe the height of the water by the measure, and every day proclaim it in the city. This work is so exactly finished, and nicely levelled, that the water in the reservoir is neither higher nor lower than that in the river[b].

Of the sphinxes.

As these Nilometers were invented to shew the height to which the waters rose, the sphinxes were destined to shew at what time of the year the watets began to rise. They were a symbolic representation or figure, with the head of a woman, and the body of a lion, signifying, that the Nile began to swell in the months of July and August, when the sun passes through the signs of Leo and Virgo[c]. There are several of these sphinxes still to be seen; one in [b] LUCAS, ubi sup. p. 313, 321, &c.

[c] Ibid. p. 323.

(D) This Nilometer is different from that built in an island of the Nile, between Jizâh and al Fossât, by Asâmah ebn Yazîd (3), collector of the tribute in Egypt, in the reign of the khalifah Soleymân ebn Abd'almalek. This island, on account of its pleasant situation, and the several sorts of fruit-trees with which it is planted, is greatly celebrated by the oriental writers, and called al Rawdat, or, the garden. Some years after the above-mentioned Nilometer had been built, the khalifah al Mâmûn ordered it to be pulled down, on account of a defect discovered in it, and a new one to be built in its room; which was at last finished, in a magnificent manner, by al Motawakkel (4). The eastern histories mention several other structures of this sort, built or repaired by the khalifahs, while masters of Egypt.

NEO-FEUDALISM

"YOU'LL OWN NOTHING, AND YOU'LL BE HAPPY."

Yuval Noah Harari

Klaus Schwab

There is perhaps no better modern example of the Neo-Fascist / Neo-Communist / Neo-Feudalist model of Human Slavery than the agenda of the World Economic Forum. Led by Dark Occultists and Social Engineers Klaus Schwab and Yuval Noah Harari, the WEF's motto, before being removed from their website due to a preponderance of negative criticism, was literally the Neo-Feudal dystopian creed: "You'll own nothing, and you'll be happy." Since self-ownership and property rights are the inherent foundation of Natural Law (the Moral Law of the Universe), if the Right to own Property is removed from human beings, ALL RIGHTS ARE REMOVED FROM HUMAN BEINGS as well.

SOVIET COMMUNISM

As a result of Stalin's Five-Year Plans, Russia underwent agricultural collectivization and rapid industrialization, creating a centralized command economy. Severe disruptions to food production contributed to widespread famine from 1930 to 1933, which killed millions. To eradicate accused "enemies of the working class," Stalin instituted a political persecution and killing campaign to remove his actual and perceived opponents, known as The Great Purge. During The Great Purge, over a million political opponents of Stalin's system were imprisoned, largely in the Gulag system of prisons and forced labour camps, and at least 700,000 were executed between 1934 and 1939. By 1937, Stalin had acquired absolute control over the Communist Party and government. Stalin's Communist regime was a text-book example of totalitarianism, and was driven by repression, ethnic cleansing, censorship, famine, wide-scale deportation, and political executions that killed tens of millions of people.

FACT: According to the U.S. Department of State, Human Trafficking is the fastest growing criminal industry in the world, second only to drug trafficking. This modern-day slavery generates over $150 billion annually for organized crime.

Innocents at Risk is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit founded to fight child exploitation and human trafficking. Our mission is to educate citizens about the grave issue of global and local human trafficking. We are dedicated to protecting children from all forms of abuse, and work to end child exploitation and child trafficking everywhere.

Human Trafficking is a $150 billion industry worldwide, and it is happening throughout the world in every country and across the United States in every major city and small town. According to the Department of State, 2 million women and children are victims of human trafficking every year. In the United States, 300 thousand children are forced into child prostitution and child pornography each year. In Washington DC alone, trafficking innocent children is a $100 million industry.

A. Because you know, I know Jeffrey.

Maxwell Dep. Tr. at 271:18-22 (April 22, 2016) (McCawley Decl. at Exhibit 2).

Yet, Maxwell now wants this court to believe that she has no responsive communications with [redacted] relevant to this case.

C. Defendant's Failures to Search All Email Accounts

Perhaps part of the reason that Defendant has failed to produce responsive document is that still refusing to collect data from all of her email accounts. In particular, Defendant has not collected data from her [redacted] account nor produced relevant documents from her [redacted] account. Both email accounts are listed as part of Defendant's contact information gathered by the police from Epstein's home, and turned over to the Palm Beach County State Attorney as part of the investigation and prosecution of Epstein:

Ms. Ghislaine Maxwell Email [redacted]

See (DE 280-2), Palm Beach County State Attorney's Office, Public Records Request No.: 16-268, Disc 7 at p. 2305 (GIUFFRE007843).

i. The mindspring.com Account

As evidenced from the police collection above, [redacted], was an email address Defendant used while she was with Epstein. Id. In her filing with this Court, Defendant represented that this was merely a "spam" account "to use when registering for retail sales notifications and the like," and that it contains no relevant documents. Br. at pg. 8. Of course, if she wasn't using the [redacted] or the [redacted], what email address was Defendant using while she was with Epstein, and why hasn't that account been disclosed and searched? This Court should order Defendant to disclose all email accounts she has used from 1999 to the present.

SABBATEAN FRANKISM

Jacob Frank

Frank advocated for the rejection of all moral, religious and social norms, and asserted that the most important obligation of every person was the transgression of every moral boundary. Frank may have developed his distorted religious views from a degraded form of Gnosticism, a 1st-century religious belief wherein there was a "true God" whose existence was hidden by a "false God," the Demiurge. The "true God" could allegedly be revealed only through a total destruction of the social and religious structures created by the "false God." For Frank, the very distinction between good and evil may have been seen as a product of a world governed by this Gnostic "false God."

Our People & Partners

Financial Information & Donor Privacy Policy

Mission Statement

Beyond Borders helps people build movements to liberate themselves from oppression and isolation. In Haiti and the United States, we are bringing people together for just and lasting change.

We support movements in Haiti to:

- End child slavery,
- Guarantee universal access to education,
- End violence against women and girls, and
- Replace systems that oppress the poor with systems that support dignified work and sustainable livelihoods.

Our Vision

We see in Haiti, the seed for a new world, a world where,

- People overcome great challenges by learning to question, dream, and act together,
- Women and men find more power by balancing power equally,
- Families and communities thrive on foundations of trust and mutual respect,
- Diversity is seen as a sign of strength,
- All children grow up surrounded by people who love, nurture, and educate them,
- We all find deeper meaning in our lives by coming to value truth over comfort, sharing over having, and justice over personal gain.

Our Identity

Beyond Borders was founded in response to the challenge of Jesus' words and life of radical love. In all we do we attempt to measure our success by this standard. We welcome all, regardless of their faith, who will join us in supporting these movements for liberation. We find strength and wisdom in the dialogue that diversity allows.

We make a real difference in Haiti because of the approach we take. We follow the Haitian proverb that says, "The rock in the water doesn't understand the misery of the rock in the sun." We work hand-in-hand with the Haitian people, understanding that they know how to best address the issues they face. We provide them with the resources they need to build grassroots, community-based movements that lead to sustainable, positive change.

We invite you to learn more about our work, the difference we're making, and how you can get involved. You may think that the needs are too great, but you are more powerful than you know. Even the smallest act can make a big difference. We're looking forward to working with you!

"According to my reporting, the week of April 13th, the DynCorp regional commander from Konduz, Flint Chambers, allowed his men to hire a 15-year-old boy dancer to do tribal dances at a DynCorp party on the training site.

Some 15 or so DynCorp employees in attendance pulled out a single chair and had the boy do mock lap dances. This was captured on video. The video shows DynCorp employees putting dollar bills in the boy's waistband, just as they would a stripper's garter. The revelry lasted about 45 minutes.

No sex took place.

The video was leaked to Kabul INL program manager, Marissa Martin. INL, Washington ordered INL Kabul to replace the entire DynCorp chain of command.

The video was leaked by Mike Gonzalez to another DynCorp employee who emailed the video to Martin. Flint Chambers retaliated against Mike by getting in his face, pushing him to the ground in front of the DynCorp security building in Kabul.

Chambers was fired, along with Dean Deines, Stan Knee and Dmitri Kelly.

ORDER FOLLOWERS

THOSE WHO ARE MOST CULPABLE FOR THE CREATION OF TOTALITARIAN REGIMES

"Following Orders" means doing what you are told to do, without judging for yourself whether or not the action you are being ordered to carry out is morally Right or Wrong. If an individual is following orders, it is a complete impossibility for that individual to be exercising Conscience, since – by definition – exercising Conscience means that one is willfully choosing for themselves Right Action over Wrong Action.

THE TAVISTOCK INSTITUTE
& LENIN'S JOURNEY THROUGH EUROPE

Walter Lippmann

American journalist Walter Lippmann and psychologist Edward Bernays were also prominent members of Wellington House. Bernays, the nephew of psychologist Sigmund Freud and author of the books Propaganda, Crystalizing Public Opinion, and Public Relations, pioneered the use of psychology and other social sciences to shape and form public opinion so that the public thought such manufactured opinions were their own. Bernays wrote: "If we understand the mechanism and motives of the group mind, it is now possible to control and regiment the masses according to our will without them knowing it." He called this technique "engineering consent." One of his best-known techniques of achieving this goal was the indirect use of what he called "third-party authorities" to shape desired opinions. He stated: "If you can influence the leaders, either with or without their conscious cooperation, you automatically influence the group which they sway."

NAZI EUGENICS

THE KAISER WILHELM INSTITUTE

Member of the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute Eugen Fischer was influential with the Nazis early in their rise to power in Germany. In 1921, he and Fritz Lenz published a two-volume book called Principles of Human Heredity and Race Hygiene, which Adolf Hitler read while incarcerated in 1923, and used its ideas in Mein Kampf. Fischer's work heavily influenced German colonial legislation and provided "scientific" support for the Nazi's racial Nuremberg Laws. In 1937 and 1938, Fischer and his colleagues analyzed 600 children in Nazi Germany who were descendants of French-African soldiers. These children, which the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute called the "Rhineland Bastards," were classified as "hereditarily unfit" and subsequently subjected to sterilization.

SUBLIME PERFECT MASTERS

The Sublime Perfect Masters served primarily as a coordinating body for liberal secret societies across Europe, and at its height in 1820, it had members in Spain, France, Belgium, Italy, Germany, Denmark, and Switzerland. Along with the Carbonari, it played a significant role in the wave of rebellions that swept Europe in 1820 and 1821. In the aftermath of these risings, informers leaked details of the order's activities to police in several countries. As a result, Phillipe Buonarroti was exiled from Geneva.

NAZI EUGENICS

Eugenics Building
Topeka, Kansas, 1929

Eugenics research in Germany before and during the Nazi period was similar to that in the United States, particularly the state of California. The eugenics movement was already well established in the United States since the early 1900s, after which it was spread to Germany by California eugenicists, who began producing literature promoting eugenics and sending it overseas to German scientists and medical professionals. By 1933, California had subjected more people to involuntary sterilization than all other U.S. states combined. The forced sterilization program engineered by the Nazis was heavily inspired by California's eugenics programs.

Agorist communities

- Many things in daily life are market transactions: Employment, rentals, healthcare, shopping, hobbies, etc.
- Markets are also communities: Colleagues, neighbors, suppliers, regular customers.
- Local and global agorist communities can help buyers & sellers to meet each other and build a parallel economy free from state control.
- Agorism doesn't require "mass adoption" or integration with the mainstream white market. If you find one agorist employer, one landlord & one grocery store, that's enough.

Dear James:

Thank you for lending your time and extraordinary talent to participate in the "Cooking with Fratelli Podesta" fundraiser for my campaign for president hosted by Tony and John Podesta. I heard the evening was a smashing success, and am grateful to you for everything you did to make it possible.

I'm running for president because everyday Americans and their families need a champion, and I want to be that champion. I want to help all people fulfill their potential and not only get ahead, but stay ahead. I am energized by the support and good wishes I have received on the trail, and am looking forward to continuing the conversation about our future and to building an inclusive, nationwide grassroots campaign that will earn every vote to victory.

Thank you for standing with me in this fight, and please know that I am cheering you on for continued success. Onward!

With warm regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

there is a list of the writings ascribed to Orpheus, of which the following are the principal.

1. Ἱεροὶ λόγοι (sacred legends), a complete system of Orphic theology, in twenty-four books; it is ascribed to Cercops and Diognetus, and is probably the production of several authors.

2. Τελεταί (religious rites, or mysteries), directions for worshipping and appeasing the Gods; probably by Onomacritus.

3. Χρήσμοι (prophecies). Similar works were ascribed to Musæus.

4. Βάκχικα, probably stories of Bacchus and his mysteries; ascribed to Arignotes, a pupil or daughter of Pythagoras.

5. Ἡ ἐς Ἅιδου καράβασις (the descent to Hades), a poem of great antiquity, ascribed, among other authors, to Cercops.

6. Hymns, also of high antiquity. In the time of Plato they were recited by rhapsodists at the public games. Onomacritus appears to have been the author of many of them.

7. Of Stones, their nature, and their powers against serpents and poisons, and for appeasing the anger of the gods.

8. Argonautica, a poem on the voyage of the Argonauts to Colchis; probably by Onomacritus; at least by some one not earlier than Homer.

9. Fragments, which have been carefully collected by Gesner out of Platonic and Christian writers. Most of them are of a later date than the Christian æra.

The following are the principal editions of the Orphic poems: 'Orphei Argonautica, Hymni, et de Lapidibus,' Gr., in H. Stephens's 'Poetæ Græci Principes Heroici Carminis,' 1566, fol.; Orphei Argonautica, Hymni, et de Lapidibus, curante A. C. Eschenbachio, cum not. erudit.,' Utrecht, 1689; 'Ὀρφέως ἅπαντα, 'Orphei Arg., Hym., de Lapid., et Fragmenta, cum notis Stephani et Eschenbachii, ex recens. et cum not. J. M. Gesneri,' Lips., 1764; 'Orphica,' by Schaeffer, Lips., 1818; ditto, by Hermann, Lips., 1805; 'Argonautica,' by Schneider, Jena, 1803.

ORPIMENT. [ARSENIC.]

ORPINE is a succulent herbaceous plant, the Sedum Telephium of botanists, found abundantly in some parts of England in woods and thickets. It has oval serrated leaves, erect stems, and close carpels of purple flowers; and has some reputation for its astringency: the root and stem, boiled in milk, are a popular remedy for diarrhœa.

ORRERY. There are four planetary machines to which distinct names have been given, corresponding to the phenomena they are intended to exhibit, and which, when combined so as to derive their motions from a common origin, constitute what is now generally understood by an orrery. These machines are the Planetarium, Tellurian, Lunarian, and Satellite machine. The planetarium is a mechanical representation of the orbital motions of the planets about the sun, either in circles or ellipses, and with angular velocities either uniform or variable, according to the quality of the instrument. The tellurian and lunarian, when connected in their improved form, exhibit the motion of the moon about the earth and that of the earth about the sun, and the principal phenomena which accompany the changes in their relative positions, such as the succession of day and night and the variable length of both according to the season of the year, the eclipses of the sun and moon, the variations in the moon's latitude, velocity, and distance from the earth, the progressive motion of her apogee, and the retrogradation of her nodes, &c. The satellite machine is chiefly intended to represent the motions of Jupiter's satellites about their primary, combined with the motions of the latter about the sun. Instead of attempting a particular description of any one of these machines, which could only be rendered intelligible by reference to many diagrams, while the object would be much better attained by a simple inspection of the machine itself, we shall confine ourselves to a brief notice of their history and to the explanation of the general principles upon which the construction of modern planetary machines depends, referring our readers for more ample information to the article 'Planetary Machines' in Brewster's Cyclopædia, contributed by the Rev. W. Pearson, formerly Treasurer of the Astronomical Society.

The origin of the term 'orrery' is thus given by Mr Desaguliers, in his 'Course of Experimental Philosophy,' 4to., London, 1734, i., p. 431. After stating his belief that Mr. George Graham, about the year 1700, first invented a movement for exhibiting the motion of the earth about the sun at the same time that the moon revolved round the earth, he remarks, 'This machine being in the hands of an instrument-maker to be sent with some of his own instruments to Prince Eugene, he copied it, and made the first for the late Earl of Orrery, and then several others with additions of his own. Sir Richard Steele, who knew nothing of Mr. Graham's machine, in one of his lucubrations, thinking to do justice to the first encourager, as well as to the inventor, of such a curious instrument, called it an orrery, and gave Mr. J. Rowley the praise due to Mr. Graham.'

Planetary machines were in use at a very remote period, and appear to have consisted for many centuries of moveable spheres having the earth in their centre: thus we read of the Chinese spheres said to have been made some 2000 years before the Christian æra, and more recently of the spheres of Archimedes and Posidonius, concerning which Cicero, speaking of the Epicurean philosophy, has the following remarkable passage:—

'If the sphere, lately made by our friend Posidonius, which marks the course of the sun and moon and the five wandering stars, were to be transported into Scythia or Britain, who, even in those barbarous countries, would doubt whether reason had presided over its construction? Yet these people (the Epicureans) doubt whether the universe, whence all things arise and are made, is not the effect of chance or of some necessity rather than of reason and a divine mind; and they regard Archimedes as more deserving of praise in imitating the changes of the sphere than nature in producing them.' (De Nat. Deor., lib. ii., cap. 34 and 35.)

The earliest machine which represented the Ptolemaic system may possibly have been that possessed by Chromatus, in the construction of which no less than 200 pounds weight of gold are said to have been used. This system continued to be represented in all planetary machines till about fifteen years after the death of Copernicus, when the last of that kind of any note was erected in the library of the Pantheon at Paris by Oronce Finée.

In the latter part of the seventeenth century Huyghens and Roemer employed themselves in the construction of planetary machines in conformity with the Copernican doctrine. The one invented by Huyghens, who first introduced a systematic method of calculating with precision the necessary wheel-work for these machines, received from its author the name of 'the Automaton.' It derived its motion from a spring regulated by a balance, the pendulum not having been then introduced as a regulating agent, and served for many years as a pattern in the construction of orreries, as did the instrument of Roemer, called by him a Planetarium, in the construction of machines intended chiefly to exhibit the orbital motions of the planets. Roemer had also invented a satellite machine prior to the year 1679, the original or a copy of which was presented by him in that year to the English astronomer Flamsteed. Both his machines are described in his 'Basis Astronomiæ,' printed in 1735. The last machine we shall mention is the Planetarium of the Royal Institution of London, constructed about the year 1801, shortly after Dr. Garnett, having previously removed his apparatus elsewhere, discontinued his astronomical lectures at that institution. For a description of this machine, the plan of which was suggested by Dr. Young and the Rev. W. Pearson, we must again refer to the paper 'On Planetary Machines,' by the latter gentleman.

The chief part of every orrery is the mechanism composing the planetarium, by means of which the paths of the planets about the sun and their relative periodic times are exhibited with more or less approach to truth; and this mechanism, with the method of computing it, being once understood, it will be easy to extend the same principles to the more complex cases in which the satellites revolve about their primaries at the same time that the latter rotate upon their axes and revolve about the sun, as well as to those in which the parallelism of the planets' axes and the changes in the positions of their orbits, &c. are sought to be represented. For this reason we shall confine ourselves to the method of computing the wheel-work, which will give the relative periods with any required degree of accuracy, and to the explanation of a very ingenious contrivance by means of which a true elliptic orbit may be produced. Before how-

Importantly, Defendant has never denied using an email account for communication from 1999-2009, and the facts and circumstances show that it is exceedingly unlikely that Defendant did not use an email account to communicate those years.[1]

For example, according to United States Department of Commerce, "eighty-eight percent of adult Internet users sent or received e-mail" in 2000. See Eric C. Newburger, "Home Computers and Internet Use in the United States: August 2000," U.S. DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE, ECONOMICS AND STATISTICS ADMINISTRATION, U.S. CENSUS BUREAU, September 2001. Additionally, the Pew Research Center published findings that certain demographics have higher internet usage, including many demographics to which Defendant belongs. For example, higher rates of internet usage are found among younger adults (Defendant was 38 in 1999); those with college educations (Defendant has a master's degree); those in households earning more than $75,000 (Defendant was in a household headed by a billionaire during that time, and that household had its own private email server and account); whites or English-speaking Asian-Americans (Defendant is white); and those who live in urban areas (Defendant lived in Palm Beach and Manhattan). See Andres Perrin and Maeve Duggan, 'Americans' Internet Access: 2000-2015," PEW RESEARCH CENTER, June 26, 2015.

Additionally, her boyfriend, Jeffrey Epstein, with whom she shared a household from 1999-2002 (and other years), implemented an entire, private email system to communicate with his household and employees, including Defendant. Accordingly, given Defendant's extraordinary economic resources, her high-level social connections, and her elaborate residential email/internet configuration she had during that time, it is extraordinarily unlikely that she would not employ an almost ubiquitous communication tool, nor has she denied it.

[1] On Friday, September 23, 2016, counsel for Ms. Giuffre sent a letter to Defendant inquiring about the undisclosed account. As of the date of this motion, Defendant has made no response.

GUIDO VON LIST
WOTANISM & ARMANISM

List generally saw the world in which he was living as one of degeneration. Adopting a millenarianist perspective, he believed in the imminent defeat of this enemy and the establishment of a better future for the Aryo-Germanic race. For List, this better future would be intricately connected to the ancient past, reflecting his belief in the cyclical nature of time, something which he had adopted both from his reading of Norse mythology and from Theosophy.

GRACCHUS BABEUF

Gracchus Babeuf (November 23, 1760 – May 27, 1797), was a French proto-communist, revolutionary, and journalist of the French Revolutionary period. His newspaper, The Tribune of the People, was best known for its advocacy for the poor and calling for a popular revolt against the Directory, the government of France at the time. Babeuf was a leading advocate for Socialism and the abolition of private property. In spite of the efforts of his Jacobin friends to save him, Babeuf was executed for his role in the failed coup d'état known as the Conspiracy of the Equals of May 1796.

PHILIPPE BUONARROTI

In 1830, Buonarroti moved to Paris. In 1832, he created a new international secret society called Reformed Carbonarism, which was based on the Carbonari. He expanded this society into the Universal Democratic Carbonarism in 1833. Buonarroti died in Paris in 1837. Louis Auguste Blanqui learned many of his insurrectionary skills and tactics from Buonarroti. He also inspired Mikhail Bakunin, who was heavily influenced by Buonarroti revolutionary practices, and praised him as "the greatest conspirator of his age."

NAZI "CHRISTMAS"

Nazi ideologists claimed that the Christian elements of the holiday had been superimposed upon ancient Germanic traditions. They argued that Christmas originally had nothing to do with the birth of Jesus, but instead celebrated the Winter Solstice and the "Rebirth of the Sun." They claimed that the Swastika was an ancient symbol of the big dipper in its four positions during the equinoxes and solstices, and that the figure of Santa Claus was a Christian re-invention of the Germanic god Wotan (the Norse god Odin). Nazi Yule Festival posters were made to depict Odin as the "Solstice Man," riding a white horse, sporting a thick grey beard, wearing a slouch hat, and carrying a sack full of gifts.

THEOSOPHY & THE TEACHINGS OF HELENA PETROVNA BLAVATSKY

Blavatsky also taught that humanity has had many past incarnations, or variations on Earth, which she called "Root Races." These were never meant to be understood as genetic races, but rather as different types of civilizations that attained different levels of consciousness. Blavatsky called the Root Race which she claimed was destined to transcend materialist darkness and ascend into the light of knowledge the "Aryan" Race. The root of the word Aryan is ari, whose meaning in various languages translates to "best, superior, god-like, sun-like, light, or enlightened." In this context, "Aryan" referred to an "enlightened people," not those with light skin, hair and eyes. The Nazis and their predecessors distorted it's original meaning into their idea of a "genetically superior race."

SUBLIME PERFECT MASTERS

The Sublime Perfect Masters followed the older 18th century pattern of secret societies and drew heavily on the symbolism and practices of Freemasonry. It worked through a three-degree system of Apprentice, Sublime Elect, and Aréopagus (Guiding Body). Above these degrees was a central coordinating body, the Grand Firmament, whose existence was kept secret from everyone outside the Aréopagus. Members learned very little about the workings of the society on their admission, and only those of proven loyalty were advanced through the degree system. Such a system displays close alignment to the Bavarian Illuminati. Buonarroti probably borrowed it from his earlier experience in an Illuminati-controlled Masonic Lodge.

THEOSOPHY & THE TEACHINGS OF HELENA PETROVNA BLAVATSKY

Theosophy (from the Greek nouns θεος [theos]: "God; divinity" and σοφος [sophos]: "wisdom," thus literally "Divine Wisdom") is a system of esoteric philosophy which investigates and seeks direct knowledge of the mysteries of being and nature. Although it is an ancient philosophy, Theosophy was popularized by a 19th century occultist named Helena Petrovna Blavatsky, who founded the Theosophical Society and wrote many famous works of occult teaching. The Theosophical Society's mantra is "There Is No Religion Higher Than Truth."

15 those girls who, those girls who would help Jeffrey in 16 regard to the investigation would be compensated and 17 those who would not or who would hurt him in the 18 investigation would be dealt with?
19 MR. REINHART: Objection to the form, lack of

(U) Symbols and Logos Used by Pedophiles to Identify Sexual Preferences

(U//FOUO) This intelligence bulletin addresses Crimes Against Children Standing Intelligence Requirements Set contained in Q-FBI-2200-005-06, HRWC CAC-VI.A.5.

(U//LES) Pedophiles, to include those who sexually abuse children as well as those who produce, distribute, and trade child pornography, are using various types of identification logos or symbols to recognize one another and distinguish their sexual preferences. To specifically indicate the pedophile's gender preference, members of pedophilic organizations encourage the use of descriptions such as "boylove", "girllove", and "childlove."[1] These symbols have been etched into rings and formed into pendants, and have also been found imprinted on coins.

(U) The BoyLover logo (BLogo) is a small blue spiral-shaped triangle surrounded by a larger triangle, whereby the small triangle represents a small boy and the larger triangle represents an adult man.[2] A variation of the BLogo is the Little Boy Lover logo (LBLogo), which also embodies a small spiral-shaped triangle within a larger triangle; however, the corners of the LBLogo are rounded to resemble a scribbling by a young child.[3] Images of the BLogo and LBLogo symbols are depicted below.

(U//LES) FBI investigations in several cities have uncovered several symbols used by pedophiles to proclaim their attraction to children. After a seizure of a subject's computer in connection with an Innocent Images case in the Jacksonville Division, a Computer Analysis Response Team forensic examiner came across an unfamiliar symbol that was integrated into a Web site banner named "ATBOYS.COM, where the "A" in "ATBOYS" was actually the BoyLove symbol and written as follows: ATBOYS.com. It was further determined that "ATBOYS" is an acronym for Attracted To Boys.[5] These pedophilia symbols also appear on Web sites such as one of the banners advertised on www.boylover.net, shown below.[6]

ALFRED ROSENBERG

Alfred Rosenberg (January 12, 1893 – October 16, 1946), was a Nazi theorist and ideologue, and head of the Nazi Office of Foreign Affairs during the Third Reich. He also headed the Rosenberg Bureau, an official Nazi body for cultural policy and surveillance, between 1934 and 1945. During World War II, Rosenberg was the head of the Reich Ministry for the Occupied Eastern Territories. He is considered one of the main authors of key Nazi ideological creeds, including its racial theory, Lebensraum, and the persecution of Jews. Rosenberg was an associate of the Thule Society, the occult organization that was directly responsible for the formation of the German Workers' Party, which later became the Nazi Party. In 1930, Rosenberg published his seminal work of Nazi ideology, The Myth of the Twentieth Century.

MODERN DAY NEO-NAZISM

Neo-Nazism is a modern social and political movement that seeks to revive and reinstate the ideology of Nazism. Most adherents of Neo-Nazi ideology promote racism, ultra-nationalism, "Aryan" racial supremacy, anti-Semitism, Holocaust denial, eugenics, and the creation of Fascist nation-states in the modern world in order to constitute a "Fourth Reich." Neo-Nazism is a global phenomenon, with organizations operating through international networks around the world. The religious zealots of this modern-day cult regularly display Nazi symbols and openly express admiration for Adolf Hitler and other Nazi leaders. Ongoing Psychological Operations (Psy-Ops) waged against the public to discredit the modern freedom movement include the effort to portray Hitler and the Nazis as the "good guys" of World War II.

3 A. I didn't ask her the age.
4 Q. Other than the girl you're not sure whether 5 she was a minor, are there any girls you are sure were a

7 A. Not that I know of.
8 Q. So would it be correct that you actually 9 don't know one way or the other whether Professor
10 Dershowitz had sex with any minors other than you claim 11 yourself?
12 MS. MCCAWLEY: Objection. You can answer.
13 A. Yeah, I don't know. It would hard to say.
14 Jeffrey, like I said, had lots of young girls around all 15 the time and some of them were very young and some of 16 them were on the cusp of 18, 19. So it's very hard to 17 speculate how old exactly she was.
18 Q. So you don't know?
19 A. I don't know.
20 Q. Other than yourself, Jeffrey, Professor 21 Dershowitz and this other woman of unknown age, was 23 A. Pilot.

24 Q. That's it?
25 A. Yes.

Because Plaintiff claimed she cannot access her Microsoft account, Ms. Maxwell subpoenaed Microsoft for the documents. Plaintiff moved to quash the subpoena to obtain the information contained in the account and has refused to sign the release provided to her that would allow the production of that information under the terms of a subpoena issued to Microsoft. Menninger Decl,. Ex. B. Tellingly, Plaintiff did not issue a subpoena to EarthLink regarding this account to see if it existed, has content or could be accessed. Instead, she seeks the drastic and improper sanction of an adverse inference knowing that it is far more beneficial to her than actually receiving information from EarthLink which would reveal nothing exists.

d. There is no "Undisclosed" Account

Plaintiff next argues that she is entitled to an adverse inference based on the failure to search a phantom e-mail account that she presumes (without support and based on pure speculation) must have existed, which she has never asked about in discovery, claiming that such an account was improperly "undisclosed" and not searched. Plaintiff bases her absurd argument on statistics suggesting that someone like Ms. Maxwell "likely" had an email account in the 2000 to 2002 timeframe and a specious claim that Ms. Maxwell has never denied having an email account from 2000 to 2002. Motion at 2. Notably absent from the Motion is a single interrogatory, request for admission, or deposition question in which Ms. Maxwell was asked to provide all email addresses she has used or asked if she ever had an email account in 2000 to 2002. No such question was ever posed to Ms. Maxwell on this issue.[3] How could she possibly deny the existence of an account when she was never asked the question?

cannot access her Microsoft account because she does not remember the password and does not have sufficient personal information to provide to gain access to the account. DE 207; DE 441. This is not dissimilar to Ms. Maxwell who does not even remember the account let alone the password.

[3] By contrast, Ms. Maxwell requested that Plaintiff identify all email and social media accounts which she had used since 1998. Plaintiff provided false information, and purposefully omitted accounts that have since been discovered, one of which Plaintiff still has failed to forensically search and disclose its responsive documents.

ME WHEN PEOPLE STILL BELIEVE THAT "THEIR" SIDE OF THE GOVERNMENT IS GONNA FIX THINGS

PHILIPPE BUONARROTI

Following the Conspiracy of Equals failed coup d'état during the French Revolution, Buonarroti was imprisoned again until 1806. While in prison, he became a member of another secret society, the Philadelphes. After his release, he moved to Geneva, and resumed his revolutionary activities, starting a Philadelphe group in a local Masonic Lodge and planning a coup against Napoleon's government. In 1808, he organized the Sublime Perfect Masters, which became the first international secret society of the nineteenth century, and plotted a continent-wide revolution to establish socialist governments and abolish private property.

THE "LONG MARCH" THROUGH THE INSTITUTIONS

The Long March Through The Institutions is a slogan coined by Socialist activist Rudi Dutschke in 1967 to describe a strategy for establishing the conditions for a Socialist revolution. The Long March is to be implemented via a slow, incremental societal conversion to Socialism, which would be accomplished by Socialists entering professional institutions, and from those institutional positions, gradually exerting influence over human culture. The Long March includes the concerted effort to build up Socialist counter-institutions. It has been described as "working against the established institutions while working within them" by "learning how to use and program computers, how to teach at all levels of education, and how to utilize the mass media." The phrase "Long March" is a reference to the prolonged struggle of Chinese Communists, which included long physical marches of their armies through China. The concept of the Long March Through The Institutions is extremely similar to Antonio Gramsci's idea of a "war of position," in which he argued for the creation of a Socialist counter-hegemony.

Chamberlain was one of the forefathers of Aryanism, an ideology of racial supremacy which views the "Aryan Race" as a distinct and superior racial group which is entitled to rule the rest of humanity. The ideology of Nazism was based upon the conception of the ancient Aryan race being a superior race, or Gottmenschen ("God-men"), holding the highest position in the human racial hierarchy. The idea of Gottmenschen was the precursor to Hitler's notion of the Herrenvolk ("Master Race").

COLLECTIVISM

Collectivism is a social worldview that emphasizes the needs and goals of the group or collective over the rights and freedom of individual human beings. Collectivism exists in diametric opposition to Individualism, the social worldview that stresses the paramount importance of individual rights, freedom and property. Collectivism is the basis of ideologies such as group-think, social conformity, corporatism, religion, politics, totalitarianism and religious cults.

THE EDDA SOCIETY

With regard to the Eddas, Gorsleben believed that the Scandinavian Runes contained an inherent magical power that provided those who understood their significance with a spiritual conduit through which could flow the force that drives the Universe itself. In November 1925, Gorsleben founded the Edda Society in Bavaria, Germany. The treasurer of the society was Friedrich Schaefer, a close associate of Karl Maria Wiligut, an occultist who would come to exert great influence upon Heinrich Himmler, the future head of the Nazi Schutzstaffel.

NAZI INDOCTRINATION:
HITLERJUGEND & LEAGUE OF GERMAN MAIDENS

Even before membership in the Hitler Youth was made mandatory in 1939, German boys faced strong pressure to join. They were the subject of frequent taunts from teachers and fellow students, and could even be refused their diploma, which made it impossible to be admitted to colleges and universities. Many employers also refused to offer work to anyone who was not a member of the Hitler Youth, making it difficult for non-members to find jobs. In 1938, Hitler referred to the Nazi regime's ability to completely indoctrinate German youth, stating: "These boys and girls enter our youth organizations at ten years of age. After four years of the Young Folk they go on to the Hitler Youth, where we have them for another four years. If they are still not complete National Socialists, they go to Labor Service and are smoothed out there for another six or seven months. Whatever class consciousness or social status might still be left, the Wehrmacht will take care of that."

- "Clinton[ ] and Trump must pay for what they did to us as must the rest of the men that were involved in their seedy inner circle." Ex. 4 (RANSOME_000284);

- "[M]y friend had sexual intercourse with Clinton, Prince Andrew and Richard Branson, sex tapes were in fact filmed on each separate occasion … I eventually managed to persuade her to send me some of the video footage which she kept, implicating all three all men … I have backed up the footage on several USB sticks and have securely sent them to various different locations throughout Europe." Ex. 5 (RANSOME_000295);

- "[A]nother friend … was one of the many girls that had sexual relations with Donald Trump … She confided in me about her casual 'friendship' with Donald. Mr. Trump definitely seemed to have a thing for her and she told me how he kept going on about how he liked her 'pert nipples'. Donald Trump liked flicking and sucking her nipples until they were raw. One evening when we were showering together she showed me her nipples. They looked incredibly painful as they were red and swollen and I remember wincing when I looked at them. I also know she had sexual relations with Trump at Jeffery's NY mansion on regular occasions as I once met Jen for coffee, just before she was going to meet Trump and Epstein together at his mansion." Ex. 6 (RANSOME_000296);

Importantly, the Emails, which fatally undermine Ms. Ransome's credibility, were not available to Ms. Maxwell's counsel when she examined Ms. Ransome in the deposition in this case. For this reason, the deposition transcript standing alone leaves an incomplete and, thus, false impression of Ms. Ransome and her outrageous claims.

This Court should not allow its power to enter and modify a protective order to be manipulated so as to authorize selective disclosure of de-contextualized materials. If the Ransome deposition is made public, the Emails must also be as well.

Respectfully submitted,

Andrew G. Celli, Jr.

UKRAINIAN AZOV BATTALION

The Azov Battalion's main Brigade Patch displays the symbol of the Wolfsangel (Wolf's Anchor). The Wolfsangel was the "Gibor" Rune, the final Rune of the Armanen Futarkh Rune system of Guido von List, which represented the Norse wolf-god of destruction, Fenriz, and the Ragnarök, the End of the World. It was the main symbol used by the Nazi's Waffen-SS 2nd Panzer Division, which took part in several major battles on the Eastern Front during World War II. Even more blatantly, the Azov Battalion has openly displayed both the Nazi Swastika and the symbol of The Black Sun on both its military regalia and its propaganda publications.

" FLIGHT 11 "

No plane hit 47-story steel-framed skyscraper WTC Building 7 on 9/11, but suddenly it fell at 5:20 that day.

- Rudy Giuliani, in 7 at the time, escaped, said he was warned, won't say by who,
- Eyewitnesses report hearing bombs, experts say, "classic controlled demolition".
- Owner Larry Silverstein admitted it was imploded to TV show saying, "we pulled it".
- Bizarre! BBC reported LIVE that 7 fell 25 minutes BEFORE it actually fell. (below)
- The 9/11 Commission refused to investigate and did not include 7 in their report.
- Only 5% of Americans even know 7 fell, Zionist controlled media refused to report it.

ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI

Weishaupt once described the true purpose of the Illuminati as "nothing less than to win power and riches, to undermine secular and religious government, and to obtain the mastery of the world." He wrote: "The art of Illuminism lay in enlisting dupes as well as adepts, and by encouraging the dreams of honest visionaries or the schemes of fanatics, by flattering the vanity of ambitious egotists, by working on unbalanced brains, or by playing on such passions as greed and power, to make men of totally divergent aims serve the secret purpose of the sect. These people swell our numbers and fill our money box. They must be made to nibble at the bait. But let us beware of telling them our secrets, so that our real purpose should remain impenetrable to our inferiors." Weishaupt taught Illuminati initiates that Jesus Christ was "the first advocator of Illuminism," and Christ's secret mission was to strongly encourage his disciples to despise riches in order to prepare the world for the "community of goods that would do away with property ownership."

"The bankers will ensure we stay in debt. The pharmaceutical companies will ensure we stay sick. The weapons manufacturers will ensure we keep going to war. The media will ensure we are prevented from knowing the truth. The Government will ensure all of this is done legally."

WHAT IS A CULT?

A cult is an extremist religious belief system that is violent and dangerous to the lives, rights and freedom of those who are not its members. Cults throughout human history have traditionally used the same basic techniques to establish and maintain the loyalty of their fanatic followers. These include, but are not limited to: social isolation, conformity of thought and appearance, censorship of conflicting information, indoctrination via repetition of ideological dogma, and mental and physical trauma.

Back to Haiti and Clinton

My friend Monica Peterson reports

I've been researching this since yesterday, albeit without the best access to sources/electricity/internet, so the hard facts for me are still in progress. Nevertheless, I can still critically read & crosscheck a fair number of facts.

Here's what else I've found out. Tony Rodham (via VCS Mining) bought Morne Bossa mine in the north of Haiti in 2012. The Clinton Foundation, alongside USAID, also established the Caracol Industrial Complex in 2012, not far from Morne Bossa. Caracol is a garment exporting zone, a field site I visited in August to check out the conditions of the workers. (conclusion: working conditions okay, working wages too low & below contracts & legal minimum wage in Haiti). Caracol's main buyers are Gap, Target, and Wal-mart... all of which are apparently linked to the Clintons. So.... family money, not local livelihoods is clearly the prerogative.

I don't know yet what the connection is between the mine & the Caracol Complex, but they're suspiciously

Canadian Genocide A Government System of 'Residential Schools', 1840s - 1996, Were Killing Fields of Native Children - Victims Tell of Torture, Sexual Abuse and Mass Graves

Aboriginal children torn from their families and culture, imprisoned 10 months of the year in schools, and forbidden to speak their native language, suffered severe mental and physical punishment often described as "killing the Indian in the child".

Genocide in its cruelest form, healthy native children forced into schools and dorms infected with highly contagious tuberculosis, painfully died by the tens of thousands, treatment withheld. Untold numbers brutally murdered, their deaths never reported to their families. Sadistic Priests and nuns who ran schools of 50% death rate never charged for their horrible crimes, while government controlled media ignores the released info of 28 mass graves across Canada.

Where is the mainstream media in all this?

A. This is one, the kitchen, one in the foyer, and the pool.
Q. Okay. And would you just put an F where the foyer staircase began? And KS where the kitchen staircase began.

And you said that later another staircase was added?
A. Yeah, we rehabilitated this, you know, but you asked me how many stairs there were, to answer your question there were three.
Q. Three. So where was the third one?
A. The pool, this leads to the pool. Through the outside master bedroom you could go downstairs to the pool.

Q. One of your duties was to answer the door. Is that correct?

Q. Which door would you answer?
A. Mainly the kitchen.
Q. And why was that, why would people mainly come to the kitchen?
A. I'll say it was for practicable reasons because not to go to the main -- it was shorter because the entrance was here, so this was the driveway and we used to take into the back door of My practice is a general business practice, and I often serve as outside general counsel for start-up to mid-size businesses that have no in-house counsel. My practice includes most aspects of business operations, including formation of the business entity, drafting of operational documents, handling of contractual matters, employment matters and other issues that arise in the day-to-day operation of a business. Although the bulk of my practice is focused on commercial real estate (office and retail leasing, acquisitions/dispositions, development and finance) and residential real estate (home builder operations and M&A), I represent a diverse set of clients, including technology companies, businesses consultants, retail operators, restaurants, marketing companies and physicians.

My clients often consult me for general legal information, even when they are involved in an area of law that is not one of my practice areas. Part of my role is to refer my clients to the best lawyers and law firms available when my clients' needs exceed my expertise. I have spent years developing referral relationships for, among other areas of law, commercial litigation, intellectual property, securities law and employment law.

More Art After School at Comet Ping Pong

A few months ago I posted about Art After School, a unique weekly art program for kids age 6-12 that took place at Comet Ping Pong in October/November 2011. That four-session "sneak peak" of the program proved to be a big success. Now, Art After School is primed and ready to go for its exciting, 8-week session this winter involving Valentines for monsters, mini worm-ville, shadow machines, maps, mobiles, monsmasters and more.

Here is the schedule for the upcoming session:

MONSTER VALENTINES / MONSTERS IN LOVE. Monday, February 13: 4 – 6pm
Viewing Valentine's Day through the eyes of imaginary monsters and considering how these creatures' ideas of beauty may differ from our own, youth will create valentines either for monsters, by monsters, or both.

NO ONE KNOWS WHAT 'S BEST FOR YOU, BETTER THAN YOURSELF

ITS THE LAW ... EM

THE "LAW"

IS NOT A RATIONAL DOCUMENT
IT IS LIKE SCRIPTURE
A COLLECTION OF WORDS
WRITTEN DOWN BY DIFFERENT PEOPLE
AT DIFFERENT TIMES AND INTERPRETED BY DIFFERENT PEOPLE WHO PRETEND IT ISN'T FULL OF CONTRADICTIONS AND IMMORALITY

NEARLY EVERY LAW ON THE BOOKS HAS AN EXCEPTION FOR THE STATE

KIDNAPPING AND RANSOM ARE WRONG UNLESS YOU ARE POLICE

ZERO TRANSPARENCY FOR THE STATE BUT THE GOVERNMENT CAN WIRETAP YOU

MURDER IS WRONG UNLESS YOU ARE MILITARY

YOU CAN'T STEAL BUT THE IRS CAN

DID YOU KNOW?

Your hair may have many more functions than you are aware of?

Long hair is known as your "antenna" in many cultures due to the fact that your hair is an extension of your central nervous system and transmits vast amounts of important information to the brainstem, limbic system and neocortex. giving extra sensory capabilities and heightened awareness.

Investigation Branch #1 Main Case "Comet Ping Pong"

And of course we could just stop right there, the imagery will become more and more siniester:

Source: http://mc-wolfman.com/

Remember this?

It's Comic Ping Pong FB Avatar

It belongs to the "artist": MC Wolfman (aka Dan Betro)

He's responsible for making some of the posters for CPP events and CPP set up his wonderful artistic depiction of a guy in love with his pizza as their avatar for FB.

Still this is just "art" let's not jump to conclusions let's check some other related accounts:

Watch the other videos too and analyse them yourself

However you can't say this video and the others doesn't have particularly weird imagery and even weirder lyrics and themes.

Remember these guys are friends with Comet according to their own page and are often "performing" at their ALL AGES EVENTS.

Anyway let's cut to the chase and pass to the more shocking stuff

NAZI INDOCTRINATION:
HITLERJUGEND & LEAGUE OF GERMAN MAIDENS

Once Hitler came onto the revolutionary scene, the transition from seemingly innocuous youth movements to political entities focused on Hitler was swift. In April 1924, the Youth League of the NSDAP was renamed the Greater German Youth Movement, which became the Nazi Party's official youth organization. In July 1926, it was renamed Hitler Youth and officially became an integral part of the SA. Girls from 10 to 18 years of age were also given their own parallel youth organization, the League of German Maidens. In December 1936, the Hitler Youth Law was passed by the Nazis, making membership in the Hitler Youth mandatory for Aryan boys. In March 1939, the Youth Service Duty law conscripted all German youths into the Hitler Youth even if the parents objected. Parents who refused to allow their children to join were subject to investigation by Nazi authorities. By 1940, the Hitler Youth had grown to eight million members.

What can you do?

- Buy from small businesses and P2P markets, not state-backed corporations.
- Encourage your favorite stores to accept crypto (KYC-free).
- Don't require government ID in your business & use services that don't ask for ID.
- Offer proxy merchant services if possible (e.g. via a shell company).
- Join online or local agorist groups.

125 YEARS AGO, YOU DIDN'T HAVE TO ASK PERMISSION FROM THE GOVERNMENT TO:
• Collect rain water
• Go fishing
• Own a property
• Start a business
• Build a home
• Get married
• Hunt
• Own a weapon
• Cut hair
• Sell a product
• Protest
• Sell food
You can do virtually nothing without being extorted by government and obtaining their permission first. If you still think you're free, you're deluding yourself. You are just a free-range human living on a tax farm.

yoga: yoga

Now, therefore, complete instructions regarding yoga.

ATHA — is a MANTRA

"IN NAME ONLY" MEANS NOT THE REAL THING

ANYONE CAN CLAIM TO BE SOMETHING, BUT IN REALITY, IF THEIR THOUGHTS AND BEHAVIORS DO NOT ALIGN WITH WHAT THEY CLAIM TO BE, THEY ARE MOST CERTAINLY NOT WHAT THEY CLAIM TO BE; THEY ARE, IN FACT, INAUTHENTIC BEINGS. SADLY, MOST PEOPLE FAIL TO UNDERSTAND THIS DYNAMIC OR REALIZE THAT IT IS TAKING PLACE IN JUST ABOUT EVERY ASPECT OF HUMAN LIFE.

CLEANSING

Rowan Moonstone 05-28-89

When I cleanse a dwelling place, first I burn a good cleansing incense, like frankincense or sandalwood in the home while I prepare for the rest of the ritual. You should have in addition to the incense, a candle, a bowl of salt water and a bowl of herbs. I particularly like to use rose buds for love, lavender for preservation, rosemary for protection, and any other sweet smelling ones that appeal to you personally. If you can get them home grown, so much the better. You should proceed around the house, widdershins(counter clock wise) and cleanse the area with the salt water. Be sure to get each corner, window, door, drain, etc. Simply sprinkle a little salt water on each and ask that any evil or disruptive influences leave the place. When this is finished, proceed around the house deosil(clockwise) sprinkling the blessing herbs and invoke whatever deities or properties you wish on the home, such as peace prosperity, tranquility, etc. In the past, I have used 3 candles on the central altar. Blue, symbolizing tranquility, green for healing and prosperity, and purple for protection. Others might be pink for love, or brown for hearth and home. You and anyone who is to share the home with you should share food and drink, and don't forget to leave a little of the food and drink to take outside and return to the Earth that which has been given.

Blessed Be. Rowan

Second Degree Initiation

This is a ceremony we have used a couple of times (with variations to suit the candidate) for the second degree initiation. You will note that it borrows from many sources: Masonic, Gardnerian, Celtic, and Flight of Fancy. We've done it robed, sky clad, and some interesting combinations. Seems to work ok either way. If the candidate has done the work, the initiation ceremony is more of a public "rite of passage" or recognition of that fact... the real "initiation" is between the Gods and the candidate, and therefore cannot really be "conferred".
...Gary Dumbauld, High Priest, Hernesgaard Circle

A ceremony to recognize completion of the 2nd degree course of study

The Circle is cast as usual. All are properly prepared and purified. High Priestess and High Priest perform the Ceremony in concert. The candidate is brought into the circle by a friend and circled 3 times deosil, ending north of the altar, facing the Priest, who is standing south of the altar (where else?).

PRIEST:
"This is the time of Full Moon, a time for rekindling of light. The struggle for higher light is: That we may see it, and seeing it, work and live by it. We are about to embark upon a solemn ceremony to rekindle the light of Knowledge, the light of Will, the light of Compassion, the light of Steadfastness; we will combine these lights, and rekindle the light of Dedication in our Sister (Brother) here before us.
_____ _____ , here have you been taught the ways of the Wise, that you might count yourself among those who serve the Gods, among the brothers and sisters of the Wicca, those who are called the shapers of the universe."

PRIEST:
"I now direct your attention to the two lights upon our altar, the one representing the Sun, the God, and the High Priest; the other representing the Moon, the Goddess, and the High Priestess. The High Priest and Priestess, presiding over the coven, may be thought of as `One light to rule the day, one light to rule the night'. Since these lights are both beneficent, each having honor in its place, the Craft of the Wise does not set day against night, God against Goddess, Priest against Priestess. In the Craft, we do not define evil as a negative power, rather as the lack of light; where there is the light of Sun or Moon, God or Goddess, there can be no lack of light. Choose one, or both; place light within yourself, and nurture it."

"In times past, the Circle of Initiation was called a `Hermetic Circle', after Hermes, the ancient name for the planet Mercury." In astrology, the house of the Sun is in the zodiacal sign of the lion, which is the fifth house; the house of the Moon is in Cancer, the crab, and is in the fourth house; and the day house of the planet Mercury is in the Gemini, the Twins, and is the third house. These numbers, three, four and five, were sacred to many ancient peoples, as the dimensions of the Pythagorean Triangle, in which the square of five, twenty five, is equal to the sum of the squares of four and three, or sixteen and nine. Knowledge of this triangle was essential to builders; you are also a builder-you are building your character."

PRIESTESS:

"I now direct your attention to the several lights surrounding us, in the East, South, West, and North. Let us now examine these lights, and see what we can discern within them of human character."

"In the building of character, the Eastern light is denoted the Lamp of Beauty, and stands for accomplishments; for learning, skill in art, poetry, in song and instrumental music, in painting and sculpture. It exemplifies the art of making one's self attractive to those about one. It is an old saying that `Beauty is as Beauty does.' It causes great distress to see these noble graces of character prostituted to ignoble ends. Remember well the lesson of the Lamp of Beauty, and accept the blessing of the East."

Initiate is censed with incense from the censer which has been previously placed in the East.

PRIEST:

"The light in the South is denoted the Lamp of Life, and stands for individuality, and for energy; for fervency, for zeal and vitality. It exemplifies passions, desires and appetites. It means loves and hates, sympathies and abhorrences, and what is more than all the rest of these, it means heart and joy in the work of life. Remember well the lesson of the Lamp of Life, and accept the blessing of the South."
Initiate is circled three times with the brazier, previously placed in the South.

PRIESTESS:

"Look now to the West, and observe the Lamp of Compassion, which stands for `fellow-feeling'. Every work in life demands a price. Labor, tears, self-denial, self-recrimination, the very blood of life is sometimes the price of a truly great work. Look to your fellow travellers on the road; note with care what sacrifice they have made in their progress toward the truth; allow them their faults, commiserate with them in their failures, and rejoice with them when they succeed. Remember well the lesson of the Lamp of Compassion, and accept the blessing of the West."

Initiate is circled three times with water, and his/her hands washed in a laving bowl, previously placed in the West.

PRIEST:

"Look now to the North, and observe the lamp of obedience. The laws of the Gods are inevitable, and the more we, as children of the Gods, understand and work in accordance with them, the greater is the sum of our happiness. Obedience in character means order, the subjection to one's principles, the fear to do wrong, and the desire to learn and do right. Many would rather give charity than do justice. They swell with emotion, weep with sentiment, howl with the mob, so long as their own particular little tyranny or injustice is not touched. The Lamp of Obedience exemplifies firm will and determination of character, in spite of difficulties, dangers and losses. So also the Lamp of Obedience stands for self-control, for perseverance, and for prudence. In time of peace, prepare for war; when shines the sun, expect the cloud; and in darkness wait patiently for the coming light. `When all the sky is draped in black and beaten by tempestuous gales, and the shuddering ship seems all awreck, calmly trim once more the tattered sail, repair the broken rudder, and set again for the old determined course.' Remember well the lesson of the Lamp of Obedience, and accept now the blessing of the North."

Initiate's hands are marked with damp earth from a bowl in the North. Initiate is then led back south of the altar.

PRIESTESS:

"Of the character thus illuminated and thus guided by the lights here on the altar, and by the Lamps of Beauty, Life, Compassion and Obedience, it may be said, `Though the world perish and fall away, he/she remains.'

Initiate then takes the Oath/Obligation, kneeling.

`In the names of Arianhrod and Bran; Diana and Appolyon; Heartha and Cernunnos; and by the powers of Earth, Air, Fire and Water, I, _____ , pledge to love, worship and honor the Goddess in her many aspects; and her Consort, the Horned One, Lord of Death and Ruler of Chaos; to always be true to the Art and its secrets; to never abuse the Art or my own powers; and to keep this pledge always in my heart, in my mind, in my body and in my spirit. This I pledge, by the Circle of Life, by Cerridwen's Sacred Cauldron, and by my own hopes of a future life.'

Initiate stands. High Priestess places a necklace over Initiate's head.

PRIESTESS:

"The Circle is a place between the worlds and outside time. The Circle is also the Symbol of Life, Death, and Rebirth. We wear the necklace as a token of the Sacred Circle and as a sign that we are part of all it symbolizes."

High Priest strikes the bell three times.

PRIEST:

"Hear ye, Lady of Life and Lord of Death! Hear ye, Ancient Guardians of the Powers of Air, Fire, Water and Earth! In this place, by our hands and will, _____ _____ , known to us as _____, has been duly pledged and anointed a Priest/ess of the Second Degree!"

Pagan Ritual for Basic Use
(by Ed Fitch)

A circle should be marked on the floor, surrounding those who will participate in the ceremony. An altar is to be set up at the center of the circle. At the center of the altar shall be placed an image of the Goddess, and an incense burner placed in front of it. Behind the image should be a wand fashioned from a willow branch. Candles should be set upon the altar ... a total of five, since on is to be set at each quarter and one will remain on the altar during the rite.

Whenall the people areprepared they shallassemble within the circle. The woman acting as priestess shall direct the man who acts as priest to light the candles and incense. She shall then say:

"The presence of the noble Goddess extends everywhere,
Throughout many strange, magical,
And beautiful worlds,
To all places of wilderness, enchantment, and freedom."

She then places a candle at the north and pauses to look outwards, saying:

"The Lady is awesome,
The Powers of death bow before Her."

The personclosest to theeast takes acandle from thealtar and places it at that quarter, saying:

"Our Goddess is a Lady of Joy,
The winds are Her servants."

The personclosest tothe southtakes a candlefrom thealtar and places it at that quarter, saying:

"Our Goddess is a Goddess of Love.
At Her blessings and desire
The sun brings forth life anew."

Theperson closest tothe west takesa candle fromthe altar and places it at that quarter, saying:

"The seas are the domain of our Serene Lady,

The mysteries of the depths are Hers alone."

The priestthen takes thewand, andstarting at thenorth, draws it along the entire circle clockwise back to the north point, saying:

"The circle is sealed, and all herein
Are totally and completely apart
From the outside world,
That we may glorify the Lady whom we adore.
Blessed Be!"

All repeat: "Blessed Be!"

The priestnow holdsthe wandout in salutetowards thenorth for a moment and then hands it to the priestess, who also holds it out in salute. She motions to the group to repeat the following lines after her:

"As above, so below ...
As the universe, so the soul.
As without, so within.
Blessed and gracious one,
On this day do we consecrate to you
Our bodies,
Our minds,
And our spirits.
Blessed Be!"

Now is the time for discussion and teaching. Wine and light refreshments may be served. When the meeting has ended, all will stand and silently meditate for a moment. The priestess will then take the wand and tap each candle to put it out, starting at the north and going clockwise around the circle, while saying:

"Our rite draws to its end.
O lovely and gracious Goddess,
Be with each of us as we depart.
The circle is broken!"

A CIRCLE FOR CATHARSIS

Introduction:

One of my near and dear once spent an hour in a therapist's office kicking an innocent throw pillow around the room and screaming out rage at his abusive father. At the end of the hour, he had a broken foot -- and the first beginnings of a healed mind.

But we havelearned thatmagic works throughsymbols. Callingan object by your abuser's name and then abusing that object is sympathetic magic used for the purpose of cursing. To throw a curse is to project one's worst feelings out into the world of form, and to invoke upon oneself the inevitable karmic feedback.

It isnot our way to blast the cropsand sour the milk. Wiccan tradition and plain common sense both tell us to avoid the practice of baneful magic. But, as usual, it's not quite as easy as just saying no.

Rape and child abuse, loved ones killed by muggers or drunk drivers, emotional manipulation and betrayal, economic exploitation and dishonest office politics - people hurt and victimize other people in many different ways every day. We are not immune.

At somepoint in ourlives, probably everysingle one ofus will feel violated by some other human being. Often our feelings will be based in fact. Whether they are or not, however, we need and deserve a safe way to discharge them.

Symbolic banefulactions arealso cathartic actions.They drain and clear our poisonous feelings and allow our own emotional healing to begin. If we deny ourselves this outlet, what happens to the grief and pain and rage?

If projection is bad for us, introjection is even worse. Unreleased bad feelings are a major source of stress. In a very real sense, stress cripples and kills. Ulcers, strokes, heart attacks and more are all heavily stress-related. A simple refusal to engage in baneful magic could easily amount to punishing a victim by adding serious illness to the original harm.

I am partof the All. "Anit harm none"is about me too.Release of my feelings is my right.

At first it seems like an insoluble paradox. But the same understanding of magic that forbids projection of our bad feelings can open a safe channel for those feelings. Here's one possible form:

Preparation:

1) Understanding

Think about the Alcoholics Anonymous prayer. "Grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, the courage to change the things I can change, and the wisdom to know the difference." People of any religion can recognize the wisdom in those words. This ritual is intended to ease emotional pressure. I believe that is a step towards granting all three of those things to ourselves.

If your hurt isongoing, you must take stepsto stop it -leave the abusive relationship, begin searching for a new job, begin organizing politically to stop your oppression. What good this Circle does you will be temporary at best if you are not acting on both the magical and material planes to change the things you can change.

But some ofour pain comes from old, oldinjuries. And some of our feelings are not based on fact at all. The source of those hurts cannot be changed, but the pain can be. This particular working is to release any bad feelings, not to judge them.

Don'tworry aboutjustice. Youmay bemistaken about whohas hurt you, but nobody will be hurt by what we do here. All energy will be contained within the Circle. The object of this working is healing, not justice. You deserve this healing simply because you hurt, and even if you are mistaken.

Prevention and healing arehuman tasks; to dothem is tochange the things we can change. Justice - the evening of karmic balances - is the business of the Gods, and may take place across a span of many lifetimes. Karmic balance is a thing we cannot change.

2) Set Up

You have some decisions to make. Thefirst one is whether you will work alone or ask one or more trusted friends to witness and facilitate your working. Some of us can only let our feelings go in strict privacy. For others, the presence of people who will make sure we don't hurt ourselves or our homes removes a source of inhibition. And sometimes simply being heard is part of the release process.

Next, exactly what kind of symbolic action will release your feelings? Will kicking a throw pillow suffice, or do you need to actually make a poppet? Or just screaming may be enough. If you want to work with a physical symbol, prepare it in advance, and be sure not to use anything you will want to keep after the rite or ever use again.

Figure out whetheryou can either casta Circle toinclude your bathroom, or leave a cast Circle for a period of time. This will depend on your particular training. If possible, have a warm scented tub waiting for you. If not, a basin of warm scented water and a washcloth within easy reach just outside of your Circle will suffice. Also, a ritual meal should be prepared and waiting outside of Circle, and this should include something green and growing - I favor sprouts - and something sweet.

Procedure:

1) Waning moon is a good time for this Circle, and the Dark of the Moon is even better. Cast the Circle and invoke the Watchers in your usual manner. Call on the Crone, on She who weeds and prunes and disposes of the obstructive and unnecessary.

2) Just inside the Circle, like the membrane in an eggshell, cast a grounding shield. One possible image for this shield would be a black absorptive chain link fence, supported at regular intervals by fence posts that are lightning rods. Whatever happens within this space will be contained and grounded.

3) Make clear to yourself what wound you seek to drain. Say it out loud, even if you are alone. Recall what happened to you in detail and let the feelings grow strong.

4) Now, let go of your feelings. Do whatever will help you release what is in you. Beat on a pillow or rip up a doll. Scream till you cry. Don't stop till you are emptied. Then fling the thing you used as a symbol out of your Circle.

5) When you are sure you are all done, all drained, contract the shield into a tight ball in the center of the Circle. As it contracts, it will gather all the negative energy from the Circle. Ground it. Affirm that you are sending this energy to the fire at the heart of the Earth - to Jarnsaxe or to Pele - to be purified in that blast furnace and cycled to wherever strong energy is needed. Know that what you now let go is gone. Affirm this out loud.

6) Wash or bathe in a ritual manner, feeling the last traces of your bad feelings dissolve away. If others are present, allow them to wash and serve you.

7) Rest a few minutes. Feel the peace of emptiness.

8) Then invoke the Maiden's energy for new beginnings. Have your ritual feast, and otherwise indulge your senses. Gentle and joyful music would be effective, and you may want to switch to a sweeter smelling incense. This is a time to dream dreams and plan plans. You have removed an energy drain from your life, now you will be able to ... ?

9) Thank and dismiss whatever Beings you have called on, throughout the whole ritual. Close your Circle as usual. Do not do any other kinds of working or worship within this particular Circle.

Follow Through:

Thefinal part of any effective magical working is "acting in accordance" on the material plane. By doing this, we give the magic a channel through which to manifest. For this working, there are three forms of follow through, and all are important.

1) Remember that painful feelings are partly habitual. Acting in accordance with magic to banish such feelings requires you to stop feeding the habit. Don't talk about the pain with anybody until at least the second full moon after the working. This gives the habit a chance to fade out. As much as you can, eliminate the topic from your internal dialogue as well. When you notice yourself dwelling on the old pain, gently and firmly change the subject.

Thinking aboutaction tochangeyour lifeinthe hereandnow is perfectly OK. The problem is reiteration of old feelings of frustration and helplessness that actually impede change.

2) If the hurtful situation is current and ongoing, continue with any steps you were taking to change the things you can change. In fact, you will probably find you have more energy than you did before to devote to your projects.

3) Be sure to use some of your newly freed emotional energy to reward yourself. Take time for friendship, love, and pleasure. The object of the exercise is to clear space for the enjoyment of life, so start right now.

OPENING (Ending) THE CIRCLE

The High Priestess goes to each of the four directions in turn, and draws a Banishing Pentacle, saying,

Guardians of the East (South, West, North), Powers of Air (Fire, Water, Earth), we thank you
For joining in our circle
And we ask for your blessing
As you depart
May there be peace between us
Now and forever. Blessed be.

She raises her athame to the sky and touches it to the earth, then opens her arms and says,

The circle is open, but unbroken,
May the peace of the Goddess
Go in your hearts,
Mercy meet, and merry part.
And merry meet again. Blessed be.

Circle Casting
(High Priestess)
(Spoken while harvesting imaginary grain in perimeter of circle)

Birds circle hungrily overhead
As through harvested fields we tread.
The smokehouse fires and burning leaves
Their scents do spiral and interweave.
Ripples circle in our wake
As rice we harvest from a lake.
The dusty Earth now shorn of locks
Swirls as pass our fattened flocks.
Much bounty may our harvest see
As we cast, so mote it be!

Responsorial: So mote it be!

Quarter Invocations
(High Priest)

Facing East: Guardians of the watchtower of the east, we do summon, stir, and call thee up to protect us in our rite. Come to us now on the cool breath of Autumn's sigh which heralds the advent of Winter and the close of harvest time. Breathe into us the spirit of the pure joy of life. So mote it be!

Responsorial: So mote it be!

Facing South: Guardians of the watchtower of the south, we do summon, stir, and call thee up to protect us in our rite. Come forth from the cook fires and smokehouses where food is being made ready for the coming cold months. Kindle within us the flame of spiritual awakening. So mote it be!

Responsorial: So mote it be!
